Montgomery's orange and black monoplane fits some descriptions of the bombing ship, even to its number, 508-M, G. C. Martin, Bruce Stone and H. Black, representing Kentucky mining companies upon whose properties the bombs were dropped, said here today they saw an orange-hued plane, number 508-M, fly over Providence during the bombing. The plane, they said, also was sighted at Hopkinsville, Ky., and Shawnee Town and Harrisburg, Ill.

They also said their investigation here revealed Montgomery had taken off about 4:15 a. m. and returned at 8 a. m. The bombing occurred between those hours.

Jackson county authorities were reluctant to discuss the possibility of additional arrests or the possible motive for the bombing. The outrage was attributed in general, however to strife resulting from efforts to unionize the Kentucky coal field.

Montgomery, who is married, has been a commercial pilot here in recent years. He gained considerable publicity some months ago when he talked of a Rome-to-Dallas, Texas, flight this summer. He was not a miner or affiliated with any of the factions of the mine union, but a few years ago worked for his father, who operated a coal mine between Desoto and Elkville, Illinois.

ENDURANCE PLANE IS APPROACHING NEW RECORD

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 12—(AP)—Dale (Red) Jackson and Forest O'Brine expect to be recrowned kings of the endurance fliers tomorrow, but they don't intend to return to earth for the ceremonies, not for another two or thre weeks anyway.

Their immediate goal, that of dethroning Kenneth and John Hunter, the Illinois farm boys who set a 554-hour record at Chicago last month, was just over the horizon tonight. They had been up 540 hours at 7:11 p. m. (c.s.t.). If their monoplane Greater St. Louis is still droning over Lambert-St. Louis field at 8:52 a. m. tomorrow they will equal the Hunter brothers' mark, and an hour later the new record will be chalked up.

"The voice of the little yellow and orange bungalow," as O'Brine has dubbed the endurance plane in speaking to the ground crew over short-wave length transmitter, served notice today the airmen have no thought of quitting the sky soon.

WARNER BROS., INC., MAY NEED NEW FINANCING

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)—Wall street brokerage circles believed today Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., had become the second large motion picture concern within a year to find itself faced with the necessity of new financing under rather unsettled stock market conditions because of rapid expansion.

Warner Bros. stock, which has declined sharply on the New York stock exchange since directors omitted the quarterly dividend of $1 last week, shot up $4 in today's market; an unconfirmed report that a new banking affiliation had been arranged prompted professional traders short of the stock to cover their contracts. Its net gain was reduced later to 75 cents. The stock was an active feature of the market, 171,000 shares changing hands.

WITNESSES BLAME TANKER PINTHIS FOR COLLISION

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 12—(AP)—Sixteen witnesses in the trial of Captain Archibald H. Brooks, master of the Merchants' and Miners Steamer Fairfax, today blamed the tanker Pinthis for the collision of the two ships off the coast of Massachusetts June 10, in which 50 lives were lost.

Captain Brooks pleaded not guilty to charges of negligence and inefficiency in the wreck that sunk the Pinthis, as the trial opened before United States steamboat inspectors this morning.

UNABLE TO LOCATE BOY WHO FIRED FATAL SHOT

WATERBURY, Aug 12—(AP)—All efforts on the part of city and county authorities to track down those responsible for discharging a fusillade of rifle shots, in the woods off Hill street, August 3, resulting in mortally wounding Mrs. Olga Shultz, of Middletown, a visitor here, have proved unsuccessful. Police have rounded up several boys of that neighborhood and have confiscated six rifles but no evidence upon which the youths could be held has been developed.

GRAND JURY FINDS EARL CARROLL'S "VANITIES" DECENT

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)—Earl Carroll's "Vanities" may have looked indecent to a policeman but they don't to the New York county August grand jury.

The grand jury took just five minutes today to decide not to indict Carroll and three of the cast of his current musical revue on charges of giving an indecent performance.

FATAL EXPLOSION IN PULPWOOD MASH

BERLIN, N. H., Aug. 12—(AP)—One man lost his life and five others were critically burned in an explosion of pulpwood mash, which wrecked part of the Brown company mill, here today. Another man was probably buried under the wreckage of sixty foot brick walls.

Sulphite fumes released by the explosion drove 300 other workmen on the night shift from the plant and made impossible for hours any search of the ruins.

A force of 30 men had just been relieved by the night shift of 11 at one of nineteen 54-foot high digestors in the plant where 24 cords of wood were being cooked under pressure to produce a mash used in the manufacture of rayon when the explosion occurred.

The digestor, a great covered metal tank, blew up with such force that the brick walls on either side were blown out. Luckily, tanks on either side were not under pressure and did not explode.

Of the 11 men beside the tank only three escaped the effect of the explosion. Thomas Mahern, 63, apparently died instantly. William Hallett, taken to the St. Louis hospital with five others, was critically burned.

UNIFORM CHILD LABOR LAW BEING FORMULATED

CHICAGO, Aug. 12—(AP)—A uniform child labor law was being formulated in Chicago today, but it held no threat for the little chap who carries your golf clubs, the lad who shines your shoes or the one from whom you buy your newspaper.

So-called street trades were exempted from the suggested statute being considered by the national conference of commissioners on uniform state laws, holding its fortieth annual session. There were too many pleas from the "boys who made good"—business and professional men who "remembered when."

The statute would, however, remove another familiar figure from the streets at night. It would prohibit persons under 21 from being messengers between 8 p. m. and 6 a. m. Moreover, it would put a taboo on the performances of child prodigies who appear before the public as violinists, actors and what-not.

VIOLENCE IN ANTI-SALT TAX CAMPAIGN IN INDIA

AHMEDABAD, India, Aug. 12—(AP)—Violence in the anti-salt tax campaign of Mahatma Gandhi's followers broke out again in India today after having for many weeks been a dormant issue. Seventy-four arrests were made.

Armed police broke up a parade of civil disobedience volunteers who offered for sale contraband salt wheeled in a hand cart through the main streets.

The salt was confiscated and several volunteers were injured in a police charge.

The trouble reached its climax tonight in a police charge against a crowd that refused to disperse from around a police post. Several more Indians were reported injured.

KING CAROL OF RUMANIA TO BE CROWNED OCTOBER 15

PARIS, Aug. 12—(AP)—Dispatches from Bucharest to the Havas Agency, today reported that King Carol of Rumania, would "in principle" be crowned on October 15.

The announcement was said to be semi-official and was interpreted as evidence that the matrimonial difficulties of King Carol and Queen Helen had been smoothed over.

The queen's consent is said to be the result of conferences at Sinaia between the king, Premier Maniu and M. Tutilescu, Rumanian minister to London.

ELKS LACK CARS FOR CHILDREN'S OUTING TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, August 12—About 40 more cars were still needed tonight, the eve of the Elks' annual outing at Crescent beach Wednesday to over 1,000 children. There was some fear that unless the shortage of cars was made good overnight some 200 kiddies would be forced to remain at home while their more fortunate friends embarked for the big party. The only other recourse would be a duplication of trips to the beach which is over 40 miles distant. The check-up by John H. Wilcox and his committee today showed 113 private cars and five buses available.

The vehicles will line up on both sides of Pleasant street at 8 o'clock Wednesday morning. The children will be lined up in Elks' Park, given instructions and tags and then marched to the cars to which they have been assigned. The cards will move up as soon as lied. The cavalcade will be led by Past Exalted Ruler Maurice S. Leonard and will be under escort of officers from the Stafford Springs barracks.

A new route to the beach will be followed this year to avoid the traffic in Norwich and New London. The caravan this year will go through Columbia, Hebron and Colchester, over the New London turnpike to Flanders, outside of New London, and then to the beach.

The children will spend the entire day at the beach, enjoying bathing, games, luncheon and refreshments. The arrival back home is scheduled for 6 o'clock. Dr. S. J. Turcotte, four nurses and a company of life guards captained by James H. Hurley will be on hand. The children enrolled are from the ages of seven to 11 years. Today the F. H. Kingston & Co., through Manager Edward B. Flagg, offered the Elks' committee the use of a 45-passenger coach which the company chartered for the third consecutive year for this purpose.

Inspections of automobile equipment conducted here today by Inspector Levins O. Howlett of the motor vehicle department, in conjunction with the Save-a-Life campaign, proved most effective. At times cars were inspected at the rate of about one each three minutes, Inspector Howlett being assisted in the work by Motorcycle Officer Arthur M. Hurley of the police department. Many local people, including Alderman John P. Carlsen and Herbert I. Sanderson of the police committee, drove to West Main street where the inspections were held, to request a check-up of their equipment. Those meeting with the requirements were given O. K. cards. Others were given notices to have defective equipment remedied, these notices to be signed and returned to the state department after the repairs had been made. Only two arrest for failure to have proper equipment, were reported during the day. Brief conversations with a number of the drivers indicated that a large percentage had had brakes and lights checked-up in garages since announcements of the forthcoming inspection were made. To substantiate this the local garages reported a thriving business in this type of work during the past few days.

Inspector Howlett will be in Norwich Wednesday to conduct a thorough check-up there.

Norwich Rotarians who come under the category of golfers, were guests of the Willimantic Rotary club at the regular luncheon in the Nathan Hale hotel this noon. During the meeting Raymond A. Parker announced the teams for a return golf match at the Willimantic Country club during the afternoon. James P. Mustard displayed a beautiful silver loving cup which the local club is offering. The cup, which replaces one offered by Norwich and captured by the local golfers this year, is to be played for once each year, alternately at Norwich and Willimantic, and will become the property of the club winning it three times. In addition to about a dozen Norwich Rotarians there were introduced as guests today Ronald M. Cooke of Bridgeport, formerly of this city and Ray Shielder of New Haven, who were accompanied by Raymond E. Shepard, and Judge Frank H. Foss, honorary member of the club. Special singing was led by Song Leader Ralph H. Gibson. President Louis A. Kingsbury was in charge. At the conclusion of the matches this afternoon the visiting players were guests of the local golfers at a dinner served at the club house.

DANIELSON STATE POLICE START CHECKING CARS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Aug. 12 — On orders from headquarters at Hartford, state officers of the Danielson barracks today began checking up motor cars as to the efficiency of their equipment, particuarly brakes. State Officers Elton Nolan, H. Theodore Strand and Henry Mayo were checking cars at North Main street and Westcott road for a time this morning, and this afternoon state officers were operating over Brooklyn way.

The officers have a chart showing how effective brakes should be in operation at certain speeds, the requirements being that the brakes be able to stop the car in a given number of feet for each particular speed.

Where only minor faults are found car owners are directed to have the necessary repairs or adjustments made, but where faults are serious a summons to court may be expected. Up to late this afternoon it had not been found necessary to issue any summons. Scores of cars were checked by the officers during the course of the day.

Farmers Field Day Today.

There was the prospect today of a great gathering of farmers from all parts of the county at the fairgrounds in Brooklyn Wednesday for the annual field day of the Windham County Farmers' association. County Agent Raymond Wing of Putnam and town directors have been busy for some time since getting ready for the event and doing much to promote it, and given good weather they are certain that the attendance will be all they desire.

The field day not only will give the agriculturists of the county a chance to get together and talk things over, but it also will afford them opportunity to have a real day off, enjoy a clambake, hear some interesting addresses and enjoy the entertainment that will be provided for them.

Many Cars From Other States.

A compiler of such data handed this list of states in for publication this afternoon to indicate what the tourist travel, measured by registrations on cars, is representative of in a few hours in Danielson these August days: Ohio, Illinois, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Wisconsin, Alabama, New York, Pennsylvania, Vermont, New Mexico, Texas, Virginia, Maryland, Minnesota, Iowa, California and Indiana. None of the New England states are included, as being so commonly seen here. There might be added to the list the District of Columbia, a registration also noticed here today. To many the significance of this is that people from every section of the nation are making New England their summer playground.

As indicating how appreciative owners of property just over borough boundaries are of the sidewalk work that is being done by the borough is the expression of their wish that the borough might build them walks on the 50-50 basis of costs that prevails within the limits of the borough, which pays half the expense. This is not coveting, but real appreciation of what a fine improvement the walks are. People generally realize what a great boon the walks will be when rough winter weather comes again.

An abundance of native sweet corn is coming into the local market, some of it brought direct from the farms and delivered from house to house. It is of excellent quality and very reasonable in price.

The public will be given a musical treat Wednesday evening on Davis park. Leo J. L'Homme post, American Legion, is sponsoring the affair, which has been made possible through the liberality of merchants and other public-spirited persons. A 15-piece band under the direction of Clinton Ellison will give a concert, the first of the season on the park, by the way, and there will be selections by a quartet of professional singers brought here from Boston. Members of the Legion today expressed the hope that many hundreds of people will improve the opportunity to come to the park and enjoy the music.

Old residents here are recalling that a very considerable number of men have made long records of service in the employ of the Quinebaug mills, one of the oldest textile industries in this part of the state. This is recalled by the retirement from employment with the concern of Benjamin Russell, of the West Side, at 83 years of age. For more than 45 years he has been the second hand in the ring spinning department of the plant, and has a splendid record of service.

Edgar Mathieu of Dayville, a patient at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam for the past fortnight, has recovered in such degree from an accident in which he was injured that he will be able to sit up for the first time on Wednesday, and it is expected that he will be able to return to his home in another week. Mr. Mathieu sustained a fracture of the skull when he somehow fell off the rear end of an ice truck on which he was riding, and working, over in Goodyear, two weeks ago next Thursday. He has no recollection whatsoever as to how the accident happened.

The drought hasn't been so terrible in its treatment of corn in this section after all. One heard today of corn growing in one of Byron Lewis' fields that has attained a height of 13 feet, and is in prime condition.

From a day last week when a thermometer in the business section registered 103 degrees to this morning, when Chief John McFarland made a reading of 44 degrees on a thermometer in the business section, shortly before 6 a. m., there has been a variation of 59 degrees in temperature here.

One of the less pleasant things to think about that is just ahead is the coming obligation to pay borough taxes, some time during the month of September.

On the westerly side of the highway, starting from the schoolhouse in Wauregan, concrete has been put in a distance of upwards of two miles to a point about opposite the entrance to the grounds of the Danielson Rod and Gun club on the Danielson-Wauregan state highway. That side of the highway likely will be completed to where it is to end by the close of the present week. Incidentally, the route is a good one to avoid right now if one be traveling with an automobile.

There was something of a kick today in listening to men tell about starting fires in heaters in their homes, where electric fans buzzed hopelessly the past week in an effort to keep the temperature down.

Howard Franklin, a teller at the Danielson Trust company, is off duty for his annual vacation, which ends with the present week.

PUTNAM

ABOUT 50 APPLICANTS TO BE MADE VOTERS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Aug. 12.— The applications of about 50 non-partisan voters of the town, submitted for caucus enrollment, were received at a meeting of the registrars of voters, which was held at the town hall on Church street. Herman G. Carver, republican registrar, said today that the number of new electors gained by each of the major parties was about even.

Voters who made formal declaration of their party affiliation did so in order that they may participate in the caucus elections which will be held in September, a few weeks in advance of the October town elections.

FORMER KILLINGLY COACH BEING SUED FOR DIVORCE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Aug. 12.—In a writ filed with Curtis Dean, clerk of the superior court, Mrs. Doris Power Brundage instituted divorce proceedings against her husband, Ralph D. Brundage, of Danielson. Mrs. Brundage claims West Hartford as her residence.

Brundage, who was made a defendant in the action when process was served on him a few days ago by Deputy Sheriff Charles E. Ayer, of Dayville, is well known in Danielson and Killingly where he has resided for the past few years. He is a former coach of athletics at Killingly high school and is employed in the sales division of the Danielson branch of the Connecticut Light and Power company.

The writ charges the defendant with having been unfaithful to the marriage vows on divers days between July 1, 1929, and the date the writ was filed. Mrs. Brundage, in her complaint, names a Miss Alison Adams of Killingly, also known as Alison Breeley, as co-respondent.

A clause in the writ mentions that the plaintiff and the defendant have a minor child, Norma Frances Brundage, who is 5 years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. Brundage were married on October 24, 1924, and have resided continously in this state for three years.

Mrs. Brundage petitions the court for a divorce, custody of her child and alimony.

Work on the reconstruction of the municipal water system is well underway at this time. A trench extending from the water storage tanks on Oak hill to the intersection of School and Oak streets has been dug and workmen are about to begin excavation for the School street pipe line. Several hundred feet of pipe have been laid along the Oak street route and as soon as sufficient excavation has been made on School street, pipe laying will be immediately started. As it is the aim of the water commission to do as much of the work as is possible before the arrival of cold weather, a large force of men are at work on the project.

On Providence street, on the west side of the Quinebaug river, another section of street has been opened up for pipe laying purposes. This time the work is being done by the Connecticut Light and Power company, which is laying a large gas main in order to meet the increased demands for gas in that section of the city. For the time being, only one way traffic is permitted on Providence street, between Main and Church streets. Traffic in an easterly direction is diverted over Church street, through the center of the city and out School street. Chief R. E. Thurston, of the power company, said today that it is expected the work will be completed shortly in order that the thoroughfare may be opened as soon as possible.

Miss Gertrude Warner, of South Main street, a writer of children's books and a member of the faculty at the Israel Putnam school, who underwent a major surgical operation at the Day Kimball hospital Saturday, was reported today as resting as comfortable as could be expected.

With The Civilian Soldiers

The company had its first rain in barracks on August 7th and were much relieved to find the roof did not leak and also found it a little more pleasant than in tents.

The company and the military police put on a little entertainment for the members of both companies in the military police barracks which are just across the way. There were recitations, solos, imitations and peppy numbers by the M P. orchestra. The greater part of the M. P.'s were not able to enjoy the program as they were sent out on a riot call. The M. P.s are very strict and do not allow any speeding within the camp area. The speed limit is 15 miles per hour.

For the last four nights the division has been entertained with bouts in front of the division headquarters building. There have been from ten to fifteen bouts every night and have proved very interesting to watch. They have had both amateur and professional fighters in the ring.

First Class Private James Rowe has unfortunately fallen sick and has been transferred from his quarters to the base hospital. Quite a few of the men have been reporting for sick call each morning. The greater part of the trouble has been blisters on the feet and has been due to not knowing the proper method of caring for the feet.

On Friday afternoon a divisional review was held. All men of the division passed in review except the Headquarter company and the M. P. There were approximately 6,000 men in the review.

First Class Private Anthony Michon and Private Woznicki had relatives and friends visiting them during the week.

Up to recent years it was chiefly a port for small inter-island steamers and for the exportation of sugar by freighters, but more recently has been made a port of call for large ocean-going passenger liners on their way from Honolulu to Hilo, port of the Island of Hawaii.

EMERGENCY RAIL RATES

What can be of immediate value toward drought relief in the sections where it is needed is the action taken by the interstate commerce commission in issuing an emergency order that sweeps aside all obstacles in the way of railroads making rate reductions without the ordinary preliminaries that are required in the regular course of events. These reductions will aid in moving cattle out of regions where the drought has prostrated that side of the farming industry, and will make outside hay and grain cheaper in districts where home-grown feeds have been destroyed.

There was prompt action following the promulgation of the order. Within an hour two lines were reported ready to transport hay from Kansas City to Indiana for half the usual rate. Moreover, the order was based directly upon another road's application for permission to reduce the charge fifty per cent for hauling cattle out of a stricken southern district. Other lines indicated their willingness to make similar reductions, but expressed willingness to await word from President Hoover, believing joint action more effective.

The president shows his appreciation of the seriousness of the situation by giving up his proposed western trip in order that he may keep in close touch with relief measures.

Without the co-operation of the railroads, this emergency help would not be possible, and the order which has been issued is believed to set a precedent. In emergencies the interstate commerce commission may waive the 30-day notice required when railroads change rates voluntarily, but reduction in rates cannot be ordered against the carriers' opposition except after complete investigation and hearings have been conducted. But in the present instance, there has been unanimity on the part of the railroads and the commission in the desire to lend a hand to drought sufferers and their prompt action sets an example for other public and private agencies.

RIVALRY AT THE POLES

Frozen regions in the arctic and antarctic regions have acquired a new value and significance as to national ownership because the eyes of the nations have ben opened by air transportation. This point of view was brought to attention in one of the addresses made at the institute of politics at Williamstown, where P. E. Corbett, dean of law at McGill university at Montreal, advised his hearers that Canada had prior rights in all the expanse lying between the Dominion proper and the north pole, due to early discoveries by Great Britain. More than two years ago, when Admiral Byrd was about to proceed south for exploration, the government at London informed the United States that facilities she possessed there would be available to help the American party. It was a friendly gesture, but served to register the British claim to sovereignity in the Ross and Falkland areas.

It is not that there is any thought that the polar expanses could be colonized in the usual way, but the awakened interest in the arctic is because there is a possible promise that it may be the future highway of the inter-hemisphere air traffic. The reasoning is not vague, for the shortest route between Great Britain and the western part of Canada is across the northern latitudes. The same observation applies to the northwestern section of the United States and the north of Europe. Wrangel island, Spitzenbergh, northern Greenland and Iceland are all of great potential value as bases for aircraft.

Our state department is pondering the question of formally claiming title to new territory found in the antarctic by Admiral Byrd. We also have been active in arctic exploration, but original discoveries of land there, by Americans have been few. Meanwhile, the signs of rivalry in the polar wastes are multiplying. One solution that has been advanced as a preventive of friction is the internationalization of both the arctic and the antarctic. Under that plan, they, like the oceans, would be barred to no power for carrying purposes.

HELPING MEXICO OUT

For the third time in less than a decade, the foreign debts of Mexico are to be pared down substantially and the terms and conditions of repayment made more liberal. After weeks of amicable negotiations, officials of the Mexican government and representatives of international banking firms have signed an agreement at the New York office of a prominent banking house, whereby debts in default both as to interest and sinking fund requirements, if not also as to principal, are reduced. In addition, certain Mexican commitments are waived, and arrangements are made for the reorganization and refinancing of the Mexican national railways, now declared to be insolvent. The concessions thus made will release $25,000,000 for expenditure in betterments.

In the negotiations the good faith of the Mexican government was not questioned, while the discussions were carried on along the line of the country's present and future ability to discharge its obligations. Its delegates satisfied the bankers that its several defaults had been the consequences of insurrections and emergency defense measures, this applying also to the railroads.

No new loan is said to be contemplated at this time, but before long Mexico will need capital and credit and its is with this view that the present agreement has been made.

WORLD MOTORIZATION

There are few corners of the world which the motor car has not reached. The federal department of commerce makes it known that statistics showed last year one motor vehicle in use for every 55 persons on the earth. In the United States the ratio is one car for every 4.5 persons, so that the world as a whole is far from being completely motorized. Manifestly, however, a beginning toward world motorization has been made, and the prospects for the future insure keen competition among motor car manufacturers.

Unfortunately, some countries have adopted special measures to discourage the importation of American motor cars and trucks. Resentment due to features of the new tariff have brought retaliatory measures. The whole disturbance is one more manifestation of a narrow and uneconomic nationalism. Instead of denying entrance to one another's products, countries that are advancing industrially and technically should co-operate to develop potential markets. Motorization of the world is not an idle dream but a feasible objective. There is room for all types of cars; the question is just how the right customers may be reached.

Wherever the standard of living is rising and the purchasing power of the average person is on the increase a demand for motor cars exists or can be created easily. In a number of regions in the last two or three years there has been witnessed a remarkable increase in the popularity and demand for such vehicles. Travel and advertising account for that phenomenon. What has been accomplished in some sections can be done in others.

There is no reason but to expect that a notable revival in automobile sales will come in the return of normal business activity. That revival should not be retarded by a wasteful and shortsighted tariff war. Against that President Hoover has yet to prepare by reorganization of the tariff commission for modification of excessive duties. Meanwhile, the method of American manufacturers to meet retaliatory measures by foreign nations will probably be a greater use of foreign factories which can be operated by foreign cheap labor, with its resultant damage to American industry.

SCAPA FLOW

There is something of sentimental interest in the appearance of the name of Scapa Flow in the news dispatches when a battleship is raised from the ooze of this inland bay. The name came into world-wide attention in 1919 when the German fleet was interned in the Orkneys, off the coast of Scotland. The circumstances will be recalled.

The British established their chief naval base in this expanse of water, ten by fifteen miles in extent, protected by islands and easily fortified. It was natural at the end of the war, when the German fleet was taken, to intern the fleet in a harbor supposed to be safe. But the British failed to protect the boats after they had taken them. The crews scuttled the ships and the great fleet sank to the bottom of the sea.

For years the work of bringing the sunken ships to the surface has been carried on. Five vessels have been salvaged, the Bremen, the Kaiser, the Seydlitz, the Moltke, and now the Hindenberg. The last named is a cruiser of 28,000 tons. Twice before she had been brought to the surface, but could not be managed, but now she is held securely there and great is the rejoicing thereat.

It is not expected that this great battle cruiser will ever again be used in a navy. She will probably be broken up and junked. There must be an aggregate of great value in the immense hulk and the machinery. Costing millions in the first place and calling for a big expenditure in raising her from the bottom of the sea, she is still worth something over the salvage cost.

LILLIAN'S THANKSGIVING

Lillian was extremely lonesome at college. Carrying a heavy course and forced to toil for several hours daily in a sorority house for her room and board, she had little pleasure. Other girls there, none prettier than she, had nice dates and enjoyed parties, but they had lovely clothes and time to spare from their tasks and studies.

Lillian struggled between desire to complete her education and temptation to go home and stay with her parents and younger sisters in the village of Winfield. She could help her mother and support herself by clerking in the general store, as she had done before she went away to school. But there was no future in Winfield, the Douglas house was small and was becoming more and more crowded as the sisters grew older, and every one should have more education than she had.

The question of what to do kept her awake nights. She would go home for the Thanksgiving week-end and talk with her father and mother.

The evening before she was to leave for Winfield her father telephoned.

"Don't take the train in the morning," he said. "Mr. Carleton's boy is in Evanston and will call for you at 9 o'clock to drive you home."

Mr. Carleton? Why, he was the kindly old banker at Lucas, the county seat, down fifteen miles from Winfield. Lillian's father did some business with him, which no doubt explained the arrangement. How good of Mr. Carleton and his boy, and what a thrill it would be to be driven the hundred miles.

Lillian, holding tightly to her shabby suitcase, was out in front when the Carleton car drove up. The driver, a clean-cut youth, hopped out, cap in hand, smiling.

"Miss Douglas?"

"Y-e-s."

"All right, let's go!" He yanked open the door, seized the case and tossed it on the back seat, opened the front door and helped Lillian into the front seat, all in one motion, it seemed. In another moment he had trotted around to the other side, leaped in and stepped on the gas. Skillfully he maneuvered through the traffic and soon they were out in the open.

And this was Mr. Carleton's boy; handsome, rugged, capable, so courteous, she thought, and she experienced burning cheeks when he occasionally cast sidelong glances from gray eyes upon her. Then she discovered he was looking at her often in the mirror. Confusion made her desperately uncomfortable, but she was not displeased.

They sped along at sixty miles an hour. She admired the deft manner in which he passed other machines going the same direction and took the curves. He apparently loved speed, but he was thoroughly careful. The ride would soon end at the rate they were traveling, and Lillian was sorry.

"Beautiful day," he observed.

"Very beautiful," she agreed, shyly.

"Like it at college?"

"Yes—and—no; you see, I am so occupied there I do not have time to go out much."

"Attractive as you are, you should have many opportunities." He was slowing the car down and met her eyes. No, he was not trying to be flippant. Instead he fairly radiated honesty and earnestness.

"It was kind of you to bring me home, Mr. Carleton," she said, by way of changing the subject.

"Carleton? Carleton?" he exclaimed. "Why, my name's not Carleton; it's Ray Harrison."

"But I thought you were Mr. Carleton's boy."

"It's just a fatherly whim of his to call me his boy. I am his chauffeur; had to take the car in for repairs, but I am quitting the first of the year so I can go back to college."

"Yes?" she said, for want of knowing what else to say.

It took two hours for them to travel the last forty miles.

"And what are you thankful for this morning?" Lillian's mother asked her at Thanksgiving day breakfast.

"For college! You see, I plan on getting more relaxation. I've been working too hard. And Ray, Mr. Carleton's boy, said so, too!"—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—That wartime wisecrack of the late Uncle Joe Cannon—that army officers in Washington wore spurs to keep their feet from slipping off their desks—might have added meaning in this year of 1930.

Spurs still are largely the order of the day when general staff officers show up in uniform, as they must do at least once every 30 days.

That is a relic of the time when General Pershing was chief of staff after the war and concerned himself with the business of getting the war department soldiery back into civilian attire.

Under new regulations promulgated this year, general staff officers do not rate mounts except "with troops."

That means that the portion of the staff in Washington must keep up their own horses if they desire to do their "Teddy Roosevelt physical" once a week on horseback.

Time was, only a year or so ago, when the regulations read that officers rating mounts at Uncle Sam's expense included all "officers above the grade of captain, whatever their arm, service or bureau, except members of the dental corps."

That included the judge advocate corps, the adjutant-general's lot, the inspector general and his outfit, the quartermasters, finance ocers, doctors, except dentists, and the ordnance corps.

Most officers have privately owned mounts. Congress got after that a year ago, however, and cut the number of privately owned horses which even regularly mounted officers might board free at government stables from two to one each.

That was a part of the army economies resulting from President Hoover's concern over military costs a year ago. The new regulation as to who rates horses is another.

Still the spurs persist. It is very rarely you see a high ranker of the military in uniform in Washington who isn't wearing boots and spurs.

Not long ago at navy fleet operations staged for President Hoover quite a party of army men were navy guests aboard one of the big airplane carriers. They came in uniform, of course.

And incidental to getting on and off the huge craft, they bobbed about in small boats at sea, rode on tugs, destroyers and a variety of naval vessels.

Those twinkling spurs on their heels in that sea-going setting looked a little odd, but the navy never cracked a smile.

Stories That Recall Others

Water Wanted

Cooper had been standing in the coal cellar with his fingers glued firmly over a leak in the water main.

Suddenly he heard his wife's voice. "George," she cried, "you can take your hands off that leak now."

"Thank heaven!" replied her husband. "Has the plumber come?"

"No, but the house is on fire."

Doubtful

Albert, fresh from the city, surveyed the country dinner and remarked rather cynically:

"Well, if that's butter, pass it to me, but we have it in square chunks at home."

YOUR HEALTH

You and Your Physician
By Albert A. Getman,
Syracuse, N. Y.
From Gorgas Memorial Institute,
Washington, D. C.

Recent medical progress has been accomplished by a tremendous educational campaign, which has for its object "sensible information for the people regarding matters of health."

This systematic effort has been developed by national and state public health departments, private foundations and charitable organizations. It has been productive of much good. Immunization against diseases, such as diphtheria, smallpox and typhoid; the feeding of infants, the value of sunshine; balanced diets; these are only a few of many health subjects which are intelligently discussed by large numbers of people.

However, with this propaganda have come factors which are not so happy in their result. Undue restriction of diet, neglect of the dangers of fatigue, apprehension and the mystery surrounding infection—these are only a few of many health subjects which require careful handling, if future generations are to derive available benefits from our knowledge. For instance, rapid loss of weight is dangerous. Some people, by virtue of their inherited germ plasm, are bound to be stocky, and a deficient diet is certain to produce trouble. Eighteen holes of golf is too much if the player is done up by the fatigue. Apprehension and fear of disease are destructive forces. Worry, over blood pressure, a cardiac murmur, or albumin in the urine, may produce greater harm to a given individual than the actual disease process itself. Transmission of infection is too little understood. A child has whooping cough. He is not very ill, and after the acute stage, is allowed about the yard. A neighborhood child appears from nowhere, and the contact is made. The second child develops whooping cough—has a lowered resistance—broncho-pneumonia sets in, and a tragedy is at hand.

All of these subjects—by virtue of our increasing knowledge—are topics of general conversation. Unfortunately much of it is not intelligent, and because we have gone so far we must of necessity finish the job. "A little learning is a dangerous thing, drink deep or taste not the Pierian Spring."

Enter the doctor. A doctor is just as able as his understanding of disease process and his skill in applying the proper treatment. He is just as practical as his ability to transmit his understanding of the case to the patient, for by so doing he demonstrates the necessity of medical care. He must be a teacher. He should be in close touch, and work with the agencies devoted to medical teaching among the laity. He must be a philosopher, for a sound understanding of human problems is essential to proper knowledge of a given case. He must be a friend, for only by close contact over considerable periods of time can he accomplish desired results.

Of course you have chosen the best physician. All the problems relative to health are his field. Discuss them with him in frank detail. Use him as your banker, or your lawyer—let him assume your medical worries and remember it is more easy to prevent than to cure disease.

CHILD TRAINING

Jealous Of The New Baby

Janette Stevenson Murray

Most of us think that the queer and offish people we know were born that way, but the doctors who study and treat mental diseases, the psychiatrists, are pointing out that a child is not born queer; he develops queerness through a wrong bringing up.

This queerness is traced back through his college career, through high school, junior high, the grades, the kindergarten, to the pre-school years. In other words, it began with the little child in the home under the parents' care.

One of the most frequent causes of queerness is a childhood jealousy of a new baby brother or sister which fastens itself upon the older child hindering him from making proper social adjustments.

"I have watched my little neighbor, Mary, for a number of years," said one of the pre-school group leaders. "Mary had a typical case of jealousy following the birth of a baby brother. Although previously treated with the utmost tenderness and solicitude, no one now had any time for the child except to tease her about having her 'nose put out of joint' and to laugh at her temper.

"Although for years old, Mary kept trying to hurt the baby and once she even hit him. Her parents punished her when they should have given her more attention and love.

"She has never recovered from either this jealousy or its effects. It has warped her in some way so that she is queer, secretive and unresponsive, and she cannot get along with other children. She is developing bitterness and an inferiority complex because she thinks no one cares as much for her as they do for her brother. The mistaken parents continue to punish her and to point out her queerness, hatefulness and general contrariness."

Psychologists tell us that jealousy has been observed in children as young as twelve or fifteen months. Instead of taking these early manifestations seriously, parents often think them cute.

When Nathan Thompson petted his new baby, eighteen-months-old Ruth acted like a little spitfire. This jealousy amused the young father, so every time he came into the house he teased Ruth by showing great attention to the baby.

This teasing started a deep-seated jealousy in Ruth. She had crying spells, temper tantrums, became hateful and generally contrary. As years passed her trouble was aggravated by a constant comparison with her happy and more popular sister.

Both Mary and Ruth were normal children at first. In each instance, it was jealousy of the new baby that made the little girls odd and unsocial.

The other day we were in the home of a young mother who understood how to deal with her three-year-old son who was to be superseded.

She said, "Two or three weeks before our baby was born, we told Bobby he was to have a little brother or sister. Bobby at once took our attitude that it was perfectly lovely. He was intensely interested in helping us change the guest room into a nursery. Every detail fascinated him. He had to be shown the clothes over and over as well as the basket with its toilet articles. He was ready to love the baby, wanted to help us take care of him, and looked forward to having a playmate. After the baby came, we were careful that there should be no disillusionment. Bobby was made to feel that he was needed more than ever before, because of his little brother and everything he did took on increased importance. We have never detected any feeling of jealousy."

COFFEE PUTS CHINESE GENERAL TO SLEEP

"Open the gates! The general is sick and must have medicine!" Such was the midnight alarm raised at the gates of an American mission in Chengchow, Honan province, well in the interior of China. Ever ready to do a good deed, the American opened the gates and admitted the courier. He explained that the general was greviously in need of medicine, but did not know what the general's illness was. The general was in the yamen and could not get to sleep. Did he want the missionary to call upon him? He did not. It was not at all necessary. Just supply him with the medicine and that would be sufficient. After much display of concern and sympathy the courier became specific. The general was ill and the medicine he requested was coffee. Liberal doses of this and he could get in his night's sleep and all would be well in the morning. The coffee was sent, the general slept and the missionary body regained its quiet.

SAHARA AUTO RACE PROVES TO BE SUCCESS

The recent transsaharan motor race from Algiers to Gao, on the River Niger, was a great success. Forty-four cas had entered the race, which was not conducted for speed, but for endurance and regularity. Still, points could be won in proportion to a speed superior to 20 miles an hour. They were all ordinary cars of French make, the competition tending to prove that a tourist could travel through Africa as easily as in the mother country.

The cars journeyed by groups of four or five, leaving Algiers or Tunis every day. Ten young ladies were among the passengers. All 44 machines covered the circuit without any accident, and the winning group carried off a prize of 30,000 francs ($1,200), presented by the French paper Le Matin.

The race may be considered as a landmark in the history of the great African desert, and as a glorious epilogue to the long and patient efforts made by so many explorers in the last century to open Africa to civilization.

FRENCH USING TRAIN FOR PEDDLING FISH

The French State railroad, aided by the government merchant marine department, has a train traveling about France peddling fish; that is, it sells samples of its wares, but the main object is to sell the idea of fish food to the French countryside. The train consists of six or seven cars, sometimes more. In the first car is a museum of stuffed and painted fish such as usually are coaxed out of the sea by Breton fishermen. This is to show the French housewife the difference between a langouste and a merlan, and also the food values of fish. Carefully calculated tables show what various fish have to offer in the way of oil, albumen, phosphates and such. Other cars in the fish train show methods of refrigeration, how fish are no more thrown in the vessel's hold with ice and salt, but are immediately brought to a temperature which has been found best suited to maintaining fish in the same condition as when taken from the sea. The fish are removed from the fishing boat refrigeration, placed in the refrigerator trains and carried to all parts of France. Once at their destination the fish are delivered immediately to distributors, and are not placed in cold storage, something all Frenchmen are prejudiced against. One of the cars is a fish restaurant, where for a nominal price the visitor purchases a portion of fried fish and a glass of wine with which to wash it down. The fish are taken from one of the refrigerator cars which accompany the train.

PUBLISHER TO PRINT STORY OF GALILEO'S PRIVATE LIFE

Because Galileo's private life is almost undocumented despite several existing manuscripts which are al of a scientific nature and show him merely a philosopher and astronomer, a national edition of his works will be published by La Barbera, Florentine publisher, under the patronage of the King of Italy and Mussolini. The first edition of Galileo's works was published in 1888, under the direction of Antonio Favara, whose entire life has been dedicated to research connected with the Italian philosopher. Many other mauscripts have since been discovered and these will be included in the new national edition. Attempts to recover Galileo's daily letters to his daughter, Suora Mario Celeste, who was a nun, have not met with much success thus far, explained Signor La Barbera in a recent lecture on the subject in Naples. Signor Favara discovered one of the latest manuscripts near Florence, where a butcher wrapped up a sausage in a paper which the customer luckily recognized as pertaining to Galileo.

CUTS PEACH PACK BUT CALIFORNIA GROWERS COLLECT

SAN FRANCISCO— (AP) —California peach growers will collect approximately $9,700,000 for their 1930 crop despite the fact that virtually 30 per cent of it will be left on trees to rot.

By an agreement between commercial and cooperative canners and peach-growing interests, the entire crop of 485,000 tons will be bought at $20 a ton, but the pack will be held to 13,000,000 cases, or about 70 per cent of the yield.

Growers and canners agreed to a limited pack to avert "demoralization" in the industry as the result of a surplus.

To guarantee the established price for the total tonnage, farmers of the agreement raised $1,750,000 before picking began, to pay for peaches left in orchards.

Growers not marketing their crop will receive the stipulated $20, less picking costs which average about $7.50 a ton, and which will net the grower as much as those who pick their fruit-laden trees.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Kalbfleisch Corporation
Waterbury.

Over the period of the last century the name Kalbfleisch has been prominently identified with the chemical industry of the United States.

Martin Kalbfleisch, first of the family to migrate to this country, was born in Flushing, Holland in 1804. He was educated in the then leading schools of Holland and France and in 1826 came to the United States with small capital but excellent scientific knowledge of the chemical business of that time. In the spring of 1829 Mr. Kalbfleisch established himself at the head of the chemical manufacturing plant of the old Chemical Bank and from that date until the present, the name of Kalbfleisch has ben a symbol of quality in the industry.

During the Civil war Martin Kalbfleisch served two terms as mayor of Brooklyn, and was elected to congress.

On the death of Martin Kalbfleisch, in 1873, Franklin H. Kalbfleisch, his son, who had received practical and educational training in the business of his father, continued the name in the industry. Subsequently, Franklin H. Kalbfleisch organized the Franklin H. Kalbfleisch company and purchased the Erie Chemical works, Anatron Chemical company, and the plant of Joseph Binns, and various other units, and consolidated them into the Franklin H. Kalbfleisch company, which was later taken over by the present corporation.

During the World war the Kalbfleisch corporation, as did other chemical manufacturers, contributed its full share, placing its entire facilities at the disposal of the government. After the armistice in 1918, the corporation found itself with very much expanded plant facilities, and set about, through the development of new departments in its business, to utilize the equipment and plants in its possession. The expansion of the business has ben carried on by its present officers.

Throughout the history of the corporation, the strictest standards have been observed in the production of chemicals. This policy results in chemicals of the highest purity.

Observance of the policy of highest quality materials and prompt and efficient service has resulted in the steady growth of this organization. The Kalbfleisch corporation is pleased to acknowledge its debt to its customers, who have made this growth possible. In return it pledges its facilities, resources and organization to the interests of the chemical consuming industries.

The present officers of the company are:

H. L. Derby, president; A. B. Savage, vicep resident and treasurer; P. M. Dinkins, vice president; J. F. Fredriksson, vice president; W. H. Neidhardt, assistant treasurer; A. C. Bate, secretary; M. B. Richmond, assistant secretary; K. E. Manning, assistant secretary; J. W. Prendergast, general counsel.

Mothers Enthusiastic Over Modern Laxative

Children like its flavor
Doctors approve its action

Unusual crossness, coated tongue, loss of appetite—mothers know how often these are signs that intestinal sluggishness is sapping the energy of their children. Wise mothers take no chances with old-fashioned cathartics. They are turning by thousands to Feen-a-mint as a safe, dependable corrective for constipation.

Children love the fresh, mint flavor of this modern chewing gum laxative which never has to be forced down unwilling throats as do old-fashioned cathartics. Mothers give it to them with the approval of their doctors because "Feen-a-mint works on the important principle of uniform internal distribution.

Because children chew Feen-a-mint it is effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. For the effectiveness of a laxative is not so much dependent upon the quantity swallowed as upon the thoroughness of its distribution throughout the alimentary tract.

While children chew this delicious bit of gum the laxative it contains is gradually released and mixed with the saliva. Thus it is carried to the intestinal tract smoothly, evenly, without shock to the system or the distressing after-effects so common with old-fashioned laxatives. Each particle of the laxative in Feen-a-mint works with utmost efficiency, gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to resume the activity so necessary for healthful elimination.

The action of Feen-a-mint is thorough, gentle, dependable. With the proper dosage it is not necessary to increase the amount of Feen-a-mint one time or decrease it the next. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the ideal health laxative to keep growing bodies regular. Get a package at any drug store.—Adv.

BELIEVE BOGUE PLANNED DOUBLE AXE SLAYING

That the double slaying of Ola Ostberg and Mrs. Eva Jennings Roberts at the home of the latter in Mystic Saturday night was carefully planned by Stanley S. Bogue, Mystic laborer, and rival of Ostberg for the woman's affections, was the theory adopted by the state police after a thorough investigation of the various phases of the case. Since his arrest Bogue has insisted that he struck Ostberg and the woman when they came at him after a wordy quarrel, but, from statements made by persons who should be in a position to know whereof they speak the state police have come to believe that Bogue was not acting in self defense or on the spur of a momentary fit of anger when he killed the pair with an axe.

In laying the foundation for a first degree murder charge, motive and premeditation must be shown and the state police charge that jealousy was the motive and they now propose to reveal that Bogue had murder in his heart when he wiated at the Roberts home Saturday night for Ostberg and Mrs. Roberts to come home. The state police made it known Tuesday that Bogue had taken out all of the screens around the house and closed all of the blinds and they hold that this fact clearly indicates that he wanted to be certain that no one could see him when he attacked the couple.

Eugene Jennings, son of the murdered woman by a former marriage, added to the mounting evidence of premeditation on the part of Bogue by giving out a statement in which he said that Bogue had threatened to kill Ostberg and had been planning the slaying for several days.

"He told me Friday," Jennings said, "that he had a good mind to jump the Swede and that when he did he would do a good job. Bogue had not been working steadily and when I spoke to him about it a few days ago he said that he would soon be where he wouldn't need any money and in view of what has happened it appears as though at that time he was planning the killing and suicide afterwards."

Jennings said that Bogue was in a rage Friday and smashed about $20 worth of victrola records. He said that Bogue was very dangerous when aroused and that in a recent fit of rage he tore up a raincoat and a pair of boots.

"When I remonstrated with him," Jennings continued, "Bogue told me that pretty soon he would be some place where he would not need clothes."

Jennings said that Bogue was very jealous of his mother and became enraged every time she went out of the house with Ostberg or any other man.

"She was out with Ostberg Saturday," Jennings said, "and they had been away two days. I was with Bogue all day Saturday and he was in a rage because they had not returned. The last I saw of him was about half past six and they came home between 8 and 9 o'clock and some time later I heard them talking with Bogue in the house, but they did not sound unusual and so I didn't go in.

"I think he (Bogue) was waiting for them. He planned the slaying all right because he took out all the screens around the house and closed all the blinds. I think he hid the axe in his bedroom and waited for them. I guess he killed the Swede first right there in the kitchen and then went after her. He must have done it in the dark because there weren't any lights and then lost his nerve digging the grave in the cellar. I know he planned to kill the Swede because he said he would."

Jennings, who lives nearby, said neither he nor his family heard any outcry. He said his stepfather, David Roberts, could not have been implicated because he was in bed all evening and remained there until taken into custody by state police after the murder had been discovered. Although separated, the Roberts lived in adjacent houses.

Roberts is being held as a material witness in the case and with Bogue is in the county jail without bonds, pending the finding of Coroner Edward G. McKay of Norwich. Coroner McKay was in Mystic Tuesday afternoon with state troopers and was engaged in rounding up persons who might be in a position to give evidence. The coroner stated that when he had completed his list of witnesses he would set a date for a formal inquest. He said that he hoped to be able to question all witnesses in time to prepare a finding before the end of the week.

The scene of the murder has been visited by a great many curious persons and the state police have caused the house to be padlocked and the woodshed has also been secured. It is believed that the axe used by Bogue in killing the pair came from the woodshed. There is a back door which opens into the kitchen and it is thought that Bogue went into the shed Saturday night and procured the axe before the return of Mrs. Roberts and Ostberg.

Funeral services for the victims were held Tuesday from the funeral home of Harry O. Williams in Mystic. The services for Ostberg were held at 11 o'clock with the Rev. Ernest P. S. Spencer officiating, and shopmates from the Capitol foundry, where Ostberg was employed, acted as bearers.

The services for Mrs. Roberts were held Tuesday afternoon under the direction of the Rev. Mr. Spencer and members of the family acted as bearers. Both bodies were interred in Elm Grove cemetery.

Bogue, who slashed his wrists and throat in a half-hearted attempt to commit suicide following his double crime, was reported at the county jail Tuesday to be in good condition and will suffer no permanent effects from his self-inflicted wounds. At the time he was arrested by State Trooper Arthur Whitmarsh he had lost considerable blood, but has eaten heartily during the past two days and has regained much of his normal strength.

Decision was reserved by the board of selectmen following a lengthy hearing Monday afternoon at the court house on the changing of a certain section of West Thames street, at Thamesville, in the vicinity of the Norwich inn and Uncas-on-Thames from a business district to a residential area. Twelve residents of West Thames street had previously petitioned the board to change the zoning regulations so that West Thames street from the house of Harry W. Cardwell on that street, southerly to Lucas lane, so-called, on both sides of the street, would be a residential district instead of a business district.

The petition was signed by the Norwich Inn company, by William G. Park; Uncas-on-Thames, by Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, superintendent; Lena H. Haglund, C. N. Pallocha, William M. Skelly, M. Burt Eurstan, M. D., Ella A. Fanning, Joseph Misinsky, Julia Imelda Good, Mary Good and Richard L. Good.

The hearing, attended by about 30 interested persons, and presided over by Selectman William S. Murray, lasted an hour, during which 12 persons spoke in opposition to the change. Two letters were also received by the selectmen protesting the petition.

Smith, representing the Reid and Hughes company; Henry F. Powers and William H. HOW DEVIL'S HOPYARD ACQUIRED ITS NAME

A controversy has started as to how the Devil's Hopyard acquired its name. This is the great wooded area of 50,000 acres lying north of Pleasant valley and south of Millington and back from the Connecticut river and Bashan lake, a wild untamed country now controlled by the state as a natural park—perhaps the most primitive section in the whole east.

The question as to how the Devil's Hopyard became just that is not only intriguing to first visitors to Lyme who are trooping through the forests by scores, but the intelligent natives are likewise boiling over to arrive at truth.

Miss Emily Saunders, of the Herald-Tribune, New York, who is vacationing at Ferry tavern, Lyme, had been tipped off by George Turner, news editor of The Associated Press, who hails from Deep River, to visit the hopyard and to get the story of how it came by its name.

After three days of interviewing old residents the most reliable story seemed to be that handed down in the Strong and Sisson families in North Plain. The lore of these families is that great holes had been worn in some of the rocks in mid stream, supposedly by falling pebbles which were swirled around in the mad currents of flood times, through hundreds of years which had made natural bowls. It was in these holes that the Indians were supposed also to have ground their corn.

The hopping of the pebbles gave the section its name. Such action could only be explained as the work of the devil himself, and so the district which is about as wild as anything in America today came to be known as the Devil's Hopyard.

There are more fantastic stories, more romantic stories, more stories which are difficult to believe, but the version here quoted is the one with the Strong and Sisson stamp of authority and until some one comes forward to document their version with testimony and proof which is more convincing Miss Saunders says that this is the story which she prefers to believe.

FAILED TO RETURN NUMBERS TO STATE

A fine of $10 and costs was meted out in the case of Mrs. Angelina Fallon of North Main street, charged with failing to return registration plates to the motor vehicle department upon demand, when she appeared in the city court Tuesday morning. After a machine registered in the name of Mrs. Fallon was involved in an automobile collision last February the Hartford authorities informed her that the registration plates issued to her would have to be returned if, in the future, she could not show financial responsibility.

When Mrs. Fallon failed to comply with the demands of the state authorities the state police barracks at Groton was notified and Officer Peter Busch was put on the case. The officer summoned the accused into court Saturday night. In court Mrs. Fallon claimed that as her husband had been out of town for some time she did not have an opportunity to send in the plates. After she was approached by the officer Saturday night she located the car and sent them in to Hartford, she informed the court.

FINED FOR ALLOWING MINOR SON TO DRIVE

Upon his admission that he allowed his minor son to drive his machine, a violation of the state motor vehicle laws, John Janik, of this city, was given a fine of $10 and costs in the city court Tuesday morning. With his permission, his son, 14 years old, turned the machine around near the accused's home on Central avenue Monday. The arrest was made by Officer Clifford Crary.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

But few important changes were noted this morning. Receipts of native potatoes increased materially during the last week. Shipped in potatoes were slightly firmer with some price advances, but natives were not affected and prices were unchanged. Tomatoes were more liberal and in some cases price were lower but fancy stock was in good demand and holding firm with prices up to $2.00 for 16 qt. basket. Sweet corn is getting at its height, with very liberal offerings and prices reaching a low level. All kinds of beans were in light supply and demand active for good stock. Cucumbers and peppers were slow of disposal.

Very few shipped in apples are now on the market. In native, Astrachans are about finished and Williams Red and Gravensteins furnish the bulk of supply with good demand for graded stock. The first crab apples of the season were noted today.

DISCUSSES PROGRAM FOR LAND UTILIZATION RESEARCH

The tragedy of the little hillside farm, too rocky or too small to provide a living income for the farmer, no matter how industriously he tends his crops, is painted by Professor Irving G. Davis, head of the agricultural economics department of Connecticut Agricultural college, in a discussion of a proposed program of land utilization research.

An aerial map of the state and a soil survey as the first steps in a land utilization program were recommended last week by a special committee at the Agricultural Policy conference. The committee will work with the American Society of Civil Engineers, Connecticut branch, and any other committee which may be set up for the promotion of the project.

The soil survey, by which it is hoped to determine what farms cannot profitably be used for agriculture, will cost $100,000, it is estimated, of which the federal bureau of soils may pay half. The aerial map cost varies greatly, depending on the scale and amount of detail necessary.

Men representing forestry, agriculture, the federal land bank, the state experiment stations, the state water and highway commissions and the geological survey urged the early completion of the mapping project.

"We know that farms differ in their productivity and ease of operation," says Professor Davis. "The more we study the question, the more we become convinced that there are thousands of so-called farms in Connecticut which are too poor, too rocky, too small yield the average man the living he expects and should have.

"There are hundreds of thousands of acres of land in the state, in pasture and mowing, that would be more economically used as woodland or for recreational and water supply purposes or combinations of these, than for agriculture. Not only would the next and succeeding generations be better served if these lands were diverted to woodland and to other uses, but their alienation from agricultural use constitutes one of the means by which a positive step can be taken toward the solution of the problem of agricultural over-production.

"The problem of land utilization research is to discover how to identify the farms and lands which are economically adapted to the different uses.

"In the natural course of events the use of the land and the type of farming tends to become adapted to the soil topography and economic environment along the lines of the best economic development. The trial and error process by which this occurs takes a long time and is an expensive process involving human suffering as well as economic loss.

STILL LOVES BOLIVIA, BUT IS LEAVING IT FOREVER

LIMA, Peru, Aug. 12—(AP)—General Hans Kundt, ex-German army officer whose command of the Bolivian army ended in the June revolution, still loves Bolivia but henceforth he will leave it to the Bolivians.

Preparing here to sail back to Europe with his wife and daughter, the former Prussian officer was asked today whether he expected to go back at some future time to the country of his adoption.

"No, I am leaving forever," he replied. "South America for the South Americans."

NORWICH ROTARIANS WIN FIRST LEG ON THREAD CITY GOLF TROPHY

Members of the Norwich Rotary club addicted to golf captured a leg on the Thread City golf cup donated by the Willimantic Rotary club in a match between the Norwich and Willimantic golfers Tuesday afternoon at Willimantic Country club. The match was close with the Norwich team gathering 28 1-2 points to Willimantic's 25 1-2.

The match followed the regular meeting of the Willimantic club at the Nathan Hale hotel at which the Norwich members were guests of the Willimantic club. After the luncheon the members adjourned to the country club where friendships ceased for an hour or two and strict attention was paid to divots, slices and sand traps. Bill Park, shooting a 79 for the low gross score of the day, gathered eight points for the Norwich club as he played against three Willimantic opponents. L. Goffe Briggs was given the low net prize when he turned in a card of 83 for a net score of 64. Another oddity of the match was where a Willimantic man won three points from his Norwich opponent but at the same time lost three dollars. Such is golf.

Following the match there was a most delicious supper served the members of the two clubs at the Country club. As is customary at these events there were several short speeches and musical selections. Frank R. Murdy speaking for the Norwich Rotarians praised the hospitality of the Willimantic club, their fairways, the greens and the rough, mostly the latter. Mr. Murdy and Harry Gaucher, prosecuting attorney of Willimantic, joined forces in leading the singing. They also favored with solos and duets for which they were showered with praise.

James P. Mustard in a very eloquent manner presented the cup to the Norwich club handing it to L. Goffe Briggs as chairman of the golf committee. Mr. Briggs very gracefully accepted the cup and thanked the Willimantic club for their hospitality.

STRIBLING ARRIVES TO CONFER WITH JACOBS

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)— "Pa" Stribling and Jefferson Davis Dickson, European fight promoter, arrived from England tonight on the liner Paris to confer with Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, about a possible fight between Schmeling and W. L. "Young" Stribling in Berlin.

Dickson, who has handled Stribling in five fights in the past two years, said he was bidding for the world championship fight for Berlin; that Germany is ready to hold the bout there, and that he is already assured of a million dollar gate.

The elder Stribling said that while his son had not entered into a written contract to meet Schmeling in Germany, he would abide by whatever arrangement Dickson might make.

Jacobs met the two men at the pier. Mr. Stribling had intended to return with his son on the Aquitania, which is scheduled to reach here Friday, but when Dickson suggested he come with him instead and talk matters over with Jacobs here, the boxer's father changed his mind.

"I am bidding for the fight for Berlin between Schmeling and Stribling," Dickson said, "and there won't be any percentages in it. I make a flat bid. I'm going to keep on meeting all American bids until I get the fight. Schmeling will not be offered a percentage but a fixed sum."

Dickson indicated that in this arrangement Schmeling and Jacobs will largely set their own figure; and that Stribling will have to be content with what is left.

ITALIANS BEAT IDEALS 2 TO 1 IN TIGHT GAME

One of the greatest defensive games of the year was won by the Italians from the Ideals by a score of 2 to 1 at the Academy campus last night. The wild hitting and loose fielding, which has played so prominent a part in recent affairs was missing, both clubs playing conservative ball.

Buck Shahan and Rabbit Gautheir, the opposing hurlers, hooked up in a sweet pitching duel, Rabbit being fortunate to be on the winning club although he was edged out a bit in the matter of hits. The Ideals collected six bingles against the Italians' 5.

In the very first inning the winners counted their two and only runs, Arico scoring ahead of Pheno Tombari after the latter pasted one over the left field fence for the circuit. The Ideal score came in the late first and was the result of two singles and a sacrifice. There was no further scoring after the first, both clubs playing headsup ball. A number of fielding features brought the fans to their feet during the course of play and on several occasions the opposing pitchers worked themselves out of fairly ticklish places.

Pheno Tombari turned in a nice fielding game in addition to his work at bat, handling six chances without a slip. Besides his homer he hit a single. Bill Gley led the Ideal hitters with two in two. The score:

SUAREZ BEATS PERLICK IN 10-ROUND BATTLE

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)— Justo Suarez, Argentine lightweight, pounded out a ten-round victory over Herman (Twin) Perlick of Kalamazoo, Mich., tonight in the feature bout of the boxing card at Queensboro stadium. The South American scored his second straight conquest in this country by a decisive margin, battering Perlick but failing to put him down for a count. Suarez weighed 138 1-2, Perlick 139.

Suarez, a hard and willing puncher, swarmed over the curly-haired Michigan lightweight in a bout that stamped him as a new prospect in the 135-pound ranks. He won six of the ten rounds easily and scored a more clean cut victory over Perlick than Jackie (Kid) Berg, the English battler, was able to do several weeks ago.

Except in the third and eighth rounds, Perlick was kept on the defensive. Perlick was staggered in several rounds by hard blows to the head, especially in the sixth.

HOWARD AND GAINOR TO FIGHT FOR CONN. TITLE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 12—Al Weill, well known matchmaker, is giving the boys something to cackle about by his success in bringing together Buddy Howard and Al Gainer for a boxing bout to determine the state heavyweight championship. In arranging this match Weill has scored a "natural" as this bout stands far and away the best of the outdoor season for a match involving state scrappers.

The Arena A. C. of New Haven wanted it saved to inaugurate the indoor season. George Mulligan of Waterbury was keen for it. Ed Hurley of Hartford wouldn't have been adverse to tossing the big fellows into his fight pit at East Hartford. Bridgeport, through Billy Prince, also desired it as a counter attraction to night baseball.

However, it remained for the skillful and cagey Weill to land the fighters and they'll go it on the night of Tuesday, in the White City stadium, Savin Rock. The bout is scheduled for ten rounds.

SIXTEEN EMAIN IN GRASS COURT TOURNEY

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 12—(AP)—Two eastern players and one Texas youth caught the field in the third round of the Eastern Grass courts championship for men at the Westchester Country club today and as a result, 16 of the country's leading players are left in the running for the title held William Tilden, the national champion. The same number of players remain in the women's singles with eight slated for elimination tomorrow.

Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., and Berkeley Bell of Austin, Tex., Davis cup alternates and winners of the doubles title at Southampton, came through as did Melvin Partridge, New Rochelle, N. Y., in the only men's singles played today. Bell had to play his best in a three-set match before defeating Jack Tidball, Los Angeles, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4 while Mangin defeated Harry Plymire, San Francisco southpaw, 6-0, 6-1. Partridge stopped the progress of a Ft. Worth athlete, Jake Hess, Jr., conqueror yesterday of J. Gilbert Hall. The scores were 6-3, 6-4.

Tilden after a two-day rest returns here from Philadelphia tomorrow and will oppose Julius Seligson, New York, in an upperhalf singles tussle. He will also play with Francis T. Hunter in the doubles.

KIDDIES' BENEFIT GAME THIS EVENING

The City league will make its contribution to the all-playground picnic, to be held at Ocean beach on August 27, tonight through the Royal-Thermos game. All receipts from the contest, one of the most important on the entire league slate will go to the fund to be used in taking the children of Norwich to the beach.

Inasmuch as the recreation commission has a family of 1200 or more youngsters, the talk of taking them "sporting" is a big one. The annual appropriation is not quite large enough to cover projects of this nature and as a result the affair must be financed through outside assistance.

The followers of the league are requested to turn out in full force this evening and to do their share by at least doubling their contributions. Through the league, the older folks have had their fun this year, now they should pitch in and help swell the kitty for "kids" party.

As previously mentioned, the league has donated its biggest and best game, and, for the benefit of those in doubt the affair will be a regularly scheduled contest. The two contesting clubs are tied for second place in the title race, a game and a half behind the Citizens. The winner moves up to within a game of the leaders while the loser practically eliminates itself from the chase.

Bill Hastedt, manager of the Bottlers, is certain that his outfit will shake clear of its jinx tonight and will fight its way to within striking distance of the Cits. He still insists that his club is the best in the league and claims that he will prove his contention when the Cits and Bottlers come together in the final game of the year. On the other hand, Mike Panek says his boys are the best and points to the first setback that the Thermos sustained to substantiate his claim. True enough, it was the Royals that gave Hastedt's clan its first walloping, long before the others began to follow suit.

Anxious to keep in the race, the rival managers will use their best hurlers. Mike Nickerson will work the hill for the Bottlers and Tommy Simox will go to the Royal rubber.

It is expected that the largest crowd of the season will turn out for the affair and that the collection will run close to $200.

He was a small boy, his grimy toes peeping out from under tattered overalls dug tiny holes in the dirt and tears trickled down his grimy face, leaving white paths across his cheeks to mark their course. It was a wistful little face clouded with untold woe that would touch the heartstrings of the stoniest kind. It was a face that should have been wreathed in smiles at the joy of just being a kid on a glorious afternoon.

We stopped beside him and put an arm around his sob-shaken shoulders and asked: "What's the matter, Sonny Boy?"

"Gee, Miss. I'm afraid I can't go."

"Can't go where?" we asked.

"Why don't you know?" he asked between sobs. "All the kids are going to Ocean Beach in a coupla weeks and one of the kids told me there wasn't going to be enough money to take us all, so I'm afraid I can't go."

We assured him that there would be plenty of money to take care of all the kiddies who wanted to go. The tears slowly dried and the sunshine of his cheery little smile lit up his face, "Gee, Miss, I'm glad to hear that. My daddy's out of work and I don't go to the beach very often and I just love it down there."

That was real tragedy for this youngster. Remember how little things like that were great big events in your life when you were a youngster? You laugh at them today, but then they meant a whole lot. And you cried, too. You sure did.

And tonight, at the Academy, campus, there is a ball game, the proceeds of which are to go to the beach fund to take the youngsters of Norwich to Ocean Beach for a day.

What are you going to do about it? Are you going to drop in a button or some real hard cash?

Don't let's have any more tear-stained faces and heartaches. Remember you were a kid once yourself.

RUTH IS HERO OF YANKS VICTORY OVER TIGERS

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)—Babe Ruth twice played the hero today as the Yankees opened their series with Detroit by pulling out a six to five victory from a close duel between Ed Wells and Wait Hoyt.

In the third inning, the Babe hammered out his 43rd home run of the season with Reese on base to climax a four run rally and give the Yankees a good lead. In the ninth, after Charley Gehringer's home run had tied the count, Ruth came through with a single with two on base to drive in the winning tally. Two men were out and there were two strikes on the Babe when he broke up the game. The homer put Ruth eight games and 19 days ahead of his 1927 record.

Neither starting pitcher saw the finish. Hoyt gave way for a pinch hitter in the eighth and Wyatt was the loser while Gehringer's homer drove Wells out and Henry Johnson appeared to win his third successive victory as a relief hurler.

TERRY FAILS TO GAIN WHILE KLEIN DROPS POINT

(By The Associated Press)

There was a general upward movement in the Big Six yesterday with only Bill Terry and Chuck Klein failing to gain. Terry had a day of idleness and remained in the lead with a .410 average while Klein, getting but four hits in eleven trips to the plate in the Phillies long double header, dropped a point to .402 and yielded second place to Babe Herman. The Brooklyn Babe picked up four points with four hits in five times at bat. Lou Gehrig gained one point with two hits in four tries while a perfect hitting game for Al Simmons in the first half of a twin bill brought him four hits in seven times up and a three point gain. Babe Ruth connected for his 43rd home run and a single in three times at bat and gained two points. The standing:

MRS. MARTELLE WINS ONE-DAY TOURNEY AT MIDDLETOWN

MIDDLETOWN, Aug. 12—(AP)—Mrs. Hazel P. Martelle, of Hartford, won the Connecticut Women's Golf association one-day tournament, at the Middletown Golf club, today with a low gross score of 89. The score equalled the women's course record made last Saturday by Miss Doris Cone, of Middletown.

Miss Grace Balch, of Hartford, was second with 91 and Mrs. Charles H. Sherwood, of Sequin and Mrs. M. J. Lawlor, of Waterbury, tied for third with 96. Low net prizes went to Mrs. F. G. Patience, of Wethersfield, who had a 103-24-79. Second net was won by Miss Helen Wheeler, of Brooklawn, 97-14-83. Miss Helen Downey, Springfield, won the driving contest with an average of 203 yards for three drives. The longest single drive, was hit by Miss Doris Cone, of Middletown, 216 yards. Miss Cone also won the approaching and putting contest with a score of eight.

N. Y. COMMISSION FROWNS ON SINGER-McLARNIN GO

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)—The New York State Athletic commission refused to sanction today for a proposed match here between Al Singer, lightweight champion, and Jimmy McLarnin, leading contender for the welterweight crown. The commissioners turned down the bid of the Madison Square Garden promoters because of a ruling preventing a champion in one class from competing in another.

Frank Bruen, general manager at the Garden, explained to the commission that there was little hope of pairing Singer and Jackie Berg, lightweight contender, in a title match this September because of the financial demands of the warriors. A match may be made between Singer and Tony Canzoneri, New York veteran.

CUBS WIN ELEVEN-INNING THRILLER FROM BROOKLYN IN SERIES OPENER

(By William Weekes, Associated Press Sports Writer)

CHICAGO, Aug. 12—(AP)—Sheriff Fred Blake and his posse of bristling Cubs corralled the Brooklyn Robins, 3 to 2, after 11 innings of spectacular baseball before a record throng of 45,000 spectators today and hoisted themselves into a full game lead in the torrid National league pennant fight.

For thrills it was one of the greatest shows staged by the national pastime on Wrigley field. Lightning double plays, great pitching in the pinches by Blake and his mound rival, the one and only Dazzy Vance, and close decisions kept the throng on its feet from start to finish. One spectator was fatally stricken with heart disease as the game ended.

Stephenson Wins Game

The old hoss from Alabama, Rigge Stephenson, ended the victorious assault on Vance, by singling with the bases loaded in the final inning, to score English with the precious tally.

The victory extended the Cubs' spell over the Robins to twelve triumphs in sixteen games for the season and the fifth time this year that they have defeated Vance, their erstwhile nemesis. Too, it was the Cubs' sixth straight victory and the fifth consecutive setback for the Robins.

Vance was not more than a small part accountable for the defeat. Two errors in the opening inning by Jake Flowers, Robin second baseman, paved the way for two runs, and not even the efforts of Babe Herman could overcome the handicap. Herman got two doubles, a single, a triple and a walk but was so well bottled up on the bases, that he scored only once.

Cubs Field Brilliantly

Where the Dazzler lacked support, the Cubs came through with fielding of such brilliance as to strangle Brooklyn scoring attempts, except in the second and fourth innings. Twice they choked off runs at the plate, once by another one of Kiki Cuyler's great throws from right field. Two double plays helped to haul Blake out of other trouble. Blake gave 12 hits, to 14 by Vance, but was at his best in the last two innings. In the Robin half of the eleventh, he fanned Gilbert and Herman, then forced Bissonette to roll out.

After Blair had been tossed out in the final inning, English singled over second, Cuyler singled through the same spot and Wilson was intentionally walked, filling the bases. Stephenson then cracked a single off Gilbert's glove to drive in English.

Blair, first up for the Cubs, was safe on Flowers' fumble which permitted him to reach second. English shot a synthetic single off Flowers' shin, and Blair raced to third. Cuyler sent Blair home with his sacrifice fly.

Wilson was safe on Flowers' second bobble, with a double play in sight. Stephenson singled to left, sending English home with the Cubs' last run until the eleventh.

Brooklyn Scores in Second

Brooklyn scored in the second on singles by Flowers and Frederick and tied it up when Wright singled in the fifth to send Herman home.

The Robins loaded the bases in the ninth and tenth innings with two out, but each time Blake bore down successfully. The score:

JUNIOR LEAGUE GAME ENDS IN TIE WHEN ROTARY MGR. TAKES TEAM FROM FIELD

The Duwells and Rotary club battled to a 1 to 1 tie score in the Junior league Tuesday evening, the game being called in the last half of the eighth inning when Manager Ferguson of the Rotary club called his team off the field on a questioned decision at third base. At the time, the Duwells were having their last turn at bat, two men were out and Stephanik, Duwell pitcher was on third base. Sadusky was about to step to the plate. The third base coach at this juncture stepped over and while saying something to Stephanik on third, touched him. Manager Ferguson immediately requested that Umpire Burke call the runner out on the grounds that he was touched by the coach. When Burke would not call the runner out, Manager Ferguson called his team off the field and the game was put to a halt. What the final decison will be is not known, whether it will go as a tie game or a forfeit victory for the Duwells. The official rules seem clear on the subject and are as follows: "The batter shall be out, if, in the judgment of the umpire, the coacher at third base by touching or holding the runner physically assists him in returning to or leaving third base. The runner, however, should not be declared out if no play is being made on him." As there was no play being made on the runner at third base at the time, he should not have been called out, and the Rotary club had no grounds upon which to walk off the field.

This unhappy incident put to an end about as pretty a ball game as has been played at the Duwell field for a long time. Both teams played gilt edge ball throughout, the only error being a dropped throw by Sabroski in the second, which had no bearing on the scoring, however.

Stephanik and Deschamps hooked up in a neat pitching duel, the former allowing six hits, while the latter was touched for four.

After four scoreless innings, the Rotary finally broke the ice in the fifth. With one out, O'Neil drew a pass, stole second, and scored on McKenna's single to left. Deschamps and Veronick both flied out to Sadusky retiring the side.

In the sixth, the Duwells tied up the game. DeBarras walked as a starter, took second on a sacrifice by Sydlo. Sadusky fanned but Willem came through with a single to center scoring DeBarros. Zavistosky fanned for the third out. The score:

Mgr. Dascoli's Reply.

Sports Editor: In reply to the statement the St. James team and myself I wish to say that the cancelling of Sunday's game was not due to the lack of pitchers, as we have more pitchers on our team than we can use. The game was called off at 1 o'clock. We called the Wauregan manager up three times between 11 and 12:30 and could not get any reply and then at 1 o'clock and I asked him if it wasn't too wet to play ball and he agreed with me. He said it would be alright if the game were called off. At 1:30 he called me and asked me if we would not come down. I could not gather my ballplayers as quick as he could after I told them we were not to play, as Danielson is a bigger town. It may have rained for five minutes in Wauregan but it was the longest five minutes I ever saw it rain in Danielson. He mentioned that he was to call off the game because of paying the guarantee. I think that the guarantee was so small that it was not worth while mentioning. He has been trying to win a ball game from St. James for the past six or seven years so the least I can say is for him to win a ball game on the field and not in the newspaper.

I see that the manager of the Wauregan team is not the manager. It must be his players because after calling the game at 1 o'clock, he called up at 1:30 and said his players wanted to play. Who is the manager, the manager of the players? I think that the Wauregan manager was a little bit too hasty in making such remarks in the newspaper because we have never proved any poor sports to any other team we have played and I have made two open dates to be played on home and home games and they still hold good if Wauregan wants to play us but as it looks the Wauregan team does not wish to play. I still repeat that a ball game is won on a ball field and not through a newspaper and again state that the main reason for calling the game Sunday was not lack of pitchers, but merely due to weather conditions.

TONY DASCOLI,
Manager St. James Team,
Danielson, Conn.

Westerly Indies vs Broadway Clowns.

The Westerly Independents will play the Broadway Clowns at the White Rock diamond, Sunday. The Independents are the fastest team in southwestern Rhode Island, while the Clowns are a fast semi-profesional team from New York city. Besides being first class ball players their antics furnish great amusement to the spectators.

WESTERLY

MILFORD MAN FINED FOR RECKLESS DRIVING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 12.—Judge William A. Wilcox of Pawcatuck held a busy Tuesday morning session of Stonington town court when a number of violators of motor traffic laws were brought before the court by town and state officers.

Frank E. Nutter, 34, of 5 Fountain street, Milford, Mass., was before the court, charged with reckless operation of a Buick auto as the result of a crash of two cars about 2 p. m. Monday on the Westerly-Stonington state highway near Aunt Betty's Pantry, near Wequetequock. The accused pleaded not guilty. Groton Barrack State Police Officer Frederick O. Johnson, who was detailed to the scene to investigate, testified that Gustave Palmborg, of 1932 Clinton avenue, Detroit, Mich., was driving in a westerly direction towards Stonington at about 35 miles rate and had passed the brow of a slight elevation on rounding a curve in the highway, when Nutter turned his car suddenly to the left in front of him. On his examination the wheel marks of the Stonington-bound car showed where brakes had been applied and the point of impact was on the north dirt shoulder five or six feet off the main highway.

On the witness stand, Palmborg testified he was "surprised" when the approaching car was turned ahead of him not fifty feet away and "had no thought of such a course being taken and saw no signal."

The defendant, Nutter, told the court in his own defense that he was coming from Stonington towards Westerly and looking both ways, saw no cars and consequently did not put out his hand to indicate that he was to turn. He said that his car was so badly smashed, although no windows were broken as they were down, that he was paid $5 by a Westerly garage man for the auto which he towed away. His wife was knocked out on the ground and was so dazed she could remember nothing about the accident. Judge Wilcox found him guilty of reckless driving and sentenced him to pay a fine of $25 and costs of $12.45, totaling $37.45 which he paid and was discharged.

The case against George A. Ladner, 38, of Paulsboro, N. J., on recommendation of Prosecutor Henry P. Hammacher, was given an absolute nolle upon the payment of costs. The court summons followed an accident on Aug. 8th near Capt. Jimmy's inn, involving three cars.

Norwich Woman Fined

Mrs. Alvery Prentice, wife of Edward A. Prentice, of 86 Cliff street, Norwich, was arraigned on a charge of reckless automobile operation Sunday, on Morgan street, Pawcatuck. Her court appearance followed the collision of the automobile driven by her with a Chrysler coupe driven by John A. Elein of 21 Cherry street, Westfield, Mass., who was the first witness and testified to driving his car on Liberty street from Norwich to Westerly when at the intersection of Morgan his auto was run into by the car driven by the defendant. At the direction of Judge Wilcox a street intersection diagram card was produced with two toy autos and the witness was directed to place the toy cars as the autos were on the highways and after the impact as the Prentice car was making a left turn from Morgan to Liberty streets. He testified that the Prentice auto was taking the curve too sharply and that while his auto, which he had been driving slowly, was almost at a dead stop, the other car kept coming around a blind corner and his auto was struck near the front right wheel and pushed towards the center of the street intersection. After the collision he called a police officer who was on the scene in about ten minutes.

Patrolman Simeon R. Shortman testified to his observation of marks on the highway which showed the left front wheel of the auto coming out of Morgan street, cutting the center of the road and the impact pushing the Elein car five feet, with no brake marks showing on Morgan street. At the time of his arrival he found the car coming out of Morgan street, afterwards learned to have been driven by Mrs. Prentice, had left the scene.

Mrs. Alvery Prentice, who had pleaded not guilty to the charge of reckless driving, took the witness stand in her own defense and in the course of her testimony also placed the toy autos on the card on the witness stand. She said she had driven from Mystic to Stonington and was from Route 1, had crossed over to the Norwich road on Morgan street and proceeded up the Morgan street hill to Liberty street in second speed and at the left a car was parked on the corner of Liberty and Morgan streets. The Elein auto had "appeared like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky" and she had thrown over her wheel to prevent striking the center of the other car where the ladies were and had hit the forward end. Although she stated that she had been receiving instruction in driving from her husband who accompanied her for a year, she had no operator's license but that she had intended to try for one on next Wednesday. She said that she had just returned from a 500-mile trip to the White mountains on which she had driven at times and had come through O. K.

She was found guilty by Judge Wilcox and sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and costs of $21.75 added which were paid by her husband.

George W. Wehrmann, of the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, stationed at the Philadelphia, Pa., navy yard, did not appear in court to answer a charge of motor laws violation after a summons by State Police Officer Eric R. Swanson and his cash bond of $25 was called and declared forfeited.

John P. Murphy, 26, of Dorcester, Mass., who had been summoned into court by Connecticut State Police Officer Frederick Johnson, when found to be driving on the Boston Post road on Aug. 8th without an operator's license, pleaded guilty. He was apprehended in a general check-up while driving a Connecticut car to the Wequetequock casino, and was found to have had at one time a Massachusetts operator's license. Being found guilty he was sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and costs of $12.95 added, which were paid and he was discharged.

Continuances were made to Aug. 19th of the motor traffic law violation cases against Fred Moeller, Bank street extension, New London, evading responsibility charge on the Boston Post road on Aug. 9th, and also against Edward A. Begley, 30 Webster street, Middleboro, Mass., on a reckless driving complaint. The complaint of abandonment of a Ford coupe in a state highway on Aug. 5th against William J. Fox of 210 Howard street, New London, was also continued to Aug. 19th.

Thurston A. Rider, of Bradford road, Westerly, charged with driving without an operator's license, apprehended by State Police Officer Eric R. Swanson, had his case continued to Aug. 26th.

RAYON FABRICS

It is our invariable policy that when a change occurs in the primary market we pass along the savings to customers, so various lines of rayon are reduced in accordance with new mill prices announced a few days ago.

SCORE OF PROMINENT STOCKS WENT TO NEW LOW LEVELS OF YEAR YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)—The stock market's answer to the crop situation and to the failure of business to show improvement, was a break today to the lowest average levels since the bottom of the June decline.

The closing price index of 50 leading shares dropped 4.1 points to 157.9 against the year's low of 154, made on June 24, and 160.8, the previous minimum for the current reaction, reached last Saturday.

It was a day of generally declining levels, broken by a rally around midday that eliminated early losses of 3 to 8 points, but the market only swung into a larger break in the last hour when pressure against rail, merchandising, farm implement and utility shares, was extended to the coppers, motors, steels and other industrials.

Reacting during the morning under the department of agriculture's estimate of a seriously impaired corn crop, the market stiffened later on the appearance of rain forecasts for the grain belt. However, President Hoover's decision to cancel his vacation so that he might keep in closer touch with the drought situation, announced in the afternoon, reached Wall street almost simultaneously with the weekly steel operation figures, which reported another decline, and selling was renewed in some volume. There were net losses of 2 to 5 points in many shares, while numerous vulnerable issues lost much more severely, J. I. Case closed off 14 3-4 and People's Gas, 19.

A score of prominent stocks went to new lows for the year or longer. Among them were Canadian Pacific, Rock Island, International Harvester, Kennecott Copper, National Lead, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Gulf States Steel and American Locomotive. Liquidation in several of the lines represented in this group, especially the mail order, farm machinery and rail shares, was based on the supposition that earning power would suffer from the depreciated income of the farmers. Motors joined the decline after General Motors had posted price reductions on two of its cars.

Banking interests in close touch with the general business situation, were said to feel that the only signs of improvement had been the resumption of activity by the automobile plants after the vacation shutdowns.

The stock market was more active on the decline than on the rally, and sales pushed over the 2,000,000 share mark on the liquidation of the last hour after having run along at small volume.

New lows for the reaction were too numerous to mention. U. S. Steel was borne down to 156 5-8, its lowest in weeks, and closed at the bottom for a net loss of 3 3-8. Gulf States, Republic and Bethlehem Steels each lost about 2, which was the extent of the decline in General Motors, General Electric, Anaconda, Gillette, Hudson Motors, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Studebaker, Rock Island, R. H. Macy, New York Central, American Telephone and North American. American Can dropped 5 1-4.

International Harvester touched the new low of 72, finishing at 73 1-2, a net loss of 4 3-8. Canadian Pacific, Coca Cola and Westinghouse Electric, were down more than 4. Eastman Kodak, Columbian Carbon, Vanadium and American Tobacco "B" closed 6 to nearly 8 lower. Woolworth and Sears Roebuck sagged about 3 and Montgomery Ward, about 2.

Warner Brothers Pictures rallied four points on covering prompted by unconfirmed reports that the company was to get new banking sponsorship and might do some financing. The stock reacted, however, and closed with a fractional gain.

Foreign exchanges eased, diminishing the possibility of gold exports on tomorrow's fast steamers. Sterling lost 3-32 and the French franc shaded off. The Spanish peseta made a new low.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 12—(AP)—Rapidity of action by the corn market today fulfilled everything expected, but took the form of 5c break in prices rather than 5c jump. A big rush of buying which had been looked for as a result of the government report confirming drought losses of 600,000,000 to 700,000,000 bushels in the corn crop during the last month, was met by eleventh hour profit taking on a huge scale. The result was to force a 5c tumble in corn values after a maximum advance of 3c.

Late rallies in the corn market failed to bring about a recovery to yesterday's finish and the close was unsteady, 1-4a1 1-4 net lower. Wheat, depressed both by the United States and Canadian government crop estimates, closed nervous at 2 1-4a2 7-8c net decline, with oats 1-4a5-8c off and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2c.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)—Steel ingot production of the United States Steel corporation, during the past week was between 62 1-2 and 63 per cent of capacity, against a shade above 64 per cent the week before and a little under 64 per cent two weeks ago, Dow, Jones and company, reports.

The automobile industry is reported to be operating at slightly lower levels than before the July shutdown, with companies which recently brought out new models having stepped up production and others either operating fewer a week or with fewer employes.

Directors of the International Match company, have voted to purchase $30,000,000 in German government bonds as part of the $125,000,000 loan which late last year International-Swedish agreed to purchase. Funds for the bonds will be taken from proceeds of retirement of the International's portion of the French loan.

Republic Steel company orders during the first week of August, showed a daily average increase of more than 12 per cent over the first week in July, officials of the company said.

The 1930 construction budget for service extensions and improvements by the Associated Telephone Utilities System, has been increased approximately 40 per cent to a total of $7,000,000, Marshall E. Sampsell, president, announced.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—Bond buyers showed partiality for carrier obligations in the listed market today, and enabled further advances in this group. A moderate demand developed for a scattered list of investment issues among utilities and industrials, which pushed them fractionally higher, some to the best levels of the year.

Otherwise, the day's developments were negligible, with the list still unsettled by uncertainty over the trend of the money market during the next few weeks. Some dealers reported a general advance of 1-4 of 1 per cent in rates on time money today, an adjustment which followed the firming of call money yesterday.

Investment rails were fairly steady. New highs were scored by Central Pacific 5s, Rock Island general 4s, Canadian National 4s, of October 1969, Mohawk and Malone 4s, New York Central construction 4s, Nickel Plate first 4s, and Western Maryland 4s.

Already selling at high levels, some of the utilities negotiated the narrow distance to reach new 1930 peaks, among these being Brooklyn Union Gas 5s, Laclede Gas Light 5 1-2s D, and Public Service Electric and Gas 4 1-2s. Utah Power and Light 5s, were depressed about 1 point.

Among industrials, oil company bonds attracted buying. General Petroleum 5s and Humble 5 1-2s, turned over at the year's best figure and Standard Oil of New York 4 1-2s, established a new high.

Stock privilege issues worked irregularly lower. Rail convertibles found support a fraction over, with Chicago and Northwestern 4 3-4s an exception, holding unchanged and Erie convertible 4s, an inactive issue, climbing to a new high for the year. Warner Brothers 6s, made an attempt to rally, gaining 2 points on the movement and closed 1-2 net high. Pathe 7s, with warrants dropped 6 points. General Theatres 6s equalled its year's low.

A slightly easier tone was apparent in foreign dollar bonds. Standard issues were steady and dull. Strength was shown by Australia 5s. Budapest City 6s, Columbia Mortgage Bank 6s an Norway Mortgage Bank 5s, the latter reaching a new 1930 high. German issues were under pressure.

U. S. governments worked slightly lower under the influence of the firming of credit rates, on an unusually small turnover. Liberty 4th 4 1-4s the active issue held steady.

OLD SWEDISH BATH CUSTOM DISAPPEARS

With something approaching dismay, the visitor returning to Stockholm after a year's absence bent on indulging in a good old-fashioned Swedish bath with all of the frills—which must include first and foremost a stout Swedish bath lady to scrub one's back—discovers that the "baderskor" are rapidly falling into the same class as dinosaurs. Every Stockholm hotelkeeper seems to have joined the movements to equip the city with modern bathtubs, and most of the bath ladies have been forced into retirement. It is still possible to be scrubbed by a lady at one of the large public baths, but foreign hotel guests no longer experience the shock of being awakened by a husky Svenska early in the morning with a summons to the hotel's one and only tub. This is one of the prices which Sweden has paid for its new fad—"functionalism."

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)—The bears, concentrating their attack on the utilities and some of the more active specialties dominated trading on the curb market today. Losses in most prominent issues however, were restricted to about 2 points. Trading was fairly active in the last hour, but the day's turnover of 431,400 shares showed some contraction from yesterday.

Electric Bond and Share, American Gas and Electric, American and Foreign Power warrants, American Light and Traction, and United Light "A" each lost about 2 points.

In the industrials, Ford, Ltd., was again an active feature, dropping more than 2 points, which nearly cancelled yesterday's gain. It closed at 20 3-4. Columbia Pictures dropped more than four to a new low at 21. Safety Car Heating tumbled 9 1-2 to within about a point of its low, in a few odd lot sales. Curtiss Flying touched four, a new minimum.

Chain Stores issues were under pressure. Lerner Stores and J. J. Newberry lost about 2 each, the latter reaching new bottom ground at 30.

POETRY FOR THE WIDEAWAKES

Little Brown Hands

They drive home the cows from the pasture,
Up through the long, shady lane,
Where the quail whistle loud in the wheat fields
That are yellow with ripening grain.
They find in the thick, waving grasses,
Where the scarlet-lipped strawberry brows;
They gather the earliest snowdrops
And the first crimson buds of the rose.

They toss the hay in the meadow;
They gather the elder bloom white;
They find where the dusky grapes purple
In the soft-tinted October light.
They know where the apples hang ripest
And are sweeter than Italy's wines;
They know where the fruit hangs the thickest
On the thorny blackberry vines.

They gather the delicate seaweeds
And build tiny castles of sand;
They pick up the beautiful seashells—
Fairy barks that have drifted to land;
They wave from the tall, rocking tree tops,
Where the oriole's hammock nest swings,
And at night time are folded in slumber
By a song that a fond mother sings.

Those who toil bravely are strongest;
The humble and poor become great:
And from these brown-handed children
Shall grow mighty rulers of state.
The pen of the author and statesman—
The noble and wise of the lands—
The sword and the chisel and palette
Shall be held in the little brown hands.

—Mary H. Krout.

For The Little Ones

In a pessimistic manner,
With a touch of sadness linked,
People say that the pianner
Will be presently extinct;
But the firm and solid fact is
In pianos we'll invest
So that tiny tots may practice
With their
one-two-three-four one-two-three-four
Rest.

We have concerts piped by wireless,
Either orchestras or band,
Handsome noise machines are tireless,
And we like our music canned;
But no gadget man devises
Can replace the winsome zest
Of the children's exercises,
With their
one-two-three-four one-two-three-four
Rest.

We may love unseen sopranos,
Sweet synthetic nightingales,
But we have to have pianos
For the kiddies and their scales,
Grimly, dutifully pounding,
Giving encores by request,
Till the neighborhood's resounding
With their
one-two-three-four one-two-three-four
Rest.

—Stoddard King, in Spokane Spokesman-Review.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDEAWAKES

As all members of the Wideawake circle the horse requires a great deal more attention during the summer months than in cold weather. Oftentimes not enough attention is paid during the hot spells of early summer. A number of points in the care and management horses during these difficult periods are of vital importance to their welfare. Most of these are within the reach of every horse owner and some attention paid to them will return real dividends in keeping teams and saddle horses fit for heavy duties.

During this time it is highly important that the work horse be fed at regular intervals. Because concentrated feeds are necessary to supply the energy required for hard work, roughage, such as hay, should be used rather sparingly and fed preferably at the night feed.

The horse at hard work requires from one and one-quarter to one and one-third pounds of grain and about one and one-quarter pounds of hay per one hundred pounds of its live weight daily.

A regular and sufficient supply of good water is absolutely essential for the working horse during hot weather. The importance of regularity in both watering and feeding on the welfare of the horse cannot be overemphasized.

Water can be given before, during or after feeding without apparent injurious effects, but once a definite time of watering is selected it should be strictly adhered to. Perhaps the most ideal plan is to water both before and after feeding and again late in the evening, unless the horses are being turned for the night into a pasture in which water is available.

It is dangerous to allow the horse to drink heavily while very warm. He may be allowed a light drink at this time and then water more freely after he has cooled off. Do not water too heavily before putting horses to heavy work.

Daily grooming will add greatly to the horse's comfort. This removes body impurities and wastes that cake on the skin and hair unless thoroughly brushed off. If the work horse's shoulders are sponged off daily in hot weather and the collar and bearing points of the harness cleaned thorouhgly it will go a long way toward preventing chafing and sore shoulders.

Horses should be hitched in hot weather so as to allow ample space between them to prevent crowding, discomfort and over-heating. They should be warmed up gradually in starting the day's work and should be worked at normal gaits. Be sure that all are doing their share of the work, changing the hitch, if necessary to make the sluggard pull his share of the load.

Above all, do not forget that unseasonably hot weather in the early spring and summer is every bit as hard on the horse as it is on you, and guide yourself accordingly in his care.

Flyer Ruined By Alcohol

To the Boys' and Girls' Wideawake Circle: I've read some of your stories and I'm sending you my story, for which I won $3 in a contest. The name of it is Why A Flyer and Driver Should Keep Free From Alcohol.

It was early dawn in New York when a happy young flyer was seen making his way to the hangers of the White Air corporation, whistling as he wheeled a prim and neat little airplane.

After turning the propeller a few times it started. As he raced it down the runway he lifted it in the air and sped along, settling back in his chair, gazing contentedly around.

At last he arrived at the airfield, landed, left his mail sacks and strolled down the street.

A group of young men came up saying, "Hello, Ralph, come on up to Whipples." "No, I can't." "Aw com on, Ralph." "Well, all right, for a little while." As they turned in the doors, Ralph objected, "No," he protested, "I must go." But they fairly dragged him in. "Come, have one, Ralph."

"All right, I'll take one," Ralph said. "Well, I must be going." But he stayed and took another and so it went far into the night.

The next morning Ralph returned to the air field. The effects of the stimulants last night had not yet worn off. He stumbled awkwardly into his plane, gave her the gun and took off.

The plane careened madly for a few moments and then crashed. The crash sobered Ralph and for a few weeks he resisted the temptation to return to Whipples. One night he met the same crowd.

They urged him to go and his determination not to go failed. While there a message came that he was requested at the air field.

When he was seated in the office the manager said, "I have an important errand and it means a lot to our company if you succed." Ralph knew that he ought not to, but Ralph accepted and wheeling his plane to the starting line climbed in. While waiting a sense of drowsiness came over him. A messenger arrived bringing a package labeled "Boston State Hospital", then he realized it was too late, the medicine was needed and the last flyer had left and he couldn't back out, any way. He must pull through it but in his weakened condition his brain could not register correctly and he got far off the course with the precious medicine.

Twenty-five people died, many others near death because the flyer's system had been poisoned by alcohol and his brain could not function. Thus a happy young flyer was ruined forever.

Nancy and Her Uncle

Dear Uncle Jed: There was a little girl named Nancy Crew who lived with her uncle in a little house at the end of a valley. Nancy's uncle was not wealthy but he was kind and gentle. In the same valley there lived a few people who loved Nancy and her uncle for their kindness. Nancy loved flowers and often went gathering them. It was one bright summer afternoon when Nancy thought she would go gathering wild lilies. Her uncle said she could go, so she ran on her way until she was all out of breath and had to rest.

While she was resting, a little girl came by barefooted and looked tired and sick. When Nancy saw her she felt very sorry for her. Nancy asked her where she was going and where were her shoes. The little girl became frightened and began to cry. Nancy said not to cry for she wouldn't harm her. The little girl then sat down by Nancy and said she was going on an errand and had to hurry. Then the little girl cried and said she hadn't any shoes. On hearing that, Nancy took off her shoes and handed them to the little girl saying, "Now my little girl put these on and run along on your errand." The little girl did so and ran her way. Nancy seeing it was getting late, ran home and told her uncle about the shoes. Her uncle kissed her and said it was all right.

The Peddler and the Monkeys

Dear Uncle Jed: Once a peddler was carrying his pack through a forest in South America. The day was warm and the way was long. By and by he grew tired and sat down to rest under the shade of a tree. He opened his pack and took out some caps. Putting on one of them, he soon fell asleep.

When the peddler awoke his caps were gone. He began to look about for them. Hearing a chattering among the branches of a tree he looked up. There he saw a number of monkeys, and, strange as it may seem, some of them had red caps on.

As you know monkeys are great mimics. They had seen the peddler put on a red cap, so they must do the same thing. They came down the tree, slyly picked up the caps and away they ran. The peddler called on the monkeys to bring back his caps. The more he called the louder they chattered.

The poor man began to think that his caps were lost for good. How could he get the little rascals to bring them back? He tried many plans, but all in vain.

At last he pulled off his own cap and threw it on the ground. "Here," he cried, "if you little rascals will keep all the rest, you may have this one, too!"

No sooner had he done this than the monkeys mimicked him. Each pulled the cap from his head and threw it on the ground. Then the peddler gathered them all up and went his way.

Caught Several Fish

Dear Uncle Jed: The other day my brother and I went fishing in a pond near the house and had very good luck. We used angle worms for bait, which we dug up in back of the barn. For poles we cut down small white birch trees and used string for line. We had to buy the hooks.

My brother caught seven good sized pickerel and a bull head. I only caught three fish. We took them home to my mother and had them for supper. They were fine.

Caught Wild Rabbit

Dear Uncle Jed: In an open lot about a half mile from my house I found a small rabbit that I caught and took home. I made a little house for him out of some old boards and am feeding him with lettuce and grain. He is growing fast. I hope to keep him until cold weather when I will let him go.

Every evening I notice rabbits eating in our garden. They sometimes do quite a little damage, but we never kill them. I like to watch them eating and playing in the garden.

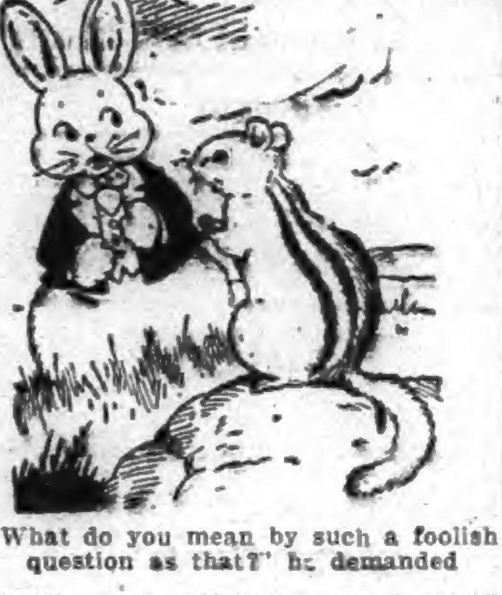
BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Reward of Patience

The patient gain their ends at last,
But often when the need is past.
—Mother West Wind.

Peter Rabbit was nothing if not patient. He spent a great deal of time—more than he should have—over by the old stone wall alongside of the Old Orchard. He wanted to see and talk to Striped Chipmunk. And, as he couldn't possibly go where Striped Chipmunk was, he had to wait for Striped Chipmunk to come where he was. It seemed to him that never in all his life had Striped Chipmunk been so retiring.

At last, early one morning, Peter's patience was rewarded. Striped Chipmunk popped out from between the stones of the old wall almost over Peter's head. "Hello, Peter Rabbit!" cried Striped Chipmunk in that sprightly way of his. "You seem to have been spending a lot of time around here."



"What do you mean by such a foolish question as that?" he demanded

"How do you know?" demanded Peter bluntly. "You haven't been around."

"Who says I haven't been around?" asked Striped Chipmunk, and chuckled when he said it.

"I do," declared Peter. "I've wasted a lot of time watching for you and you haven't been around."

"Let me correct you, Peter," said Striped Chipmunk. "You may have wasted a lot of time. I dare say you have. However, you always seem to have plenty of waste. But you are wrong when you say I haven't been around. There are some advantages in seeing without being seen."

Meanwhile, Peter Rabbit was staring very hard at Striped Chipmunk. It was impolite. Yes, sir, it was impolite "Do you ever change your coat?" blurted Peter Rabbit.

Striped Chipmunk looked puzzled: he was puzzled. "The same way you do," said he. "I shed my winter coat in the spring and get a thicker and warmer coat in the winter."

"I mean," explained Peter, "do you sometimes wear one kind of a coat one day and ano another kind of coat another day?"

It was Striped Chipmunk's turn to stare. "What do you mean by such a foolish question as that?" he demanded.

"It isn't foolish," protested Peter. "I asked the question because I want to know. Do you, Striped Chipmunk?"

"Of course I don't!" retorted Striped Chipmunk. "Of course I don't! Have you ever known any one who wears a fur coat who did?"

Peter admitted that he never had known any one with a fur coat who could change his coat at will. "Then I suppose," said he, "that you always wear this striped coat that you've got now."

"Of course," replied Striped Chipmunk. "That is why I was named Striped Chipmunk."

"Then I must have been asleep or dreaming, or there is something the matter with my eyes," declared Peter. "And I am not the only one. Some of the feathered folk over here in the Old Orchard are suffering from the same trouble. I was certain that I saw you all in black. Sammy Jay says the same thing. Sammy thought you had fallen into something black. What are you chuckling about, Striped Chipmunk? I don't like being laughed at."

Striped Chipmunk made no reply. He continued to chuckle for a moment or two and then he disappeared as suddenly as he had appeared.

WATERWAY LINK FROM BOSTON TO RIO GRANDE

WASHINGTON— (AP) —A 3,000-mile federal intracastal chain of salt waterway stretching along the major portion of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts from Boston to the Rio Grande is rapidly becoming a reality.

The northernmost link is the Cape Cod canal, extending across Cape Cod from Cape Cod bay to Buzzard's bay.

From Buzzard's bay, a connection which requires no special improvement, the intracoastal project moves along the coast by way of Long Island sound to New York bay.

Thence the chain cuts the neck of New Jersey to follow the Raritan river and the privately owned Delaware and Raritan canal to the Delaware river.

An exhaustive study of the question of providing a federal waterway across the state of New Jersey is under way.

The channel then traverses Delaware and Maryland to the head of Chesapeake bay. The Chesapeake and Delaware canal has been completed by the purchase and conversion of the old, privately owned canal. From the Chesapeake flows the Norfolk-Beaufort waterway which has been substantially completed. It provides a channel with a depth of 12 feet for a distance of about 198 miles.

A project for a 12-foot channel along the coast from Beaufort, N. C., to the Cape Fear river, near Wilmington, is approximately 20 per cent completed.

For the section from Cape Fear river, N. C., to Charleston, the secretary of war has transmitted to congress the recommendation of the chief of engineers for a waterway, [illegible] feet deep and 75 feet wide. From Charleston, by way of Beaufort, S. C., a channel has been completed to the St. Johns river, Florida. Work has been going on several months on the intracoastal waterway from Jacksonville to Miami.

A survey of a waterway from Cumberland sound on the east coast of Georgia and Florida to the Mississippi river is in progress.

West of the Mississippi river, congress has authorized construction of an intracoastal waterway from the Mississippi at or near, New Orleans, to Point Isabel on the Rio Grande by way of Corpus Christi, Tex. Preliminary examination of this link is now being made.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON'S SHAMROCK V EXPECTED AT NEW LONDON THIS WEEK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 12—It is expected that Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V will be in port before the week is at an end, for the British cup defender is scheduled to enter New London harbor and proceed to the plant of the Electric Boat company that her mast may be stepped. The British cup defender is rapidly approaching New York and should arrive in the harbor not later than Friday or Saturday. How long the boat will remain here depends altogether on the time occupied in performing the work to her mast.

Pokes Up Groton Slowpays.

Town Tax Collector Carlos W. Allyn of Groton, has had alias warrants given Sheriff Nelson C. L. Brown and Constable Robert Turner this week in an effort to collect the taxes owed by personal and property delinquents. Although it is not intended to cause the arrest of delinquents, it is believed that with a qualified officer seeking the collection of the tax it will eventually be paid. If the delinquent makes a promise to pay the tax at a specified time there is no other procedure taken and the services of the sheriff and constable are obtained more as an intimidation than to cause an arrest.

At her Gardner avenue home Mrs. J. Reid Johnson gave a party yesterday afternoon for her daughter, Anne, in celebration of her sixth birthday. Games were played and supper was served on the lawn. The children present were Joan and Susan Powers, Barbara and Joan Bathgate, Marianna Waterman, Patience Wilbur, Nancy Cook, Betty Morse, George White, Courtland Palmer, Jr., and Neva Johnson.

Mrs. C. J. Ducy has charge of the arrangements for the Catholic Woman's club outing Wednesday at the Devil's Hopyard. Two busses have been chartered to take the party on the outing.

INJURED DOYLE SISTERS WERE HERE FROM NEW YORK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 12—The Misses Doyle, who were occupants of an automobile, driven by Louis Radocchio, of Uncas-on-Thames yesterday in Uncasville, when the car in which they were riding, skidded on the slippery highway because of a heavy shower, crashing through a highway fence and then hitting a telephone pole, were not residents of New London, but reside in New York, where they are hair-dressers. Miss Anna Doyle, sustained fractured ribs and lacerations of the left arm. Miss Christina Doyle has fractured ribs and lacerations of the leg and chin and Miss Kathleen Doyle suffered only from shock. The last named will be a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital but a day or two, but her two sisters will be under treatment indefinitely. The young ladies had been guests of Mrs. Elizabeth Curtin of 20 Williams street.

May Be Sent to Norwich.

Samuel Williams, Negro, residing at 66 Douglass street, was arrested this afternoon on North Bank street by Patrolman Dennis Murphy and was acting strangely. Williams was locked up and if his sanity is doubted after having been examined by physicians, he will be taken to Norwich State hospital for observation.

Sailor In Accident.

Erausevio Zada, Filipino sailor, is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital suffering with a fractured shoulder and lacerations of the face and head, having been in an automobile accident last midnight. Zada was driving in Waterford and at Moosbroker's corner lost control of the steering wheel with the result that the car crashed against a stone wall. The car was wrecked and because of the seriousness of the driver's injuries he was taken to the hospital.

Mary Parker Johnson has quitclaimed title in property on New street to the People's Finance corporation, according to papers filed for record today at the office of the city clerk.

E. K. Mansfield is spending a few days in New York.

Susan Hall, 66 Pleasant street, a patient at Home Memorial hospital, was discharged today.

Putnam Man To Wed.

The following have filed marriage intentions at the office of the city clerk: Peter C. Dyke, radio operator, U. S. Coast Guard and assigned to the destroyer Cummings and Flora A. Sauerzopf, clerk, of 316 Ledyard street Philip Shafner, furniture dealer of Putnam and Miss Anna Jurin, school teacher, of New York.

Mrs. Philip Z. Hankey is spending a week with relatives on Cape Cod.

Mrs. George W. Alves has returned to her home in San Antonio, Texas, having visited her mother, Mrs. Robert B. Taylor.

Mrs. Herbert G. Huntley, wife of City Treasurer Huntley has returned to her summer home at Groton Long Point after having visited for a fortnight at Peterboro, Vt.

Coast Guard destroyer Trippe; Mrs. Henry Sullivan and infant son, 74 Tenth street; Miss Patricia White, Mystic; Mrs. Mary Maher, 8 State street; Mrs. Merrell Green, 1 Morse avenue, Groton; Abraham Katz, 42 Truman street and Charles Davis, Mago Point, Waterford, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

OBITUARY.

William E. Pendleton.

William E. Pendleton, 75, of Ocean Beach, for many years proprietor of a floral establishment on Sherman street died today at the residence of his son, Francis T. Pendleton at Oak Grove Beach, after a lingering illness. He is survived by his wife and another son, John B. Pendleton of this city. Mr. Pendleton, who was born in Mystic in September, 1864, was long a resident of New London. He retired from business several years ago and since that time had resided at Ocean Beach. When his health started to decline several months ago, Mr. Pendleton went to reside with his son. Mr Pendleton was a member of the First Baptist church.

Died At Fairview.

Olaf F. Sundstrom, 64, died today at Odd Fellows' home, Groton, where he had been a resident about two years. He was born in Sweden, but resided in this country practically his entire life. For many years Mr. Sundstrom was a resident of Wethersfield and was employed as a typewriter assembler. So far as is known he leaves no relatives.

Norwich Auto Damaged.

Arthur J. Sylvia, 248 Main street, Norwich, last night made complaint to the New London police, claiming evasion of responsibility on the part of another driver and requesting that the offending motorist be arrested. Sylvia said he had parked on the east side of Bank street and but a short distance south of State. While the auto was motionless, Sylvia said that it was backed against by another car, which damaged the left rear fender of the Norwich owned auto. Sylvia supplied the alleged markers of the colliding auto, the driver of which speeded away and it was discovered that the markers were those of a car registered in the name of Merritt B. Carpenter, 3 Schuyler street, Stamford. The police of that city were requested to check up on the movements of Carpenter's auto and as a result it was ascertained that the car had not been away from Stamford the entire day, so there is little probability that Carpenter will be arrested.

COUGHLIN CASE CONTINUED TO TUESDAY OF NEXT WEEK

Alfred J. Coughlin, 43 Stuart avenue, Ocean Beach, an ice pedlar, was in the police court this morning charged with reckless driving, but the case was continued to Tuesday next. Coughlin furnished a surety on his bond of $2,500. The continuance was ordered by the court to permit a further investigation of the charge on which Coughlin was arrested and to await the outcome of the injuries sustained by Howard Fern, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Fern, 1120 Ocean avenue, who was seriously injured as a result of Coughlin's reckless driving. The truck Coughlin was operating Saturday afternoon collided with a pleasure car driven by Mrs. Ida E. Eskridge, 31 Thames street. On the truck were Fern and Richard Hammond, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Hammond, 15 Centre street. Both boys were thrown from the truck and Fern sustained among other injuries a fractured skull and he is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital. His condition was reported today as being slightly improved. The Hammond youth, who sustained minor injuries, is still a patient at the hospital.

SLAPPED GIRL TATTLER, SAILOR PAYS $10 AND COSTS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 12—Lewis Bonamarte, 24, a sailor, stationed at the submarine base and married, was presented on a charge of breach of the peace in hitting Mary Suydak, 17, of 84 Madison avenue, Jewett City, because of the latter betraying Bonamarte's infidelity. Bonamarte admitted hitting the girl, but claimed that the delivery of the blows were unintentional. However, the girl's statement convinced the court that Bonamarte was in anger when he hit Mary so the judge fined him $10 and costs. Bonamarte and his wife reside with the latter's mother, corner of Water and Atlantic street, where the woman, Mrs. Angelina Colangelo, is proprietress of a restaurant. Bonamarte and the Suydak girl had been on intimate terms several months and yesterday when the girl became aware of the fact that the sailor was married, she went to the restaurant and informed Bonamarte's wife of her husband's infidelity. Mrs. Bonamarte rebuked her husband for his conduct and when Bonamarte found the Suydak girl on the premises he became convinced that the latter had disclosed the facts of his misconduct to Mrs. Bonamarte, so he attacked her. The Suydak girl then went to police headquarters and made compaint against Bonamarte, who was arrested by Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray.

Walter Collins, R. F. D., No. 1, Waterford, was charged with driving a truck without his registration and was fined $3 and costs.

Stole Watermelon—Go Free.

Frank Mooney and James Edwards, sailors, were charged with theft, but because of the nature of their act, the court suspended judgment. Mooney and Edwards were at Ocean Beach last night and in passing the Weiner store, stole a watermelon that was on display. Weiner detected the sailors in their act and made complaint to Patrolmen Harold Goldberg and Thomas Lyden, who arrested the blue jackets.

The only other cases presented were for violation of the city's traffic laws. Most of the drivers were charged with parking overtime and among them was Louis Friedberg, 87 Spring street, Norwich. Friedberg did not appear in court so forfeited his bond of $2.

RAZZER DOES SLASHING AFTER CHEATING AT CARDS

Bernaci Fadreguela, a United States Coast Guard Filipino, is a prisoner in the brig at the coast guard academy, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and his victim, Mel Patricio, also a coast guard Filipino and residing at 41 North Bank street, is a patient at Mitchell ward of Lawrence-Memorial hospital suffering from lacerations of arm sustained during a fight at the home of Paul Cupillo, Filipino, 32 North Bank street. When Patricio's wound have healed sufficiently to permit his attendance in court, Fadreguela will be delivered to the civil authorities, and this, it is believed, will be before the end of the week. The fight and cutting occurred early yesterday morning. The three Filipinos had been at Cupillo's home throughout Sunday night playing poker and in a game where deuces "were wild." When the game was concluded about 6:30 o'clock Monday morning, Fadreguela had lost practically all his money, while Patricio had been exceptionally lucky, apparently, for the latter was the winner of his friends' money. When the trio started to depart from the gaming table, two deuces which Patricio had concealed about his person, dropped to the floor. Realizing that he had been duped, Fadreguela became enraged and attacked Patricio, but Cupillo interfered and prevented a real fight. Fadreguela left the apartment and went to a hall where he waited for Patricio and when the latter emerged a fight started. During the battle a razor in the hand of Fadreguela was wielded and Patricio sustained numerous wounds. He sought medical treatment and was then sent to the hospital. No report of the cutting was made to the police, but last night when it became known that Patricio was in the hospital as a result of knife wounds, an investigation was started and as a result Fadreguela was arrested by a shore patrol.

A workshop to restore disabled persons to usefulnes is to become a clinical adjunct of the Northwestern university medical school.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre.

Starting at the Palace theatre tomorrow is one of the most gripping dramas of all time. Nothing like it has been filmed in this country for a long time. "Sins of the Children" is the title of this piece, and in it are mingled all the elements of pathos, humor and despair.

The story is about an old German barber who comes to this country, the land of the free and the happy, so he believes. He brings his wife, and they are looking forward to making their fortunes, but fate hands them one staggering blow after another. Their children grow up and seek their own careers. One becomes an embezzler, narrowly escaping prison bars, another is graduated from a medical school and immediately becomes so high-hat that he thinks he is too good for his family. One daughter marries and the other has a serious and troublesome love affair.

The whole drama is amazing because it is so like everyday life. People who have seen it declare that it is almost exactly like what goes on in their own quiet little street at home.

Louis Mann, who plays his first feature screen role in "Sins of the Children," is one of the foremost actors on the American stage. He has appeared in plays that range all the way from Shakespeare to the liveliest musical comedy and in the part of the heart-broken old barber, he gives a magnificent performance.

Today for the last times the Palace brings to its Norwich friends, that great comedy drama, "Way Out West," starring William Haines, Leila Hyams and that old pal of Marie Dressler's, Polly Moran.

Broadway Theatre.

The legion of admirers Dorothy Mackaill has recruited, particularly since talkies introduced her voice in "The Barker" and "The Captive Woman," will see her in her latest picture "in her true colors." She will be seen in a Technicolor film.

The picture is "Bright Lights," a First National special dramatic film, with music and dance numbers incidental to the romance and drama surrounding the evolution of a celebrity from a muscle-dancer in an African dive.

Seen in natural color film, Miss Mackaill not only gets the full benefit of her typical English ruddy complexion, blue eyes and blonde hair, but she takes on a very becoming roundness characteristic of the Technicolor film, which lends depth and a stereoscopic effect.

Frank Fay, Noah Beery, Daphne Pollard, James Murray, Tom Dugan, Ines Courtney and many other favorites have important roles in "Bright Lights," which Michael Curtiz directed. It was written directly for the screen by Humphrey Pearson, author of "On With the Show."

"Bright Lights" will be the feature attraction at Warner's Broadway theatre three days starting today.

TWO NORWICH TELEPHONE MEN ARE PRESENTED VAIL MEMORIAL MEDALS

(Special to The Bulletin)

MOODUS, Aug. 12.—Before a large gathering of their fellow employes and several officials of the company from New Haven at Camp Elm today, Wallace E. Larkin, a foreman, and John F. Hoppman, an assistant foreman of the Southern New England Telephone company, both residents of Norwich, were presented Vail Memorial medals by President James T. Moran in recognition of their resourcefulness and efficient action in giving first aid treatment to a man severely cut by an axe and who was in grave danger of bleeding to death.

Following a morning devoted to athletic events, always a feature of the annual outing of the telephone workers of the New London district, the "hello" folks and the officials of the company from New Haven gathered for the presentation of the medals marking the distinguished service of these two telephone men.

With each medal was presented a framed citation which read as follows:

Wallace E. Larikn, foreman, Norwich, Connecticut: "In recognition of his resourcefulness and efficient action which in all probability resulted in the saving of a human life.

"At Preston, Connecticut, on September 16, 1929, he, with his assistant, helped from a tree and rendered prompt and effective first aid to a man who had severely cut his foot with an axe, severing the tibial artery. Except for this action the injured man would likely have bled to death, since the nearest medical aid was at least six miles distant."

President Moran complimented the men on their splendid use of the first aid methods taught to them as employes of the telephone company and referred to the fact that this year alone Vail medals have been awarded to eight employes of the Southern New England for life saving, largely by the application of artificial respiration by which means persons whose breathing had stopped were restored to consciousness.

Following the presentation of the medals which are awarded for outstanding acts of public service, the telephone workers of the New London district and their guests enjoyed a splendid dinner and the rest of the day in water sports.

MORRIS BASS FINED FOR VIOLATING MILK LAW

Morris Bass, of Thamesville, was found guilty in the city court Tuesday morning on a charge of violation of the milk laws, the specific charge being keeping for sale impure milk. He was fined $14 and costs. The accused was arrested several days ago upon complaint of City Milk Inspector Dr. Clarence Thompson and the case was originally presented Friday last and was continued at the request of City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy.

Dr. Thompson testified in court that he purchased a pint of milk on July 30 from Herman Bass, a son of the accused, at the Bass home, paying seven cents for it. The milk was sent to the bureau of laboratories at Hartford, tested and found to contain 1.7 per cent milk fat, whereas it should have contained 3.2 per cent.

The doctor claimed that the milk was taken from a cooler and bottled by Mrs. Bass, but the defense testified that the milk came directly from a cow, that the doctor did not pay for it nor did he offer to do so. Mrs. Bass and her son, in denying that it was skimmed milk, said that if it were below the standard required by law, it was perhaps due to the fact that the first quart or two that comes from a cow is not as rich as that which follows. This claim was substantiated by C. H. Briggs, of Yantic, a state milk inspector, but said that according to the report of the Hartford chemists the milk in question must have been mechanically skimmed.

Hanna, Woodstock, Conn., assistant to President Holt; F. A. Swain, secretary of the Rollins club of New York, and Miss Madeleine Appleby, secretary of the Rollins club of Boston.

Health Exhibit At Fairs

The season of fairs is approaching and fair grounds in various parts of Connecticut will soon show signs of activity preparatory to the one, two or three days event. This preliminary season includes a general cleaning up of the premises, making the fair grounds and buildings look ship shape; as well as testing the drinking water or making provisions for a safe drinking water. Already health officers are busy sending samples of water to the state department of health for laboratory analysis. Toilet facilities will also come in for their share of attention for fair officials wish to protect the health of their visitors by providing ample covered, fly-tight privies—some of the more progressive fairs having gone so far as to provide a flush toilet system.

The state department of health is sharing in all this preliminary activity making preparations for a health exhibit which will soon be packed in the department truck and installed on the midway at several fairs.

STATE MAY HAVE TWO NEW CONGRESSMEN

If the congressional representation of the state of Connecticut is based upon the same apportionment which has been in use since 1910, the state of Connecticut is entitled to two new congressmen, says the New Haven Times. That basis of representation was 211,000 to a district. Under the census just taken the population of the state is 1,602,166, which would entitle the state to seven congressmen.

One of the first things that Connecticut will ask for will be a redistricting of the state, although the delay in the redistricting would not necessarily prevent the state from having its additional representatives in congress. The practice is that where a state has not been thus redistricted the additional congressmen are nominated and elected as congressmen-at-large. Congressman Tilson was once elected as a congressman-at-large from Connecticut.

The population of the five districts in the state of Connecticut under the present apportionment has not yet been figured from the 1930 census, but in 1920 they varied very greatly in the population. The first district, which is the county of Hartford, according to the 1920 census, contained 336,027 people; the second district consisting of Tolland, Winsted, New London and Middlesex, contained 232,192. The third district, consisting of the towns of Cheshire, Meriden, Wallingford, Bethany, Hamden, North Haven, North Branford, Guilford, Madison, Woodbridge, Orange, West Haven, Milford, New Haven, East Haven and Branford, contained a population of 277,070. The fourth district, which is the county of Fairfield, had a population of 320,936. The fifth district, which consists of the county of Litchfield and the towns of Southbury, Middlebury, Waterbury, Walcott, Oxford, Naugatuck, Prospect, Beacon Falls, Seymour, Ansonia and Derby, in the county of New Haven, had a population of 224,426.

MAY LOCATE GUNNERY RANGE AT GROTON

The possibility that an aerial gunnery range for use of the regular army service will be established in this vicinity was seen Tuesday as a result of a visit Monday to the Groton airport by Lieut. Robert M. Webster, aviation instructor of the Connecticut national guard, and Captain H. H. Mills, Hartford airport manager.

The two Connecticut aviators met Major William O. Ryan and Lieut. Col. John M. Howard, regular army officers, and discussed the above subject and according to reports considerable favor was shown in establishing the range at either the Groton airport or Fred Stone's ranch at East Lyme.

Both places are now used by the Connecticut national guard and at present are under the consideration of federal officials. The final decision will not be made for some time, however, and if located here or in this state would be available for use of the national guard air forces. According to all reports the army officials are keenly interested in the proposed plan.

PLAYGROUND OUTING AT BEACH SOON

Progress has been noted in the organization of the annual all-playground outing at Ocean Beach, Aug. 27. Chairman William J. Fitzgerald of the recreation commission, who is making arrangements for the affair, has reported that the success of the task of transporting 1,400 children can be assured only by the contribution of either money or automobiles by interested citizens and organizations.

The children themselves are actively engaged at all the 10 play centers in producing carnivals and minstrel shows for the purpose of aiding financially in the undertaking, and the local City league is to have a benefit game Wednesday evening for the children's beach fund. It is felt, however, by the commission, that these activities will be insufficient without the assistance of local citizens and organizations.

LISTLESS AND DULL?

MAYBE IT'S WORMS

THEY are much more common than most mothers think. Is it any wonder that your child is listless if intestinal worms are robbing him of nourishment and poisoning him with their secretions?

Look also for the following symptoms: grinding the teeth, picking the nose, crossness, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of appetite or weight, nausea or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present.

Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

HOOVER HEARS PROTEST OF INCREASE IN FOOD PRICES

Representative La Guardia of New York Complains That Either Wholesalers or Commission Merchants Are Taking "Undue Advantage" of the Dry Spell—Says Prices of Fresh Vegetables in New York Have Been Increased 25 to 50 Per Cent—Warns That Unless "Profiteering" is Stopped "Drastic Action Will Be Taken by the Consumers"—Secretary Hyde Declares That There is No Reason For Any Jump in Food Prices, As a Bountiful Supply Is On Hand

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13—(AP)—The first protests of increased food prices since the drought set in were made to President Hoover today as governors began arriving for the White house conference tomorrow to discuss a widespread relief organization.

Representative La Guardia of New York carried a complaint to the White house that either wholesalers or commission merchants were taking "undue advantage" of the protracted dry spell by selling fresh vegetables in New York city at an increase of from 25 to 30 per cent in prices.

At the suggestion of the president, La Guardia took his case to the agriculture department where he asked Secretary Hyde to publish a daily bulletin on the amount of vegetables arriving in New York and wholesale prices paid the farmers to determine "at least whether the farmer is being held up."

La Guardia, who led a buyers' strike movement in New York city a decade ago, warned that unless "profiteering" stopped "drastic action will be taken by consumers."

Secretary Hyde promised La Guardia his department would co-operate to the fullest degree in preventing any unnecessary rise in the price of food stuff. Earlier in the day, the agriculture secretary said there was no reason for any jump in food costs as a bountiful supply was on hand.

John Arton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, another White house caller, informed Mr. Hoover his organization had $5,000,000 available for instant use if needed. Even under existing conditions, he said, there were indications Red Cross aid would be needed in the fall and winter.

Meanwhile as the governors of states most severely affected by the drought journeyed here for their conference with President Hoover, the weather began to show signs of relenting in sections fringing their states.

Good rains fell in Missouri and showers were forecast for the farm belt tonight and tomorrow. Other light rains fell in the northern Mississippi valley, but over most of the twelve states from which the governors are coming, drought still held a firm hand.

The governors who will attend in person are: Henry S. Caulfield, Missouri; Louis L. Emmerson, Illinois; Harry S. Leslie, India; Meyers Y. Cooper, Ohio; William G. Conley, West Virginia; John G. Pollard, Virginia; John E. Erickson, Montana; Clyde M. Reed, Kansas; John Hammill, Iowa, and Arthur J. Weaver, Nebraska. The governors of Kentucky and Arkansas will send representatives.

President Hoover will call the conference to order in the cabinet room at 2:30 p. m., the late hour being selected to permit those coming long distances to arrive in time. The governors will remain for dinner at the White house after which further details of the proposed relief will be discussed.

Following a policy similar to that adopted in the Mississippi flood, the president is expected to lay all the facts before the governors and then ask each to designate a relief commissioner to co-operate with federal, state and local bodies in checking up the needs in each commonwealth.

Chairman Legge of the federal farm board and Bestor of the federal farm loan board also will attend the conference. In Friday the president will confer with representatives of three farm organizations and by the end of the week he hopes to have a relief machine well under way.

TO ESTABLISH FOOD "FAIR PRICE BOARD"

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—The city health department today moved to prevent possible food profiteering because of the drought. It's first step was to establish a "fair price board" to cooperate with housewives.

Edward F. Brown, deputy commissioner of health, named representatives of all New York newspapers to the board and asked them to publish daily current prices for vegetables, fruits and other food. He also arranged for a daily broadcast from the municipal radio station, WNYC, of the same information.

Four specialists from the health department will keep a day and night vigil on incoming foods and the retail market to gather this information, Brown said. They will report to the press and to radio stations on the prevailing wholesale prices and the condition of the market as to supply and demand.

"Unless some group such as this 'fair price board' takes the offensive there is danger of $1,000,000 a week in excess profits being taken from the tables of householders," Mr. Brown said. "A survey by two experts today indicates that the market in fresh fruits and vegetables is plentiful, most of it coming from California and the south, two sections not affected by the drought."

Commission merchants and produce buyers at the wholesale vegetables markets said there was a plentiful supply of all fresh vegetables and that wholesale prices had not been affected by the drought. They said some retailers were taking advantage of reports of crop shortages to boost their prices.

CONFESSED SHOOTING CRANSTON PATROLMAN

CRANSTON, R. I., Aug. 13—(AP)—Daniel J. Dennis, held by police here after he is said to have confessed shooting and critically wounding Motorcycle Patrolman Henry R. Johnson late last night, tonight admitted that he broke into the Providence home of Colonel Samuel M. Nicholson, January 7 and stole jewelry valued at $42,000.

He confessed, police say, when Inspector Michael Franklin, Providence police department fingerprint expert, confronted him with a thumb print that had been found on a window of the Nicholson home after the robbery. The print, Inspector Franklin declared, matched one taken of Dennis after his arrest here early this morning, three hours after the shooting.

Dennis disposed of the stolen jewelry for about $10,000 in New York, he is reported to have told police tonight.

While Patrolman Johnson lies at the point of death in a Providence hospital, his superiors are trying to link Dennis with the unsuccessful delivery attempt at the state prison April 19.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—A protest was sent today by the International Labor Defense to Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt against a raid which the organization said was made yesterday by the Ku Klux Klan on the children's camp maintained by the Workers' International Relief at Van Etten, near Elmira, N. Y.

"The camp was raided by state police Tuesday night after a threatening demonstration by the Ku Klux Klan and the American Legion, during which hundreds of klansmen burned a huge cross," the Labor Defense telegraphed the governor.

"Several teachers and caretakers were arrested, leaving the children without care and supervision. The International Labor Defense . . . protests against this brutal outrage and demands immediate release of all those arrested."

PASSENGERS ENDANGERED IN FORCED LANDING OF PLANE

HAVANA, Aug. 13—(AP)—Fifteen persons, including eight United States citizens, narrowly escaped death this afternoon, when a New York, Rio and Buenos Aires air liner, en route from Cienfuegos to Havana, was forced to land at Calvario, 15 miles south of here.

The plane was the NC 664M, a 22 passenger air liner in service between Buenos Aires and Miami, Fla. It took off from Cienfuegos, Cuba, shortly after one p. m. and one of the motors went bad as Calvario was sighted. The pilot succeeded in bringing the ship down in a clearing without injuring any of the passengers or seriously damaging the machine.

Confessed Piloting Of Bombing Plane

Paul Montgomery Also Ha[illegible] Named Two Men Who H[illegible]ed Him to Make the [illegible]

MURPHYSBORO, Ill., A[illegible]—A confession by Paul [illegible]ery, 25, local aviator, that [illegible] hired by two or three men [illegible]s airplane in a bombing [illegible]er the Providence, Ky., coal fie[illegible]rly Monday, and that one of the men accompanied him on the trip, was in the hands of department of justice and county authorities tonight.

State's Attorney Fletcher Lewis said Montgomery has named two men but withheld their names pending their arrest, expected shortly. Reports from some other official sources were that three men had been implicated.

Montgomery's story, according to Lewis, was that after he was hired to go on the bombing raid he was told he and members of his family would be killed if he did not carry it out. He said he received no money but was promised financial reward, the amount not being specified.

The state's attorney said Montgomery confessed that the dynamite bombs dropped on the mining community, but without loss of life or property, were made at the local airport by two men, one of whom took them in a sack and accompanied him when he took off for the 90-mile flight to the mining district before dawn Monday.

Montgomery was quoted as saying that he maneuvered his plane so that none of the bombs would land on any homes or mining properties where any damage would be done or persons injured.

Authorities would not say whether those named by Montgomery were miners, but they did say the bombing was plotted because of the trouble among miners in the Kentucky field. Lewis declined to state whether he expected the additional arrests to be made here or in Kentucky.

Herman Goldman, a special agent for the department of justice, who was present when the confession was made, considered the investigation here about closed and prepared to leave tonight for St. Louis to report to his office.

Lewis said he was expecting officers here from Dixon, Ky., late tonight or early tomorrow with papers for extradition of Montgomery to Kentucky. The prisoner was being held in jail.

Identication of Montgomery's airplane as the bombing ship led to his arrest and his subsequent confession.

The voice, which happened to be that of Jackson, said:

"Send up a new battery for the transmitter. You will be able to hear us much better then.

"We don't know whether we will be down tomorrow, next month or next year. We could stay up till next August, I think. Obie (Obrine) is sleeping again, and snoring as loud as he did last year. The rain is sure cooling us off."

CHINESE COMMUNISTS APPROACHING NANKING

NANKING, Aug. 13—(AP)—Communist marauders approached this virtually defenseless capital of the nationalist government tonight while red armies continued devastations in the south and rebels drove down from the north.

Weakened by removal of troops to areas menaced by reds and rebels, Nanking seemed an easy prey should the communists attack the walled city. An air of uneasiness prevailed among the populace of 400,000 as peasantry turned red and appeared armed in nearby towns.

Split In Republican Party In Nebraska

Independent Republican Will Run Against Senator Norris

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 13—(AP)—With defeat of the administration candidate assured, Nebraska's temptuous senatoriol primary had an echo tonight in the threat of a widened breach in republican state ranks.

Soon after his opponents conceded the nomination of Senator George W. Norris, who amassed a plurality of nearly 25,000 votes, announcement was made that Beatrice Fentoncraig, a Lincoln school teacher, would oppose him in the election as an independent republican, "by petition."

Leaders interpreted the move as a bid by the school teacher for support of the "regular" wing of the party, which vigorously fought Norris in the primary. Earlier in the day Walter Kiechel, manager of Willis M. Stebbins, Norris' leading opponent, had described the insurgent leader's victory as "non-republican", and due to wholesale democratic support.

Norris, elated over the big plurality he piled up, apparently was little concerned about post-election developments. With only a few precincts to be heard from he had 87,176 votes, to 62,659 for Stebbins, while Aaron Reed, 44-year-old wet, polled only 5,632.

Senator Norris, who denounced the tariff, and criticised other Hoover administration measures, said he regarded his victory as "vindication in my fight for the principles I have supported."

FOR CONCERTED ACTION AGAINST PROHIBITION

HARTFORD, Aug. 13—(AP)—Concerted action against federal prohibition was taken tonight at a joint meeting, in this city of the officers and executive committee of the Connecticut divisions of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, the women's organization for national prohibition reform and the crusaders.

CATHOLIC MISSION IN CHINA WAS DESTROYED BY BOMBS

HONGKONG, Aug. 13—(AP)—The French Catholic mission at Nanning capital of Kwagsi province, was virtually destroyed yesterday by Cantonese military aviators, who bombed the city seeking to oust the insurgents who held it, delayed telegrams from French missionaries there, told of bombing.

Civil war, which has been going on in Kwangsi for many weeks, is centered in Nanning where the rebels have been holding out against government forces.

The telegrams said that Tuesday morning, during an infantry attack on the city which is walled, Cantonese bombers appeared and showered the city with high explosives, resulting in the French Cathedral and mission buildings being destroyed along with a large number of other structures. Two priests and four Canadian sisters in the cathedral escaped injury.

The aerial raid resulted in heavy casualties among the Chinese.

PROBATE JUDGES DISCUSSED INHERITANCE TAX PROBLEMS

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 13—(AP)—Inheritance tax problems were discussed today by the more than 30 judges of the various probate districts in the state, gathered at New Haven Yacht club for their quarterly meeting.

The effect of the recent supreme court holding charitable and educational institutions subject to an inheritance tax where there was any possibility of directors or members profiting at some future time was the principal topic for discussion.

RAIN MIGHT SAVE MICH. TOWN FROM FOREST FIRE

SAULT STE MARIE, Ont., Aug. 13—(AP)—A forest fire, driven by a west wind, with a frontage of five to ten miles was sweeping toward Strongs, Mich., a town of 500 inhabitants some 40 miles from Sault Michigan, this afternoon. The fire was burning in slash and had already burned over 32 square miles in the heart of one of the richest big game areas in the upper peninsula.

A drizzling rain started to fall, and it was hoped that the precipitation might save the village.

SHAMROCK V, LIPTON'S AMERICA'S CUP CHALLENGER, IN NEW LONDON HARBOR

NEW LONDON, Aug. 13—(AP)—Perhaps it presages nothing but Shamrock V, Sir Thomas Lipton's fifth challenger for the America's cup dropped anchor here this evening after an ocean passage one day earlier than did her predecessor, Shamrock IV, the unsuccessful challenger of a decade ago.

Shamrock V made a land to land passage in 26 days and she fought unfavorable weather fully half of the voyage. There was a headwind from the southwest until she reached the Azores, her officers reported. Then the breeze shifted and blew from the northeast, again heading her.

Sir Thomas' challenger received, as some of his compatricts described it, a typical English reception. There was little noise. A few whistles tooted and the coast guard boats dipped their colors as she came up the harbor, but there was nothing of the boisterous in the greeting to Britain's hope of regaining the yachting rule of the ocean which she lost to the schooner yacht America, in 1851.

True, she arrived after most shops and factories had released their steam whistles and dismissed their forces. Nevertheless the few boats that circled the trim green challenger as she came up the harbor, were a poor indication of an American spontaneity of spirit.

Two coast guard ships acted as an escort for Shamrock V, and Sir Thomas Lipton's private yacht Erin, which accompanied her, as they came up the Thames. She had passed Montauk Point, N. Y., at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and came abreast of Race Rock, off the harbor entrance, at 5 p. m. It was 5:55 p. m., when she cast off the tow line under which the Erin had guided her in stately silence up the harbor.

Shamrock V remained at her anchorage out in the stream tonight while the Erin was warped into a wharf of the Electric Boat works to unload the challenger's spare spars. When the Erin leaves the dock to steam up to New York to take on board the doughty Sir Thomas, who is arriving on a liner, the Shamrock V, will, for the first time, tie up to American soil.

NEW WEST TO EAST CROSS COUNTRY PLANE RECORD

Captain Hawks Made the Flight in 22 Hours, 25 Minutes, 3 Seconds—Bettered Record Held by the Lindberghs by More than Two Hours—Hawks Averaged About 200 Miles an Hour—For a Time He Made 250 Miles an Hour—Made Three Refueling Stops VALLEY STREAM, N. Y., Aug 13—(AP)—Beating by more than two hours the Transcontinental air record Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh took from him last April, Capt. Frank M. Hawks flew from Glendale, Calif., to Curtiss Field today in 12 hours, 25 minutes and three seconds.

By bettering the Lindbergh time of 14 hours and 45 minutes Hawks became holder of the speed records for crossing the country in both directions, for just a week ago today he flew the east-west course in 14 hours, 50 minutes and 43 seconds, beating the record for the westward flight held by Roscoe Turner by more than four hours.

In a year and a half Hawks has practically cut in half the time needed to fly between the Atlantic and the Pacific. When he began his series of transcontinental flights in February of last year, the fastest time had been made by the late C. B. D. Collyer, who flew from east to west in 24 hours and 15 minutes.

Hawks has twice before held the west-east record, once beating his own time and losing his second record to the Lindberghs. On today's flight he stayed at about 8,000 feet altitude, considerably lower than the Lindberghs. He averaged about 200 miles an hour butt at one time, east of Wichita, he made 250.

Leaving the west coast at 5:16:27 (e. s. t.) this morning, he touched ground here at 5:41:30 shooting to earth like a red and white meteor flung from the red glare of the setting sun. He made refueling stops on the way at Albuquerque, Wichita and Indianapolis.

As soon as he had taxied up to the cheering crowd of several hundred he cut his engine and pulled out a paper bag containing chicken sandwiches and was munching one when his wife and son reached him. He was so deafened by the roar of his engine that at first he could not hear any of the questions shouted at him by reporters.

Slipping off his parachute, flying suit and helmit he jumped from the cockpit of the little low wing monoplane and apparently entirely untired by his race against the clock, walked into the field office where he told of his flight, of perfect plane and engine performance, of a haze that almost hid the earth from him all the way and of winds that prevented him by a narrow margin from realizing his ambition to cross the country in 12 hours.

Hawks had a triple hoodoo to contend with on his flight, for not only is his ship numbered T 13 but the day he chose for the flight was the 13th and his department of commerce license number is 13-13.

Shortly after his arrival Hawks left for New York under police escort with a party of official welcomers representing Mayor James J. Walker.

TO HELP RID THE STREETS OF CHICAGO OF HOODLUMS

CHICAGO, Aug. 13—(AP)—Judge John H. Lyle, took a hand in the gang cleanup today, pledging the backing of his municipal court in ridding the streets of hoodlums.

While he was in conference with a group of police captains one of the most notroious of gangsters, Jack McGurn, was granted liberty under $10,000 bail and a review by the state supreme court of his conviction for carrying a pistol.

McGurn, once indicted for the Moran gang massacre of 1929, was sentenced to a year in prison for carrying concealed weapons after being convicted by a criminal court jury.

Judge Lyle was censured by some jurists last week after he sentenced two gunmen to jail for carrying concealed weapons without giving jury trials. He said today he was ready to assume the responsibility for jailing gangsters and let the higher courts review his rulings.

"You men need not be afraid of being bawled out for picking up known hoodlums on suspicion," the judge told the police officers he had called into conference. "Our object is to drive them out of this district. I suppose as soon as this drive gets under way we will be annoyed by these gangsters' attorneys. Well, if they become too annoying we'll see if we cannot toss them into cells also."

HE KEPT APPOINTMENTS BY SWIMMING DETROIT RIVER

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 13—(AP)—Theodore Demulver of Grosse Point, Mich., couldn't keep his appointment with David A. Croll, his Windsor, Canada, attorney, today for two reasons:

The water in the Detroit river was too chilly and the police wouldn't let him.

The Grosse Point chief of police expresses Demulver's regrets to Croll, only then did the attorney learn that Demulver, barred by immigration officials from entering Canada, had been swimming the river to keep his appointments.

Demulver carried his clothes in a rubber bag and had made several such trips before police terminated the expeditions.

AMELIA EARHART NOW CORPORATION EXECUTIVE

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—Vice-President Earhart of the N. Y., P. & W. Airway Corporation swung around in her swivel chair, tucked one foot under her, and looked most unlike a corporation vice president.

She gestured at the files she'd been sorting in an unfinished office, and remarked that things would look different around there by the first of September.

Vice President Earhart—Miss Amelia Earhart, first woman to fly the Atlantic Ocean—is to have charge of the New York office of the corporation, as its only woman official, when it starts hourly airplane service from New York to Philadelphia and Washington in a few weeks.

SIX-FOOT SEAL SEEN ON BEACH NEAR NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 13—(AP)—A six-foot seal today tried out bathing facilities of the Connecticut shore at Shell beach, near here. Early risers saw him stretched out on a rock and got cameras to prove it wasn't a fish story. The seal didn't mind the publicity and posed for several pictures residents say. Then he slipped into the water for a swim.

In recent years seals have been few and far between at this section although at one time they were quite common in New Haven harbor.

150 FAMILIES MADE HOMELESS BY $250,000 FIRE AT MASSON, QUE.

MASSON, Que., Aug. 13—(AP)—Fifty structures were destroyed with an estimated loss of $250,000, 150 families were made homeless and an elderly woman died today in a fire that left the eastern half of this village in smouldering ruins.

The conflagration was brought under control this afternoon through the efforts of every able-bodied man in the district and fire brigades from neighboring towns. Mrs. Joseph La Flamme succumbed to a heart attack as she hurried to escape the flames. Two children were reported missing but were believed to have been lost in the confusion.

Chief among the structures razed were the town hall, the Notre Dame Des Neiges Catholic church, the Notre Dame Convent, St. Jean Baptiste hall and its separate school. Six or more business establishments were burned. The majority of the houses were of wooden construction.

Many of the dwellings held two or more families and a serious housing shortage resulted. Furniture, clothing and personal effects were carried from the fire into nearby fields and the families prepared to stand guard through the night.

The fire was believed to have started in a pool room and it spread rapidly.

PAPE APPEALING FOR THE OVERTHROW OF RORABACK

WATERBURY, Aug. 13—(AP)—William J. Pape, candidate for the republican nomination for state controller on the Levitt ticket, is sending letters to all republicans in the city urging them to assist in electing delegates to the republican state convention, pledged to unseat Republican State Chairman J. Henry Roraback.

The letter charges that Mr. Roraback's dual position as state chairman and president of the Connecticut Light and Power company, "is discreditable to the republicans of the state." It declares that Mr. Roraback is "a gentleman, and socially, a fine fellow," but that "officially, he is a perfect specimen of the cave man in politics." It charges that he "misrepresents us and misgoverns the republican party and when necessary to his ends, he also corrupts the democratic party," and that "he is in politics solely for the benefit of his own corporations and his own pocket."

R-100 STARTED ON RETURN TO ENGLAND AT 8:28 P. M.

ST. HUBERT AIRPORT, Montreal, Aug. 13—(AP)—Great Britain's monarch of the airways, the dirigible R-100 soared away from her mooring mast at 8:28 tonight (e.s.t.), bound for England on her return crossing of the Atlantic.

Squadron Leader Booth was in command and a party of 15 newspapermen and Canadian technical officers were aboard, in addition to the ship's complement of 44 officers and men. Peering downward, the passengers saw in huge letters of gold, illuminated by floodlights, the words "bon voyage R-100—Canada."

In spite of the fact that only five of six motors were in action, the officers expected favorable tailwind to aid them in achieving their second record for the ocean flight. They expected to make the return trip in 48 hours, tieing up at the Cardington mooring mast Saturday morning.

ELKS TAKE 1100 CHILDREN TO BEACH FOR OUTING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 13—This city was like a deserted town today with all retail and banking business closed in observance of Clerks' day and hundreds of people gone to Cresent Beach, Niantic, to convey more than 1,100 children, guests of Willimantic lodge No. 1311, B. P. O. Elks on a day's outing.

While the mercury was down to below 60 degrees when the start of the long auto cavalcade was made from Elks' park on Pleasant street this forenoon, the temeprature rose gradually to over 85 degrees which made bathing quite comfortable. Although John H. Wilcox and his Elks' committee had left no stone unturned to provide sufficient transportation for all the children there were those car owners who were reticent about participating in the movement. After all six busses and 146 private cars had been loaded there still remained in line 80 little ones fearful that they would be "left out of the picture." Such was not to be their fate, however, for the committeemen hustled them along the long line of automobiles and wherever a little squeezing was possible a little tot filled the vacant spot so that finally all were aboard and the big party was on.

Under leadership of Past Exalted Ruler Maurice S. Leonard and an escort of officers from the Stafford Springs barracks the trek to the beach was started up Main street to Columbia, through Hebron and Colchester, along the New London turnpike and so to the beach. This route was used for the first time in the three years that the outing has been held and is intended to avoid traffic in the vicinity of Norwich and New London. The officers in the escort were State Policemen Kenneth Stevens and Charles F. Dailey of the barracks at Stafford and Motorcycle Officer Arthur Hurley of the police department. In the official cars were members of the outing committee headed by Chairman Wilcox, Past District Deputy John B. Edgarton and Eugene E. Hickey. The Red Cross car bearing Dr. S. J. Turcotte and the Misses Margaret Young and May Connors, registered nurses, followed. The commissary trucks, bearing lunches, soda water and other good things had left previously. Each car was tagged with a number corresponding to a ticket held by every child, this eliminating confusion and giving a definite check on each child. The Knights of Columbus Boys' band made the trip to the beach again this year. At the beach this juvenile organization pleased a large audience of children and grown ups. The band visited the crippled kiddies at Seaside sanatorium who were also treated to refreshments by the Elks' committee. Also guests of the Elks for the outing were the members of the boys' baseball team sponsored by the lodge. After a whole day of good cheer and happiness the children, many of whom tasted salt water for the first time, arrived back home about 6 o'clock each with his own excited little story to tell mother. Good fortune as well as careful planning and supervision attended the outing, for it was reported late this afternoon that the big event was not marred by a single mishap.

There was an attendance of 60, including lady guests, at the outing of the Exchange club held in William F. Maine's pine grove at Mansfield Four Corners Tuesday. Dr. and Mrs. Harry Ballou of the Mansfield State Hospital and Training school were among invited guests. This committee consists of Dixon VanZandt, C. H. Case, Samuel Chesbro, Alfred Abbe and Oliver L. Willard. Another outing will be held August 26, at "Big Bluff" cottage, owned by Samuel Chesbro at Columbia lake.

Two pleasure cars collided under the east railroad underpass of the New Haven railroad at Andover about noon today when a Michigan machine proceeded down the grade to the underpass at what was said to be an excessive rate of speed, and sideswiped a Connecticut owned car. Many apple growers in this section are finding their bumper crops getting damaged by the apple magot, a pest that comes out of the ground, bores its way quickly through the ripened applees and then returns to the ground where it remains out of harm's way for the remainder of the year. Methods to combat the magot are being studied by experts of Connecticut Agricultural college.

Many a neck was craned skyward today in the hope of seeing the U. S. Navy dirigible Los Angeles pass over the city on its journey from Boston to New Jersey. Contrary to the reports which caused this observance of the skies the ship took a route south of this city, passing over the nothern part of Lebanon after leaving Putnam.

Allan Carr, minister of St. Peter's church, preached Sunday in three different places. First in Windham Center, at 9 o'clock in the Episcopal church; second in St. Peter's Episcopal church, Hebron, at 11 and at 3 p. m., in the Episcopal church at Colchester. His text was: "Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh." Romans 8.12.

Visitors at the Congregational church Sunday were: Miss Virginia Ward, of Norwich, Dr. and Mrs. Charles J. Douglas of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Gibson Preston, of Brooklyn, N. Y., Miss Amanda Davis of Baldwin, L. I., and Miss Adele Adams of New York.

Visitors in St. Peter's church, Aug. 10th, came from Lebanon and other places.

Twenty gathered Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Hilding and family, to attend a C. E. meeting. The topic was "How to Become Truly Popular." Refreshments were served.

Ninety Candles on Cake

Mrs. Chester Wilcox reached her 90th birthday recently. There was a family gathering in her honor, at the home of her son, Eugene, with whom she lives. Among those present were her son, Dr. Fred Wilcox, of Willimantic, Mrs. Esther Wolfe, and Mrs. Emily Cochran, daughters, both of Springfield, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bannister and Mrs. Dorothy Bannister Nichols, of Providence. The last mentioned, is Mrs. Wilcox's granddaughter and brought her a fine birthday cake with 90 candles on it. She also received numerous other remembrances from friends.

A food and fancy work sale is being arranged.

Judge and Mrs. Albert Mathewson, of New Haven, attended church on the Hill recently.

DANIELSON PEOPLE SEE THE LOS ANGELES PASSING

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Aug. 13—"The Los Angeles!" That call rang out all over Danielson about 10:30 this morning as the giant U. S. navy dirigible soared majestically over the borough. Out of homes, out of business places and out of automobiles poured the population of this community. It was said later that employes in mills crowded the windows seeking a glimpse of the beautiful airship. What happened in Danielson was repeated in Dayville and in Goodyear. At Goodyear the Los Angeles dipped so low as to give some the momentary impression that she seemed about to make a landing, which, of course, could not be done without a ground crew.

The dirigible was no more than 500 feet up when directly over Danielson's section, and traveling so slowly that all had a splendid opportunity to watch it. The speed over Danielson appeared to be about 20 to 25 miles an hour.

Word was telephoned to towns to the south from Danielson of the coming of the airship, so that as many as possible might have a look at it.

Again today state officers of the Danielson barracks were engaged in checking cars to determine the condition of the brakes. Today's operations were largely in the town of Woodstock. As the result of the activities of the officers in that town Eugene Donais of Plainfield and Eben Dodge of Woodstock were ordered to appear in justice court in Woodstock, to answer to a charge of operating machines with very defective brakes.

The local state officers will continue checking cars for a week in their territory. The work was started Tuesday of this week.

On the strength of the census re-turns for Killingly, as made a few weeks ago, there is expectancy that the enumeration of children of school age within the limits of the town will show an increase this year. This enumeration is made each year in September, and includes all children of the town from 4 to 16 years of age. The town receives from the state $2.23 for each child enumerated.

Of all the Danielson men that served in the 18th Connecticut Volunteers in the Civil war only three are now living here. They are Colonel Henry W. Babson, who will preside as president at the 62nd annual reunion at Norwich on Friday; Rowlan R. James of Oak street and Thomas Bates of Elmville. Neither Mr. James nor Mr. Bates will be able to be in Norwich for the reunion this year. Each of these veterans of the Civil war has passed his 93rd birthday.

A death this morning at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam was that of Mary Bodo, two year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bodo of Mechanic street, Danielson. The body was brought to the home here by Undertaker L. E. Kennedy.

This proved a great day for the Windham County Farmer's association field day at the Brooklyn fair grounds. The weather was delightful, the attendance good, the dinner greatly enjoyed. The speaking and programme of entertainment added to the pleasure of the day.

A suggestion heard today was that some poles that line the curb on the westerly side of Main street in the central part of the business section should be removed. They serve no useful purpose at the present time, one of them carrying no wires or anything else. This particular pole regularly causes damage to automobile fenders as drivers try to park their cars or in getting them away from the curb. The poles that many would see removed formerly held part of the overhead of the discontinued trolley line.

A large number assembled at Davis park this evening to hear the concert sponsored by the American Legion. It was the first event of the kind on the park this summer. Music was by a 15-piece orchestra under the direction of Clinton Ellison, and there were also vocal numbers.

Coroner Arthur G. Bill said this morning that the condition of Miss Anna Spitz, patient at the Day Kimball hospital, has precluded his questioning her about the accident in which she was injured at Central Village a week ago last Sunday. The death yesterday afternoon of Mary Mrazick at the hospital, another member of the Webster party that figured in the automobile wreck, was without her having made any statement relative to the affair. Her condition had been so critical from the time she was injured that she could not be interviewed relative to the matter.

Rev. and Mrs. J. Rees Jones, with Mrs. Jones' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cartlidge of Moosejaw, Sask., who have been visiting here after a trip to England, will leave Monday for a motor trip to Toronto by way of Niagara Falls. Mr. and Mrs. Cartlidge will proceed from Toronto to their home, Rev. and Mrs. Jones returning here after a period of two weeks.

Miss Ruth Winslow, daughter of Assistant Postmaster and Mrs. Earle F. Winslow of Elmville, has returned from attendance at the summer school of Skidmore college at Saratoga Springs. Miss Winslow, who will be a senior at LaSalle academy at Auburndale, Mass., this fall, has now completed three years of summer courses at Skidmore. She is majoring in music.

Dr. and Mrs. Warren A. Tanner of Academy street and their son, Junior, are very happily situated at a camp at White's pond, near Newport, Me. They find the country delightful. They will not return to Danielson for another week or ten days.

Louis Lague, a former resident of Danielson and proprietor of a barber shop here for many years, has successfully undergone a major surgical operation at St. Vincent's hospital in Worcester. Mr. Lague is the father of Henry Lague and Mrs. Frank M. Bedard of Danielson.

Miss Mary Walsh of School street, a member of the clerical staff in the Danielson division offices of the Connecticut Light and Power company, is spending part of her vacation with relatives in Bridgeport.

After Thursday of this week only two more half-holidays remain for store forces here for the present summer. On the first Thursday in September numbers of the stores that have been closing Thursday afternoons July and August will discontinue the practice.

It was so cool during the early hours of this morning in Danielson as to threaten frost, the mercury dropping to 48 degrees.

LOCAL CHURCH EXTENDS CALL TO WESTERN PASTOR

Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Aug. 13—The committee charge with selecting a successor to Rev. James F. English, former pastor of the Congregational church, announced last night that it had extended a call to Rev. Joseph Vasey of Terre Haute, Ind. Ernest C. Morse, chairman of the committee, said that the members of the group were unanimous in approving of the western clergyman as a successor to Rev. Mr. English. On August 3 Rev. Mr. Vasey supplied the pulpit at the local church.

Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, nationally known clergyman, was among the endorsers of Rev. Mr. Vasey's qualifications. It was said today that he may assume the local pastorate in October. Rev. Mr. Masey is known for his interest in community civic affairs and is said to be deeply interested in literary pursuits. He is 38 years of age and was born in England, but is now a citizen of the United States. His religious training was received at the College of Theology at Cambridge university. He was ordained to the ministry following a probationary period of four years, which he served according to an English custom. During the World war Rev. Mr. Vasey saw service with the British expeditionary forces at Mesopotamia and in Persia. His first American pastorate was at West Burke, Vermont, coming there four years after the war. He is married and has two children. Mrs. Vasey is a graduate of Dublin university and is said to be a talented musical artist.

MRS. G. W. GILPATRIC TAKES OWN LIFE WITH GAS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Aug. 13—Mrs. Jessie I. Gilpatric, widow of George W. Gilpatric, for nearly a half century a widely known and highly esteemed resident of this city was found dead at her home on Fremont street this morning. After viewing the body, Dr. F. A. Morrell, medical examiner for Putnam, said Mrs. Gilpatric died a suicidal death, caused by asphixiation by illuminating gas. She was in her 75th year.

Other than despondency over her impaired health, relatives were at a loss today in explaining her act. Mrs. Gilpatric underwent a major operation a year ago and since had been in a state of failing health. About a week ago her illness became acute, bringing on what is believed to have been a complete nervous break down.

Complaining that she was not feeling well, Mrs. Gilpatric did not join the members of her family at the evening meal. Considering her circumstances, the aged woman retired last night in seemingly good spirits. At an early hour this morning, a sister, Mrs. Etta Hodges, and Richard Gilpatric, a grandson, were attracted to the kitchen by the odor of escaping gas. Entering they found the kitchen filled with gas and the body ofthe sister and grandmother. Medical Examiner Morrell after viewing the body said that death had taken place about two hours earlier.

Mrs. Gilpatric was born in Worcester on April 5, 1856, the daughter of Addison S. and Esther (Gossner) Hodges. The early years of her life were spent in Worcester where she obtained her education. Later the family removed to Salem, Mass. In 1875 she was married to George W. Gilpatric and shortly after, the couple came to Putnam, Mr. Gilpatric becoming agent of the Adams Express office here. After a number of years in this capacity, Mr. Gilpatric entered the coal, wood and lumber business becoming a partner in the Whipple and Gilpatric Co. Her husband's death occurred about two years ago.

Three children, two of whom survive their mother, were born to Mr. and Mrs. Gilpatric. They are F. Raymond Gilpatric of New Britain, an official of the Stanley Tool works and Walter H. Gilpatric, a New York attorney. G. Harold Gilpatric, former state treasurer and banker, died on February 15, 1927. Mrs. Gilpatric is also survived by a sister, Miss Hodges, of Malden, Mass., and three grandchildren, Miss Rhoda, Richard H., and George H. Jr., who reside on Church street.

Until the recent impairment of her health, Mrs. Gilpatric took an interest in the affairs of the Elizabeth Porter Putnam Chapter of D. A. R., and the local chapter of American Red Cross, societies with which she was affiliated. In recognition of meritous services performed by her, the Red Cross chapter was awarded a special medal. Mrs. Gilpatric was a staunch member of the Congregational church of this city.

The sudden passing of Mrs. Gilpatric was a sorrowful occurrence and her many friends in this city and neighboring communities where she was well known as a genial friend and companion, joined with relatives in mourning her death.

Los Angeles Passes Over.

All the city was thrilled this morning as the pride of the U. S. Navy's air fleet—the dirigible "Los Angeles" —pointing her silver tipped, cigar-shaped nose out of the north this morning and sailed noiseless and majestically over the town while practically the entire populace of the community stood gaping below at the spectacular and awe inspiring sight. With all of her motors purring an aerial overture, the giant greyhound of the skies glistened radiantly in the light of the morning sun as she slipped swiftly through space to disappear in the haze of the southern horizon.

A fine of $50 and costs was paid by Carl Anderson, youthful Southbridge, Mass., bootlegger, when he was found guilty of owning and keeping for sale a quantity of intoxicating liquor at the stone bridge dance pavilion in South Woodstock last Friday evening. Anderson was arraigned for the second time in a week before Justice A. R. Scranton in South Woodstock today. Through his attorney, Irving H. Miron of this city, he entered a plea of guilty to the single charge and promptly paid the fine.

It was understood today that agents of the town's opposing political forces are scouting for political timber to be placed on the fall tickets. As there is little possibility of the staff of republican town officials now in office being changed, the present indications are that the democrats will make a determined effort to maintain their footing gained in Putnam two years ago when they elected two of their candidates to seats in the house of representatives. This was the first democratic victory of this nature to be recorded in Putnam's political histories and it served to place the republicans on the offensive this year.

A large portion of the membership of the Putnam Rotary club attended the annual clambake and field day of the Windham County Farmers' association, which was held today at the Brooklyn fair grounds. The farmers' outing was substituted for the weekly meeting of the club which is held Wednesdays at the Putnam Inn. Rotarians unable to attend the farmers' outing, were present at an informal round table session which was held at the Inn at noon today.

William Bennett of Hampton was presented in police court this morning by State Officer George Martin of the Danielson barracks. He was charged with having operated an unregistered car and when found guilty, was fined $1 and costs by Judge M. H. Geissler. Bennett was uncertain as to whether or not he actually resided in Gallouville or Hampton and for some unexplained reason he took up several minutes of the court's time trying to identify himself as a resident of Gallouville. Officer Martin established the defendant's home as being located in Hampton which was followed by the imposing of the fine by Judge Geissler.

Postmaster Archibald Macdonald of George street has returned to his home after a two weeks visit with relatives in Nova Scotia.

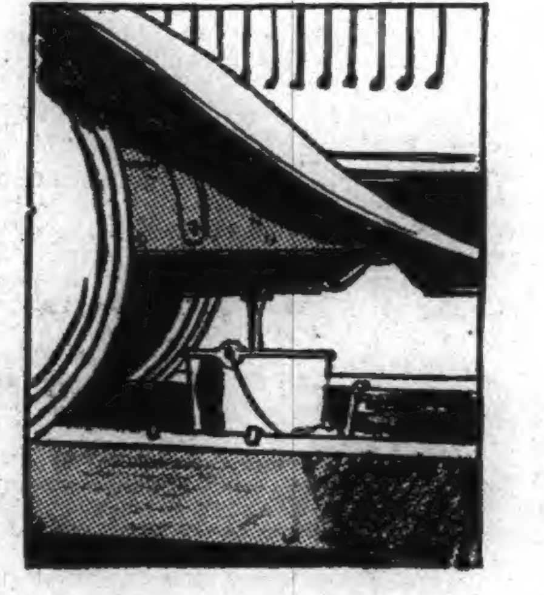
Through Heat

High speeds over scorching roads.

Down in the motor . . . greater heat. Up go the revolutions per minute. Up goes the temperature of every moving part. PAN-AM "stands up under fire" at temperatures far above ordinary motor-heat.



Stands Up

The long grind is over . . . long past the life of ordinary motor oil. Rigid examination showed that PAN-AM kept its full body and color.

PAN-AM motor-tested motor oil stands up like a soldier full of fight and ready to "keep going."

Less Carbon

PAN-AM oils proved, in the motors, that they deposit 50% less carbon, by actual weight, than other high-class motor oils.

THE DROUGHT CONFERENCE

The governors of the twelve states most seriously affected by the drought have been invited by President Hoover to meet him and other federal officials in conference at Washington today for consideration of relief plans. The range of discussion will cover all phases of the situation and out of the exchange of ideas there is expected to issue a concerted and balanced programme for dealing with it. As a working basis the conference will have a recent government survey which showed that the shortage of animal feed crops is most acute in southeastern Missouri, northern Arkansas, the southern part of Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio, the northern parts of West Virginia and Virginia, with lesser shortages in Montana, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

The first duty, as Mr. Hoover asserts in a public statement, "is to assure our countrymen that the nation will take care of their necessities." The second duty is to set up the sort of machinery that will administer relief with the maximum of efficiency and method.

Nothing of an alarmist attitude attaches to the president's statement, but the tone of his utterance reflects a studious facing of facts. He says: "The situation is one to cause a great deal of concern, but it must be borne in mind that the drought has mainly affected animal feed, the bulk of the direct human food production of the country being abundant. Nevertheless, there will be a great deal of privation among families in the drought area, due to the loss of income and the financial difficulties imposed upon them to carry their animals over the winter."

On the statistical side it is stated that the regions most affected by drought contain "approximately one million farm families, who possess about 2,250,000 horses and mules, 5,000,000 cattle and 12,000,000 hogs and sheep." Therefore about one-sixth of the agricultural population and one-eighth of the nation's livestock are involved, rather seriously.

President Hoover's vigorous and conservative course is well calculated to reassure residents of the stricken areas and to maintain their courage and spirit. Serious as the effects of the drought may be, the nation's material and moral sources are more than equal to the new demands upon them.

POINTERS FROM PRIMARIES

Results in primary elections in several states on Tuesday indicated that support of candidates for election in November could well be waged along wet and dry lines in at least two of the states where primaries were held. In Ohio the democrats made a mixed choice, nominating a dry for governor and a wet for United States senator. In the senatorial race there were five candidates. The winner, Robert J. Buckley of Cleveland, will be opposed to the republican nominee, Senator McCulloch, who is a dry. The prohibition issue also promises to furnish spice in the campaign in Oklahoma, where Thomas P. Gore, the blind senator, was the winner in the run-off and will be opposed to Senator Pine, republican, who is a dry. Senator Joseph Robinson of Arkansas, who was the running mate of Alfred E. Smith, wins a re-nomination. With Smith he was teamed up with a wet partner, but in the primary he has been known as a dry.

In Nebraska the defection of Senator George W. Norris from the republican ranks two years ago to campaign for Alfred E. Smith had not been enough to defeat him for re-nomination and this notable insurgent promises to return to the senate and continue to be a thorn in the flesh of the Hoover administration.

Alabama barred Senator Heflin from the primary for bolting the democratic ticket two years ago, but he seeks re-election as an independent and will rally his supporters in county conventions. The regular democratic primary on Tuesday gave the nomination to John H. Bankhead, son of a former senator, who defeated F. I. Thompson, a Mobile publisher.

In a number of ways Tuesday was the red-letter day of the month of primaries.

BETTER FOR BABIES

According to a report just issued by the American Child Health association, covering the year 1929, there is a continuing downward trend of infant mortality in the cities of the United States. For the year named there were 66.2 deaths among each thousand births. Next to the rate of 64.9 attained in 1927, the rate for 1929 is the lowest ever recorded for the cities of the country. At the time when the birth registration area was instituted fifteen years ago for the collection of dependable information, the death rate was nearly 100, but there has been an almost continuous decline since then and today the rate is but two-thirds what it was just after the World war started.

The report covers 720 cities in the birth registration area, which now includes 46 states and the District of Columbia, which have satisfactory registration laws and record 90 per cent of the births. The report is not concerned with the methods by which this highly satisfactory showing has been achieved, but it is easy to understand that the growing public consciousness of the value of protecting human infant life is exercising its influence. This has resulted in a growth of the public health nursing service, one of whose lines of helpfulness is in pre-natal instruction, and other services which have contributed to produce better conditions for babies have been better sanitary regulations for homes, milk inspection, food inspection and infant clinics.

If there were any choice about it, a baby should elect to be born on the Pacific coast, for it is the cities of that region which continue their undisputed leadership as the banner home for babies, but all over the United States, the report shows, we are trying to make each year a better one for our babies.

THE THIRD EMIGRATION

The Russian government is having a problem on its hands caused by soviet citizens appointed to diplomatic or other posts abroad who refuse to return home when ordered to do so. This preference for other lands than their own is reported to have reached such numbers as to deserve the title of the "third emigration". There have been two other Russian emigrations that preceded it, the first of the socialists and anarchists in the days of the czar, and the second of the one or two million Russians who fled from the bolshevist terror. Now the soviet government is finding that numbers of its officials sent to foreign posts refuse to obey orders to return to soviet domains. The penalty for such refusal is death and confiscation of goods.

One of the most prominent of the soviet officials who showed reluctance to return to the land of Lenin was the counsellor of the embassy at Paris, who escaped over the embassy wall and threw himself and his family under the protection of the French police when agents from Moscow were sent to compel his return there by force. Of the minor officials who become convinced that the soviet Utopia is a good place to keep clear of, the number is said to run into hundreds.

To the true communist such reluctance to return to a land where full enjoyment of the application of communistic principles is to be had must seem incomprehensible, but to the outside view the "third emigration" is an interesting and striking indication of conditions of tyranny prevailing in soviet Russia. When government officials, presumably selected for their special zeal in the cause, desert the ship of state in considerable numbers, there is reason to believe that the soviet system ought to be confined to Russia, where the czarist tyranny has been exchanged for that which prevails now.

PAYROLL ROBBERIES

It is a fairly familiar suggestion which is made by the special committee of the national crime commission appointed to consider the problem of payroll robberies. Their suggestion is for the more general use of checks instead of cash in making payroll payments. One of the repercussions from this recommendation by the committee is the resignation of six or seven of its banker members who look upon the recommendation as a surrender to the payroll bandits and an admission that the police powers are unable to provide the protection which business should expect.

Secretary of Labor Davis has expressed the hope that employes would withdraw their objection to the check payment system in order that there might be a reduction in the annual loss of life and money under the present practice. Some of this opposition has been justified by the trouble and expense to which employes are often subjected in the cashing of checks. The first need is a workable system which will eliminate these objections.

To this end the committee recommends simplification of pay checks to make them easily negotiable, the guaranteeing by employers to meet any expense incurred in cashing them, special protection for the banks against forged endorsements and also reimbursement for their additional services. In a recent year, according to the report, there were 85 payroll hold-ups in New York metropolitan districts, 16 in Philadelphia and 17 in Chicago. More than a million dollars were stolen and 19 persons were killed in such hold-ups in the first five months of 1930. It is probable that the general substitution of checks for cash will be long delayed, but there are some precautions which employers could adopt for the protection of payroll carriers. One of these would be to vary the routes and times which messengers follow when making their payroll trips from the bank to the employer's office.

The national banks have increased their resources $1,768,041,000 since March 27, but the stock market isn't doing so much business as it did last summer.

The discovery that 500 bottles of confiscated beer contained nothing more than colored water will be a great shock to those people who have such implicit faith in their bootleggers.

As the Chinese government doesn't seem to be able to handle those communists, civilization may have to turn to, and do for them, and to them, what it did for the Boxers 30 years ago.

AUNT AGATHA'S GIFT

"Bob," she began feebly, "you know that gift from Aunt Aggie?"

Bob rolled his eyes in mock concern. "Hide the thing. She meant well, poor dear, but that thing was never meant for our apartment."

"She usually has such a beautiful taste in gifts, too." Joan did not know what to make of the vase Aunt Agatha had given them.

"I wonder where she bought it?" Joan asked slowly, deep in thought.

"Nix," Bob raised a protesting hand. "Don't let her catch you trying to get a refund. You mustn't look a gift horse in the mouth." The last he said with a humorous wink.

"I'm not," Joan defended herself. "But there are so many thinks I would have liked better. That piece of bronze I saw at Orton's, for the top of the radio. Aunt Agatha knew I wanted it."

"Well, we'll have to make the best of it," Bob sighed as he was putting on his coat. "I guess the only thing to do is put it in storage in the spare room, and bring it out whenever she makes a visit."

"But I did so want that bronze statue." Joan gazed a bit mournfully at the vase long after Bob had kissed her farewell.

All morning Joan kept the vase in mind. Suppose she did exchange it for something she needed. Aunt Agatha need never know. Why not?

A hurried examination of the wrappings finally rewarded Joan with the name of the shop where the atrocious vase had been purchased. Donning her coat and hat, Joan wrapped the vase carefully. With the vase under her arm she set off for the loop, hoping that Orton's had the bronze she had so admired.

The manager of Orton's smiled a bit knowingly when Joan recited a tale she had rehearsed all the way on the train. Taking the vase he wrote a hasty note to the saleslady in the gift section. He was quite used to this sort of thing. And he knew Aunt Agatha very well.

"Thank you ever so much," Joan murmured as she went with a light heart to the gift section, a bit guilty, but happy in the thought that at last she should get something she really wanted, instead of the horrible vase that Aunt Agatha had sent with the best of intentions.

With the bronze statue in her possession Joan set off for home. If worse came to worst she could tell Aunt Agatha that the vase had been accidentally broken beyond repair.

Bob returned at night a bit tired but not too tired to notice that Joan did not seem at ease. He guessed she was thinking about the vase. Joan really did hate to see something like that wasted. There was nothing she hated more than a gift that was not pleasant.

"Well, I did it," Joan confessed at dinner. "The man at Orton's was very nice about it, though."

"My only regret is that poor Aunt Agatha will feel pretty bad if she ever finds out," Bob announced.

"She mustn't ever know," Joan warned. "I wouldn't know what to say. I hate to lie to her, she's so sweet and well-meaning."

"Well," Bob announced, "she'll never find out from me."

"The bronze is really very charming though, isn't it?" Joan asked as though she was seeking reassurance.

"Well, it's better than that vase, believe me!" was his curt reply.

A sharp ring at the door bell brought Joan to her feet, her eyes wide with apprehension. Bob guessed what she thought. "I hope it isn't Aunt Agatha," she whispered.

Bob returned from the door with a smile, thrusting an envelope into Joan's hand. "For you," was all he said.

Joan glanced up with fear in her eyes. "Bob!" she burst out, "it's from Aunt Agatha. She sent me the wrong gift. It was for an old friend. She's sending me that silver service she bought in London. What shall I do? She hopes we'll send her the vase."

Bob smiled impishly at her plight. "Get the vase back," he laughed, "and don't look a gift horse in the mouth after this."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13—Times have changed a lot since Jim Preston, superintendent of the senate press gallery, first became a contact officer for the senate with the press.

That was 33 years ago and Jim, son of a veteran Washington correspondent for the old New York Herald, had cultivated a typewriting gift in that early day of such things.

His senatorial beginnings were humble, however. He was just a senate messenger, assigned to help the news scribes of that day.

There were some 150 members of the press gallery then. Now it takes nearly 400 newswriters to fill in the nation and the world on senate doings.

And without doubt the lanky, genial and highly efficient Preston in the course of those three decades has acquired personal acquaintance with more newspaper men than anybody else.

They have marched through the rolls of the gallery list by the hundreds.

Also senators. Think of it—to have known at close range, if not intimately, every man who has served in the senate in 33 years. That's quite a chunk of American political history.

But Jim denies that the press gallery at large, or he as the senate's own man in the gallery, ever became intimate with the old masters of that body prior to popular election of senators.

In the old days of Aldrich and Allison and Hale, say, there were no such things as press conferences with senate leaders to which all reporters were welcome.

Preston holds that those worthies cared mighty little about publicity. They did not have to go gunning for popular approval.

Party irregularities within the senate were very rare, and sharply dealt with. The leaders mapped out what was to be done, and it was done. That was all there was to it.

Preston thinks development of the senatorial habit of preparing speeches in advance has re-educated senators on publicity values. They nearly all do it.

As a result, "stories" of what they are going to say are gleaned out of this advance material, slapped on the wires ahead of time and released when the senator starts talking.

Only Borah of Idaho and Harrison of Mississippi refuse to prepare advance copy. They talk extemporaneously, hot off the mental griddle.

Identified

"A man is easy to read," said Roberts to nobody in particular as he and a few of his friends lounged in the window of the club one evening. Just then a street car stopped in front of the window and Perkins and his wife and sister got off.

"Which one is his wife?" some one wanted to know. Nobody could answer until Roberts said: "She is the one he didn't help off the car."

YOUR HEALTH

When Baby Voices Distress Look to His Fresh Air and Quiet

By Ada E. Schweitzer, M. D., Indianapolis, Ind.
From Gorgas Memorial Institute, Washington, D. C.

Babies need undisturbed sleep in fresh air.

No reports of a baby's health is complete without a statement concerning certain essentials in his environment. These essentials influence the growth of the highly sensitive baby more than most of us realize.

Sunlight, the artificially produced ultra violet light rays, and cod liver oil have assisted in the growth of hundreds of babies. Every baby needs fresh air also. The method of giving sunbaths by exposure to direct sunlight insures fresh air at least during the sunbath. The fresh air exposure should be continuous both day and night. During hot, breezeless days or nights, some means of keeping the air next to the baby in motion should be devised.

Natives of India recognize the importance of air currents in promoting the radiation of body heat, and use huge fans to keep in motion the air. In a quiet corner on a sultry day, the air blanket surrounding the baby is soon warmed and unless provision is made for renewal of air by the creation of air currents, the radiation of heat takes place very slowly and the uncomfortable baby voices his distress. Excessive heat lowers his vitality, and makes him more susceptible to disease.

Thousands of babies owe their lives to electric fans so placed as to keep the air about the child in motion without exposure to the direct current or breeze created by the fan. The baby should have the air of an open window room to himself, uncontaminated by the breathing of adults. Where steam heat is used, the air is likely to be too dry, irritating the delicate respiratory passages, unless special provision is made to maintain proper humidity. Hot dry weather presents a similar problem.

Windows should be open day and night, summer and winter. Sun porches, sleeping porches, and outdoor sleep in a quiet place, all contribute to baby's health.

In many places, the desired quiet seems impossible of attainment and the tension of sleeping through a daily or hourly succession of sudden, loud noises is likely to make the baby cross and nervous. A change of environment to a quiet, airy location may bring about almost immediate improvement.

The tension of quarrels and family discords and the excitement of jazz are likely to be harmful. The family should be able to carry on the ordinary routine while the baby sleeps, but should learn to avoid sudden loud laughter, shouting, and so forth, which interfere with complete rest.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Striped Chipmunk Teases Peter Rabbit

The one who takes delight in teasing
You'll find is anything but pleasing.
—Peter Rabbit.

Peter Rabbit was disappointed. Striped Chipmunk had disappeared. He had dived down between the stones of the old stone wall without so much as saying good by. Peter sat there rather disconsolately, staring at the place where Striped Chipmunk had disappeared. There were more questions he wanted to ask Striped Chipmunk. Now there was no chance to ask them, and he felt cheated. A slight noise back of him drew his attention. Peter turned his head to look. Then he almost lost his balance. Yes, sir, he almost fell over backward! His eyes looked as if they would pop right out of his head. His mouth hung open as he stared. You see, right in front of him, on the top of the old stone wall, was a person dressed all in black. Moreover, this small person looked exactly like Striped Chipmunk, excepting for the coal-black coat.

"Why—why—why"— stammered Peter.

Instantly the little black stranger disappeared. He dived down between the stones of the old stone wall exactly as Striped Chipmunk would have done. He left Peter staring open mouthed at the spot where he had been sitting.

"What are you looking at so hard?" asked a rather sharp voice.

Peter whirled to find Striped Chipmunk sitting up beside the opening where he had disappeared only a moment or two before. He wore his usual striped coat. He acted as if nothing unusual had happened.

"Did you see him?" demanded Peter.

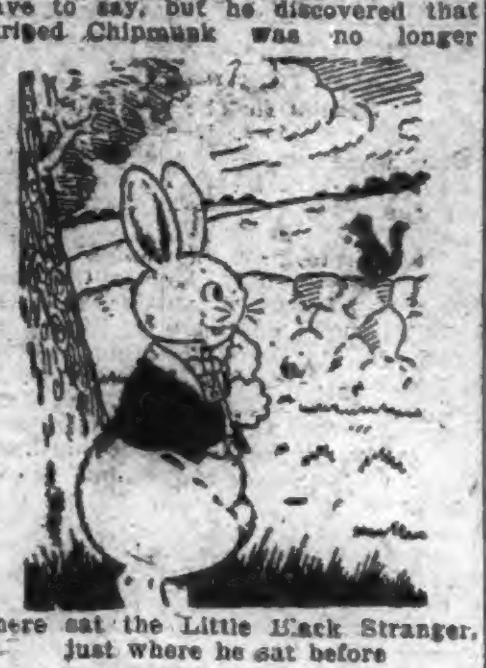
"Did I see whom?" asked Striped Chipmunk in the most innocent sounding voice.

"That black Chipmunk," said Peter.

"What black Chipmunk?" inquired Striped Chipmunk, pretending to look all about.

"He was right over there," said Peter, turning to show where he meant. "There he is now!"

Sure enough! There sat the little black stranger just where he had sat beofre. He turned his head once more to see what Striped Chipmunk would have to say, but he discovered that Striped Chipmunk was no longer there. And, when he hastily turned back, the little black stranger was no longer there. Peter actually rubbed his eyes. Then he looked again, and there sat Striped Chipmunk right where the black stranger had sat.



There sat the Little Black Stranger, just where he sat before

"I don't see any black Chipmunk," said Striped Chipmunk. "I really am beginning to be worried about you, Peter. You seem to be seeing things. Whoever heard of a black Chipmunk, anyway? Are you really awake, Peter?"

"Of course I'm awake!" retorted Peter, indignantly. "I never was more awake in all my life. No, sir, I never was more awake. I think you are playing tricks on me, Striped Chipmunk."

Just then there was a chuckle behind Peter. He looked over his shoulder. There was the little black stranger and his chuckle sounded exactly like Striped Chipmunk's chuckle. Peter got only a glimpse of him, for the instant Peter's head turned the little black stranger disappeared in the old wall. When he looked back, Striped Chipmunk had also disappeared. Never in all his life had Peter felt less sure of himself. It was all so unreal that he couldn't believe that it could be real. But he was beginning to suspect that in some way Striped Chipmunk was playing a joke on him.

CHILD TRAINING

Childhood Needs

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

The needs of wholesome childhood are many, but two which stand out as more important than all others are the need for the right sort of love, and the need for the right sort of activity.

A child requires in his daily life the love which shows itself as interest, affection, and even-tempered friendliness. In such love he may feel trust and security.

It gives him that inner peace which frees his energies to respond to all new and interesting things around him.

A lack of love leads to emotional starvation, which preoccupies him with his unsatisfied cravings. On the other hand the love that smothers and possesses make him spend his energies in the limited channels of personal relationships.

Given the right sort of love, a child needs next abundant opportunity to discover, to learn, and to do. With a very little child, this comes to him in the form of freedom to touch and to experiment.

His environment should be simplified and safe—yet full of new and interesting things so every day may be rich in new experiences.

He also needs proper play materials to stimulate his initiative and imagination, and to help him constantly to develop new skills and try new ideas. His back yard should be equipped with a sand box and some simple play apparatus which any father can construct.

As he grows older, he should have a work bench on the back porch or in the garage. He should be encouraged to make collections, devote himself to hobbies and to try out every genuine line of interest.

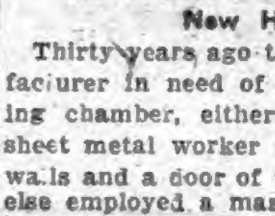
Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle



A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Crawford Oven Company
New Haven

Thirty years ago the average manufacturer in need of an oven or heating chamber, either arranged for a sheet metal worker to fasten together walls and a door of thin sheet iron, or else employed a mason to construct a brick room or kiln with a metal door. Methods of heating and ventilating were equally crude. With such makeshift equipment there can be small wonder that heat losses were tremendous and uniformity of heat and cleanliness were virtually unknown.

In 1908, Ronald Crawford, at that time general manager of the Stamford Gas & Electric company, perfectly and patented a new type of enclosed flame gas burner designed to provide a positive circulation of heated air in industrial ovens. The immediate success of this burner led to the formation by Mr. Crawford, of The Oven Equipment & Manufacturing company at Stamford. The necessity for more efficient ovens became apparent when it was discovered that the large brick kilns, then in common use, could not be operated economically. It was at this time that the Crawford sectional oven was patented as the first of its type in the United States.

The application of the insulated sectional oven which followed has been utilized principally in the industrial field for japanning and enameling hardware, metal furniture, automobile parts, etc., the baking of armatures, cores, grinding wheels and the like and for all drying processes.

In later years the Crawford traveling oven was developed for the baking of bread, pies, cake, cookies and crackers. These ovens vary in size from 50 to 120 feet in length. One of these ovens will bake about 5,000 pounds of bread per hour.

In 1912 The Oven Equipment & Manufacturing company was removed to New Haven, and Ronald Crawford, having resigned from the Stamford Gas & Electric company, devoted his entire attention to the oven business as vice president and general manager of the company until his death in 1920.

Later in 1927, the active management of the company was assumed by the two sons of the founder and the name of the company was changed to the Crawford Oven company. This business has made rapid strides in the past few years and a new plant is under construction to provide greatly increased facilities. The officers of the Crawford Oven company are:

R. Mayor Crawford, president; E. Brewster Crawford, vice president and treasurer; J. Frederick Baker, secretary.

The new plant will be located at 200 Shelton avenue, New Haven.

WINTER DESSERTS CAN BE MADE NOW AT LITTLE EXPENSE

Unusually Low Price of Sugar and Fruit Makes Home-canning Pay

The continuous appearance of luscious fruits and berries in the market, and sugar at an unheard-of low price, give every housewife the opportunity to put up a wide variety of preserves, jellies and jams at a most reasonable cost. With these home-canned delicacies on hand, the problem of next winter's desserts can be easily solved.

From the viewpoint of health, canned fruit, jellies and jams should appear daily in the winter diet. Many canned fruits are rich in vitamins. Their flavor arouses the appetite, and their sugar content helps to make a meal enjoyable.

Aside from eating jelly or jam with bread or toast, they are a delicious accompaniment for roast meats and fish. And a spoonful used to top rice or bread puddings makes these nourishing desserts more taste-appealing.

As sugar plays an important part in preserving, so can it be equally essential in the preparation of every-day meals. Sugar when used to season canned or fresh vegetables improves their flavor, thereby making them more enjoyable to the taste. Most foods are more delicious and nourishing with sugar. ROBINS TURN ON CUBS TO SMOTHER THEM UNDER BARRAGE OF HITS

(By Paul Mickelson, Associated Press Sports Writer)

CHICAGO, Aug. 13—(AP)—The pent up fury of Flatbush bats exploded with a staggering crash today and all but jarred the Cubs from their first place National league pennant mooring.

Beaten in their last five starts, the hit-starved Brooklyn Robins hammered five Cub pitchers for eighteen mighty blows and romped away with the second game of the crucial series by the lop-sided margin of 15 to 5, before 37,000 spectators.

It was sweet revenge for the Flatbush clan, which had been beaten by the Cubs 12 times in the last sixteen games, and it reduced the Cubs' grip on first place to a shaky pair of percentage points.

Today's battle was a ball game for but seven innings. At that juncture, the Robins led 6 to 4 but the Cubs threatened. Then came the eighth and the Robins bunched three more hits with a walk and a sacrifice to score three more runs and squelch Cub hopes. Then in the ninth, they cake-walked home with six more tallies because of comical pitching and support that reminded the fans of Philadelphia and a certain world series game last fall. The last inning scoring splurge, netted by four walks and three singles that might have been stopped, sent most of the spectators home and polished off the worst rout the Cubs have suffered this season.

Walter Gilbert, "Blistering Babe" Herman and Alfonso Lopez led the big Brooklyn attack while Ray Moss came in as a relief pitcher in the sixth and kept the Cub hits well scattered. Gilbert rammed out two doubles and two singles in five trips to the plate; Herman rapped out a double and a single, walked twice and got to first on an error while Lopez's contributions were three singles and a double.

Brooklyn exploded for the first time in the third inning when they rocked Guy Bush off the mound with five hits and five runs. The "Babe" and Bissonette started the procession with a pair of singles. Wright was walked and Lopez responded with a hard double to left. Bressler walked and Moore sent two more runs home with a double.

In the fourth, Gilbert singled and Herman sent him home with the sixth run with a double. The Cubs came back to score three runs and make a ball game out of it. Hack Wilson led off with his fortieth homer of the season, a hard line smash that cleared the right field bleachers and successive singles by Hartnett, Farrell, Osborn and Blair tallied two more. Cuyler's double and two fielder's choices brought the Cubs their fourth score in the seventh but when the Flatbush brigade got into serious action against Cub pitchers Bob Osborn, Lynn Nelson, Malcolm Moss and Al Shealy with their eighth and ninth inning attacks that made a comedy out of the struggle.

The Cubs got their final run without much ado in the final inning on a triple by English and singles by Wilson and Grimm.

It probably will be Root for the Cubs against Adolfo Luque in the third game of the series tomorrow. Luque has defeated the Cubs twice this season and expects to repeat.

Today's crowd brought the total attendance so far for the series to approximately 82,000. The series record of 140,000, established the last time the Robins were at Wrigley field, was expected to be broken. The score:

GIANTS NOSE OUT REDS IN UPHILL BATTLE

CINCINNATI, Aug. 13—(AP)—The New York Giants staged an uphill struggle today to hold their place in the pennant race and were successful after ten innings, defeating the Reds, 7 to 6. New York tied the score in the ninth then won in the extra frame when Fred Lindstrom hit a home run over the left field wall after Critz had singled.

Cincinnati, after leading most of the way, put on a comeback of its own in the last of the tenth but scored only one run. The Reds found Bill Walker for three runs in the second inning to take the lead and with Larry Benton pitching a fine game were never threatened until the ninth. In that frame, two singles, a wild pitch and Wally Roettger's double tied the score.

Heilmann hit a homer for Cincinnati. The score:

YANKS POUND OUT A TRIUMPH OVER TIGERS

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—The Yankees got off to a fast start today, picking up ten runs in the first five innings, and made it two straight over the Detroit Tigers by a 10 to 8 score. They needed every bit of their early lead to win as George Pipgras, after pitching shutout ball for five innings, blew up in the sixth and his successors did little better

The Tigers piled up six runs off Pipgras in the sixth and assaulted Ruffing and Halloway for two more in the seventh before Lou McEvoy finally checked them. The Tigers made only seven hits but made good use of walks and errors.

Earl Combs did the heavy stickwork for the Yankees against four Tiger moundsmen. He drove in four runs with three hits, one of which was a home run. The score:

TILDEN LEADS DAVIS CUP PLAYERS TO QUARTER FINALS

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 13.—(AP)—Big Bill Tilden today led three of his Davis cup teammates into the quarter final round of the men's singles in the annual eastern grass court championships.

With the utmost ease Tilden eliminated Julius Seligson, New York youngster, 6-4, 6-4. A southern youth, Clifford Sutter, of New Orleans, intercollegiate champion, stole the spotlight with a spectacular triumph over Fritz Mercur, of Bethlehem, Pa., 6-0, 6-2. Sutter and Tilden clash in a quarter-final match tomorrow and the New Orleans youth is conceded a fighting chance for victory.

John Van Ryn, of East Orange, N. J., Gregory Mangin, of Newark, and Berkeley Bell, of Austin, Texas, all members of the Davis cup squad, paraded through into the final eight along with Ted Burwell, Charlotte, N. C., veteran, Francis T. Hunter, ranked next to Tilden in the national list, and Richard Murphy, of Utica, N. Y. Hunter was extended fully to down Bryan Grant, Jr., diminutive Atlanta youngster, 7-5, 9-7, while Van Ryn played sensational tennis to defeat Eddie Jacobs, of Baltimore, 6-2, 6-2. Hunter and Van Ryan are paired in another outstanding match tomorrow.

THERMOS TEAM TAKES SECOND PLACE BY NOSING OUT ROYALS IN 7TH FRAME

'Tis sad but true, folks. Jab Burns, snappy Royal catcher, one of the best in the City league, actually threw away a ball game at the campus last night. Yes, and it was a darn good ball game too. For seven innings Jab's club and the Thermos Bottlers battled to a scoreless tie and there was a strong possibility that the affair would go on the league records as such when Burns heaved wild over third and allowed the only run of the game to score.

Here's the dope. The Royals went scoreless for the seventh time in their half of the inning and the Bottlers came to bat. Bill Liberty, the lead off hitter, singled cleanly over second and went to the midway station while Eddie Koslowski was juggling Kotch's grounder to the box. Both moved ahead a base on Hull's sacrifice and then it all happened. Jab did what any good catcher would have done but it was a case where the breaks were against him. With Dudek, a weak sister with the stick, at bat, Burns made an attempt to catch Liberty napping off third and threw wild, and oh, how wild.

As previously mentioned the game was a sweet one, in fact one of the best played of the season. It was even better than that of last night between the Ideals and Italians. Koslowski and Mike Nickerson hooked up in a pitching duel that was tighter than tight. Mike gave but three measly hits and Eddie five. The latter, however, struck out six against the Bottler's three.

With the exception of that sad and fatal seventh both clubs played practically errorless ball, the infielders keeping the opposing pitchers out of trouble on several occasions with snappy stops. Carlie Krauss was exceptionally good, handling five hard chances without a miss. Hamil, Royal second baseman, also handled his chances flawlessly. The hitting honors were shared by Fagan and Liberty of the Thermos and Cummings of the Royals, each having 2 apiece.

As advertised, the game was played for the benefit of the "kiddies beach fund" and unless someone misses a guess the recreation commission got off to a good start in its drive for funds for the "big blowout." There were about 2,800 fans on hand and judging from the sound of the jingle in the box quite a few tossed quarters and halves into the kitty.

Tonight's Game

The Italians and Smoke Shop will provide the competition at the campus this evening. The Italians, since taking on a bit of additional strength, have won their last two starts and are confident of going through the remainder of the season without any further setbacks. Manager De Fronzo has even gone so far as to predict a win over the Citizens when the two clubs come together next week.

On the other hand, the Smokers have proven themselves in-and-outers this season. They play one whale of a game and then turn in a rotten one. After Monday's exhibition with the Cits they should work smoothly this evening against the Italians.

Each has won and lost one game from the other to date. The probable starting pitchers this evening will be Lefty Lucier, for the Italians, and either Butsy Weisgraber of Zip Gero for the Smokers.

ITALIANS NOSE OUT POLISH CLUB, 5 TO 3

Burelle, pitching for the Italians, was invincible for five innings, holding his opponents to one lone hit during that time. Only 16 of the Polish batters faced Burelle in the first five frames, while he fanned eight, five of them in a row in the fourth and fifth innings. While Burelle was holding the Polish club, his teammates were pecking away at Mercik, Polish pitcher, scoring one run in the second, two runs in the third, one in the fourth and one in the sixth.

The P. N. A. C. broke through Burelle's pitching in the sixth, scoring all of their three runs. In this frame, with the bases full, Watters knocked out a long double to left field, emptying the bases.

CHICAGO MAY GET SHARKEY-CARNERA BOUT

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—(AP)—Managers of some of the leading heavyweights mingled with promoters today in a round robin of conferences that may lead to important doings among the big fellows in September—either here or in Chicago.

Mique Malloy, Chicago promoter, led the field in discussions with Johnny Buckley, manager of Jack Sharkey, and the representatives of Primo Carnera, Italian giant. This match is all but closed for Chicago in September, the big hitch being Malloy's generosity with guarantees but not with percentages. Sharkey has been offered a flat guarantee of $125,000, but wants $100,000 and a privilege of 30 per cent of the gate receipts. Malloy wishes to give him only 25 per cent. Carnera already has given Malloy an option on his services.

Meanwhile Madison Square Garden promoters attempted to interest Sharkey's manager in a September match with Victorio Campolo and negotiated with "Pa" Stribling, manager of young Stribling, for a match this winter. "Pa" said the Macon youngster will be out of action six months with a bruised left hand.

P. G. Rockafellow, defending singles champion, easily subdued Abbot Gotshall in his quarter final to win, 6-0, 6-1, and in the doubles teamed with Edgar F. Dawson, reached the semi-final at the expense of J. M. Farren, and R. B. Hunt, 6-1, 6-2.

During the day, Shields eliminated the last remaining Portland player in the singles, taking over T. K. Thurston, 6-1, 6-2.

In the women's singles Marion Wing seeded second, and defending Maine champion, waltzed through two opponents, Rebecca Tenney and Rosamond Melcher, to enter the third round. Rosamond Newton, of Brookline, Mass., seeded first, will make her debut tomorrow.

Pride Impels the Finest Quality

IN 1646 the shoemakers of Boston, provoked by "much bad work produced by their craft," petitioned "Ye Governor of Ye Bay Colonie" that "all boots might be alike made well." So began America's pride in Craftsmanship.

Pride in the production of the finest Quality still lives. It is the spirit upon which in 1874 at Manchester, New Hampshire, Roger G. Sullivan founded 7-20-4—now the largest strictly hand-made cigar industry in the World.

Quality workmanship and the finest tobaccos have been traditional with 7-20-4 since its beginning. It is the same spirit today, after fifty-six years of public confidence—which refuses to lower its standard of manufacture at the sacrifice of the finest Cigar Quality.

FEWER WORKERS EMPLOYED ON AMERICAN RAILROADS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13—(AP)—Fewer workers are employed on American railroads this summer than at the same season in many years.

The Interstate Commerce Commission estimated today the average number of railroad workers employed during June was 1,564,269 a decrease of 9.9 per cent from the number employed during the same month last year.

It compared unfavorably also with the 1,572,567 employed in railroad operations during April, one month before.

The June total represents a minimum of employment in railroad service, brought about by the steady recession in traffic which has taken place this year.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 13.—Many relatives and friends were present at the funeral services for Mrs. Jennie Love Scot Smith, aged 66 years, and widow of Peter B. Smith former Norwich residents, which were held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from her late home, 69 Granite street. Services were conducted by Rev. William F. Williams, rector of Calvary Episcopal church of Stonington, former rector of Christ Episcopal church, Westerly. Burial was at River Bend cemetery, and there were many beautiful floral tributes. Rev. Williams conducted the committal services at the grave. Bearers were Edwin D. Hawke, Arthur H. Coy, H. Russell Burdick, Richard Mitchell, L. M. Carpenter and James Scott.

The governing authorities of Westerly and Pawcatuck in the town of Stonington have a number of matters of common interest to the residents of both town on which there is demand for uniform regulation and agreement. One of these matters and of interest to outsiders, as well, is that of the uniform operation of traffic signals during the rush hours on Sunday, according to an announcement made by Councilman Archie Meikle of the police committee, who has conferred on the matter with Selectman Arthur F. Babcock.

On Wednesday, it was learned that the Pawcatuck river bridge has been condemned by the Connecticut state board of engineers, and is unsafe for the present volume of traffic which passes over it daily, according to a letter which is said to have been received by the Stonington board of selectmen.

MONTVILLE

ROBERT GAIR OWLS OUT TO WIN LEAGUE PENNANT

The Robert Gair Owls will make their attempt to clinch the Montville Industrial Twilight league pennant this (Thursday) evening at the Gair diamond when they meet for the fourth time this season the Textilers who hold down the bottom of the league standing which resulted in the Owls trimming them two games, one game tied and the others being rained out. These two teams still have three postponed games to be played between them. The Owls have only suffered two defeats this season, administrated to them by last year's champions, the Eastern Connecticut Power Co. To date the Owls have won 10 games and lost two, average .818. A victory this evening will remove all possibility of any other team displacing them from the top. The Powermen still have a very slim chance of tying them by winning their one remaining game and the Owls losing their three postponed games with the Textilers but that does not seem possible, although almost anything can happen in a ball game. The Textilers will be greatly handicapped in their remaining games by the absence of their star catcher, Kobos, who also is a handy man with his bat in pinches. He is on vacation. The Owls pitching star Bullet Buck Shahan, winner of 8 out of 10 league victories is expected to toe the slab, with Lawless on the receiving end. Ski, the Textiles strikeout king will show his wares, with Hrykno as catch.

PRICES REDUCED

up to $170

We have just been advised by the Oakland Motor Car Company that, effective August 11th, prices on all current model Pontiac Big Sixes and Oakland Eights have been reduced . . . with reductions up to $170.

Pontiac Big Six-now $665 and up

A big car at small car price

Oakland Eight-now $895 and up

America's lowest-priced Eight

These reductions are made because in the winter the factory will present two new cars which, while changed enough to classify as new models, will remain practically unchanged in appearance, size and design.

The two new cars will have the same type engines used in the cars now offered.

These new prices give you an opportunity to own a big car at small car cost and at a great saving.

Don't miss this opportunity. At their new low prices these cars are the greatest "buys" in the automobile field today.

STOCK PRICES CLOSED HIGHER AFTER DOWNWARD MOVEMENT AT OPENING

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—Short covering reversed the downward movement of stock prices today and the market closed higher, although the principal commodities were weak.

Figuratively speaking, elbow room was a premium on the short side, speculative sentiment has been so gloomy over the past few days that the ranks of the professional bears have been augmented by less experienced traders, all anxious to sell stocks in the hope of making a profit.

Stocks again declined in the forenoon while wheat, corn and cotton were gyrating erratically. Several issues, including Bethlehem Steel, J. I. Case, Canadian Pacific, Kennecott, Corn Products and Montgomery Ward, went to new lows on losses of one to five points, while others broke through their post-June lows. Among the latter was U. S. Steel, which sold down to 155 1-2. Trading became more active on the break and the ticker ran several minutes behind.

Confident that the short element was getting cumbersome, venturous bulls began to test out prices around mid-day and found the market ready for a technical rally, which extended through the afternoon. Final quotations were at or close to the top, U. S. Steel advancing to 159 for a net gain of 2 3-8.

The commodities finally settled into a slump. October cotton sold well below 12 cents for the first time in four years after publication of the weekly weather report, and the market closed only moderately above the bottom at net declines of 65 to 95 cents a bale. Wheat weakened in sympathy with Winnipeg and bearish weather news, closing 2 5-8 to 2 3-4 cents lower. Rains over part of the corn belt, curtailing somewhat the area of the drought, brought in considerable selling and quotations were off about 2 to 3 cents net.

A slightly easier undertone ruled the money markets. Call loans were available "outside" at 2 per cent although the official rate held at 2 1-2.

The federal reserve bank continues to add to its holdings of bills and government securities as a means of keeping the credit reservoirs filled.

Shipments of the metal to France were resumed tonight with the exportation of $8,800,000 to France.

The gains in stocks were widespread and were especially evident in issues harboring the large short interests. Case, after touching the new low of 160, closed above 164, a net advance of 11 7-8. Vanadium was up 4, Southern Railway, 2, Columbian Carbon nearly 5, and Auburn Auto more than 4. Several utilities rallied 2 to 3, and there were similar gains in American Can, Johns Manville, Coca Cola, Westinghouse Electric, American Telephone, Gillette, Corn Products, United Aircraft, and Eastman Kodak. General Electric, General Motors, Warner Brothers, Sears Roebuck, Radio, Nash Motors and Standard Oil of New Jersey, rose one to two.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—The bond market went through another dull trading session today. In an irregular price movement, railroad obligations were favored and this group provided the leadership for the activity which, while comparatively small, was the best of the week.

Utilities held fairly steady. Firmness of oil company bonds and further declines in sugar company issues, featured the industrials.

News of prospective new financing for Warner Brothers Pictures, brought a rally in the convertible 6s, which closed one point higher. Share privilege rails made small gains with the exception of Atchison 4 1-2s which sagged 2 1-2 points. General Theaters 6s, reached a new low and International Telephone 4 1-2s, were likewise soft.

Inquiry for carrier obligations continues unabated despite the slump in trading this month. Pennsylvania debenture 4 1-2s and Canadian National 4 1-2s, were active and closed at new 1930 highs. Best prices of the year were also established by Union Pacific 4 1-2s, Boston and Maine 5s and Big Four 4 1-2s.

The advance of Hudson County Gas 5s to a new 1930 peak was outstanding among the utility group. American Telephone issues, Consolidated 5 1-2s and Western Union 5s, were little changed.

Foreign issues moved irregularly higher.

Buying of governments were nominal and about the only changes were small gains of Liberty 3 1-2s and Treasury 3 3-8s of 40-43.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 13—(AP)—Wheat values collapsed as a result of heavy selling here, late today, and dragged the corn market down along. To a large extent the increased selling pressure on wheat came from eastern sources, and was attributed to reports that the Canadian government would not guarantee banks' loans to the Canadian growers' pool. These reports had but little apparent effect earlier in the day, but toward the last were made much of in connection with acute weakness shown by wheat prices at Winnipeg.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were nervous, 2 1-2a2 3-4c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 2 1-8a3c down, oats 1 5-8a2 3-8c off and provisions showing 15ca37c drop.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—The Chicago and Alton, one of the first railroads to report results for July, reported net operating income for the month of $144,263, compared with $610,666 for July 1929. Net operating income for the seven months ended July 31 totaled $247,455, compared with $2,014,721. The figures for 1929 included $339,553 back mail pay.

Combustion Engineering corporation, a subsidiary of International Combustion Engineering corporation, has received a $2,200,000 order from the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Edison company for the construction of steam boilers. The order is said to be the largest of its kind ever placed.

Stockholders of J. G. White and company, of record August 19, are being offered rights to subscribe to 137,088 shares of additional common stock. For each share of preferred of $100 par value and for each five shares of common of $20 par value, stockholders will be entitled to subscribe for four new shares of common at $30 a share. The rights will expire October 4.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—(AP)—Several of the more active curb shares closed a point or two higher today, in sympathy with a vigorous upturn on the big board. Total sales of 518,700 shares were the largest of the week.

The market was under further selling pressure during the early hours of trading, however, and a long list of comparatively inactive issues which lost ground then failed to recover, so that net losses were in the majority at the finish, despite firmness of the more popular trading shares.

American Gas and Electric and Electric Bond and Share sold up about 3 and 2 points, respectively, but closed fractionally under the best. United Light A was also a firm spot, gaining more than a point in a fair turnover. Central Public Service A, however, sagged about a point to a new low, and North American Power and Light dropped about 5 points to 63, the year's low.

Operations for the advance were resumed in some of the natural gas issues, notably Duquesne, which rose 2, and Missouri Kansas Pipe Line, which mounted 3. Appalachian and United were also firm. Oils, however, were irregular and sluggish, failing to respond to the favorable weekly petroleum statistics. Cosdon dropped 3 to within about 2 points of the year's low. Gulf dropped 2, then regained its loss. Cities Service and Standard of Indiana closed up fractionally.

In the Industrial Specialties, Ford, Ltd., gained more than a point in a large turnover, and there was fair demand for some of the aviation issues. Detroit Aircraft gained fractionally, reflecting report that its July sales of commercial planes set a new high record. Fokker gained about a point.

Aluminum, Ltd., in which the market is extremely thin, dropped 20 points in a small turnover. American Meter, which also trades in a thin market, tumbled 9 to a new low. Newport Co. sold off about 2 to a new minimum, and Shaeffer Pen duplicated its low point with a drop of 2.

In the Investment company group, United Founders and Goldman Sachs gained fractionally. Fresh demand appeared for Prince and Whitely on payment of another quarterly dividend of 25 cents, at which rate it is selling to yield more than 10 per cent. Securities Corp. General, and Selected Industries Preferred dropped 2 points, and Sun Investing 1, to new lows.

JEWETT CITY

CENTURIES-OLD OAK GOES IN HIGHWAY CHANGES

Wallace Nutting in his book, Connecticut Beautiful, found at "The Bend" in Sylvandale the subject for one of his outstanding scenes of natural beauty. Incident to this splendid canvas, is the approach to Jewett City, which is included in Sylvandale. The new Quinebaug viaduct, rapidly nearing completion, eliminated this attractive section of Lisbon from the state highway. Not only this, but the great Bend oak, that has stood for centuries in the forks of the road where the Newent highway comes in, is to be removed, in conformity with the new grade. This beautiful tree, one of the few remaining in this section, of these grand patriarchs, is more than six feet in diameter. Some historians in mentioning sites in local history, have called attention to this great tree, and today, not a few, who admire such natural beauty, are deploring the fact that the state highway commissioners, with minds centered only on a road plan, should deem its destruction necessary, thus dealing another blow to nature scenes that will be beyond replacement.

After the Battle

The topic Wednesday among local enthusiasts was the rehearsing of the game Tuesday evening between the Fisk team and Shea's All Stars. No points of finished ball playing in any game of recent record, can present anything to surpass the performance of these two all-home-town teams. To the annals of local sports history will be added these facts: During the 6 1-2 innings, 39 men came to bat, of these, Vachon and Gaudette, two of the star pitchers in this end of the state, struck out 16. Four passes were issued, Juba and Leo Gilbert got safe hits, with the other 16 handled in the field. Joe Gilbert lost a long fly in deep center for the only error in the game. Had not darkness intervened it is likely the game would have been going yet, with Juba's run the only score.

An industrious robin came to a sad end at Lewiston, Me., when he attempted to overdo in the matter of building himself a home. Happening on a rather long piece of twine, the little bird flew to the top of an elm tree with it in his mouth. There he became entangled in his burden and shortly found himself suspended about five inches from a small branch with the string wrapped around his neck. He was taken from this precarious position about half an hour later, but he could not be revived.

POETRY

To a Phoebe Bird

Under the eaves, out of the wet,
 You nest within my reach;
You never sing for me and yet
 You have a golden speech.

You sit and quirk a rapid tail,
 Wrinkle a ragged crest,
Then pirouette from tree to rail
 And vault from rail to nest.

And when in frequent, dainty fright,
 You grayly slip and fade,
And when at hand you re-alight
 Demure and unafraid.

And when you bring your brood its fill
 Of iridescent wings
And green legs dewy in your bill,
 Your silence is what sings.

Not of a feather that enjoys
 To prate or praise or preach,
O phoebe, with so little noise,
 What eloquence you teach!

—Witter Bynner.

The Search

What is this thing for which we aim
 Without surcease?
Is it to find and then to tame
A starry-eyed wraith whom men call fame?
 Or is it peace?
What is this thing in life worthwhile.

What is this thing in life worthwhile,
 This royal bequest?
Is it a smile to meet a smile?
Is it to work, to make a trial?
 Or is it rest?

What is this thing which forms our goal
 And brings a balm?
Is it to lend to love the whole?
Is it to know one's unclad soul?
 Or is it calm?

—Theodora J. Aronstam in the Detroit

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"No, sir. My wife was with me."—Humorist.

"Will the operation be a dangerous one, doctor?"

Gumshoe—I was out with a new girl last night.

Gumboil—What's she like?

"Janitor, you could cool our apartment nicely if you would run ice water through the radiators."

"Can't be done, ma'am."

"What did you have in them last winter?"—Pathfinder.

Young Army Wife—The postoffices are very careless sometimes, don't you think?

Sympathetic Friend—Yes, dear; why?

Y. A. W.—Fred sent me a postcard yesterday from the fort where he is on an inspection trip and the silly postoffice people put a Tia Juana mark on the envelope.—Exchange.

Judge—Pat, I shouldn't think you would hit a little man like that.

Pat—Suppose he called you an Irish slob?

Judge—But I'm not an Irishman.

Pat—Suppose he called you a Dutch slob?

Judge—But I'm not a Dutchman.

Pat—Well, suppose he called you the kind of slob that you are?—Catholic Opinion.

Smart buyers are getting bigger tire values now than ever before!

But don't be confused when the tire dealer with something "special" to sell backs you into a corner.

Just remember the one fact — after years of experience, after testing this value and that, "more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind!"

There must be a valid reason for this.

There is: Goodyear Tires are definitely superior, in the two main parts of a tire.

Now is the time to get YOURS

Any Goodyear Dealer will be glad to demonstrate the facts.

As far back as 1916, it became a fact that more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.

Every year since that time it has been increasingly true that more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.

Today this preference for Goodyears runs into millions: millions more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.

There can be only one conclusion: Goodyear Tires must be better—and at present prices they are a matchless bargain.

Now is the time to get yours.

Movie Fashions

By MME. LISBETH

Short sleeves and bloused bodice, belted at the natural waistline by a red suede belt are features of this simple frock, and the long skirt has an uneven hemline.

A frock of this styling is a good choice for the first dark frock for fall wear, as it is not too great a transition from the light summer dresses, as it has short sleeves which give an informal air to a dress that may be worn for either semi-formal or informal occasions.

The Royal air force and the Epping (England) football teams were playing a match in aid of the Epping hospital funds and at the end of the ordinary period each team had scored six goals. Extra time was played to decide the match, and in this period one member of each side sustained a broken leg. They were conveyed to the hospital for whose benefit they were playing. Epping won by seven goals to six.

COLLINS AND KEMPNER BOYS ROBBED N. L. Y. M. C. A. SAFE, BURIED CASH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 13.—Benjamin Collins, 16, residing on Benham road, Groton, formerly of Ashcraft road, this city, was arrested this evening by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh, charged with robbery and he is now a prisoner at police headquarters pending his presentation in the police court tomorrow. His companion in the robbery is Edward Kempner, of Glenwood avenue,—but the youth is absent from the city, being a guest of relatives in Pennsylvania. When he returns to New London Kempner will be arrested and presented in court.

July 28 the boys were at the Y. M. C. A. and were in the boys' division. They noted a safe in the office with the door partially open. The desire to obtain money prompted the youths to plan the theft of whatever money was in the safe and when a young woman clerk absented herself from the office for a short time they decided to attempt the theft. A trap door beneath a counter permitted Kempter to gain access to the office, but when he reached the safe he became frightened and returned. Collins then sought the money, and going to the safe found a bag containing the cash in a drawer. The bag and its contents were taken and the youthful thieves then went to Pequot avenue where they climbed over a stone wall and examined the contents of the bag. There was about $130 in the bag and Collins gave Kempner $60, keeping the balance. Being afraid to take the money home, Collins placed his money in the bag and Kempner placed his cash in a handkerchief and then both containers of the cash was buried. The money remained in the ground over night and the following day the youths went there and took it. They spent the cash on luxuries. For several days suspicion pointed to Collins and Kempner as the thieves but sufficient evidence was not obtained to warrant an arrest being made until today. This evening, Sergeant Cavanaugh, after having obtained a confession from Collins, went to the beach and found the money bag and handkerchief.

CLAIM THAT JOHN GARRETT HAS BEEN AT OCEAN BEACH

Two detectives from Boston were in New London yesterday seeking a clue that they hoped would lead to the arrest of John Garrett, former chief of the Boston police department, who is wanted on charges of larceny and jumping a bail bond of $50,000. Eight detectives are making the search for Garrett and when it was ascertained that Garrett had been in New London, two of the sleuths came here, but they were not rewarded with success. However, it has become known that Garrett was in New London last month, a visitor at Ocean Beach several days. A Negro, employed at the shore resort and whose residence is in Boston, declares that he saw Garrett at Ocean Beach on more than one occasion. He is positive of his assertion for he claims to know the former police chief because of the Negro's long residence in Boston.

SHAMROCK V ARRIVES— SIR THOMAS COMING LATER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 13.—The defender Shamrock V., Sir Thomas Lipton's latest racer to attempt to win the America cup, arrived in port about 5:30 o'clock this afternoon, accompanied by Lipton's palatial yacht, Erin. The cup defender will have her mast stepped at the plant of the Electric Boat company in Groton prior to engaging in the cup races next month; this work, which will be started at once, will occupy several days. The Shamrock, which left Gosport, Eng., about 10 days ago, came direct to New London and under her own sail until off the west end of Fishers Island, when she was taken in tow by the Erin and brought into port. Both the cup defender and yacht came to anchor in the upper harbor opposite the yard of the boat company. The Shamrock V is painted a vivid green and is conspicuous because of her color. Lipton is a passenger of the liner Leviathan, which is scheduled to arrive in New York Saturday and he is expected to come to New London at once. Immediately after the cup defender and the yacht came to anchor, customs inspectors boarded both yacht and racer and found proper conditions existing. Newspaper men and photographers went to the boats and the latter obtained pictures of the Shamrock V and the Erin.

Walker, Mrs. John A. Scott, Mrs. Richard P. Freeman, Mrs. Percy S. Palmer, Mrs. Charles Shafer and Mrs. James F. Ahern.

ELECTRIC BOAT CO. GETS YACHT CONTRACT OF $103,000

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 13.—An evidence of increased business at the plant of the Electric Boat company, Groton, was revealed today with the announcement that the company had signed a contract for the construction of a 103-foot yacht for Edward W. Brown, retired New York business man. The cost of the construction will be, it is estimated $103,000 and work will be started at once. The yacht's hull will be of steel and she will be equipped with a 150-horse power Diesel engine. The new work will not require that additional hands be employed, at least for the present, but when the construction has progressed a few months, there is a possibility that the force of employes will be increased. The contract calls for the completion of the yacht by next May.

Will Re-condition The Ara

The company has also announced that William K. Vanderbilt's yacht, Ara, will go to the yard shortly and the engine and boat will receive a thorough overhauling. This work will require about two months and additional yacht work is anticipated.

BROOKLYN GIRL'S CAR ROLLED DOWN EMBANKMENT

NEW LONDON, Aug. 13. — The Cadillac driven by Miss Marie K. Johnston, 19, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who is summering at Pine Grove, Niantic, was wrecked late yesterday afternoon when it crashed through the fence at the approach of the Niantic river highway bridge at Niantic. Although the auto rolled down the embankment and landed in about four feet of water on the muddy flats, Miss Johnston, Bertram Day, 15; Adrian Regniault, 16, and John Mulligan, 10, all of Pine Grove, who were passengers in the car, escaped injuries other than bruises. The car was wrecked and it was not until late last night that it was gotten back on the highway and towed to a garage in New London. Miss Johnston was driving at a high rate of speed and upon approaching the bridge, where a curve exists, was unable to make the turn in safety. The car plunged through the fence, then turned over twice as it dropped to the edge of the river. State Police Officer J. Smith investigated and will arrest Miss Johnston on a reckless driving charge as soon as her condition will permit, for the young woman is suffering from shock.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

Five of Broadway's "big names" had a part in the filming of "Bright Lights," First National all-color drama at Warner's Broadway theatre. Frank Fay, who is featured in the musical with Dorothy Mackaill, Inez Courtney, and Frank McHugh, are all recently from the New York stage and are in the cast. Larry Ceballos, who staged dances for the Greenwich Village Follies and other musical shows on Broadway, directed the dances. Robert North, well known as a producer and director of big stage productions, was co-producer on the Vitaphone drama. The story is that of a footlight favorite's career—minus the publicity usually attendant to prominent actresses.

Palace Theatre.

The romance, the poignant drama of everyday life, the little hopes and fears and agonies that we endure ourself and that our neighbor around the corner endures: These are all woven into the powerful new drama which opens at the Palace theatre today, "The Sins of the Children," a great film starring Louis Mann and an all-star cast.

"Sins of the Children" is the story of Adolph Wagenkampf, who as a youth attended Heidelberg university as a medical student. In a sudden fit of temper he is expelled, but his hopes are still high, his heart light, and his ambition limitless. He comes to America only to find that the streets are not paved with amethysts. But he makes the best of it, and soon settles down in a small town to operate a barber shop with his faithful friend Tony. He marries and raises a family.

Then comes trouble, the trouble that comes to you and me, and every ordinary, every-day son and daughter of Eve.

The story of Adolf Wakenkampf is the story of an avalanche of petty troubles. He raises his children to be good boys and girls, but like so many sons and daughters, they become forgetful and careless. It is the old, old story that has been so endlessly repeated. The children grow up and go out into the world to seek their own careers. One becomes an embezzler and narrowly escapes prison; another graduates from medical school, forgets that his father was once a medical student himself, and becomes so high-hat that he won't have anything to do with the rest of the family. He feels that they aren't good enough for him. One daughter marries and the other—well, she gets into trouble.

STATE POLICE CHECKING UP ON THREATS CHARGED TO BOGUE

Rumors to the effect that Stanley S. Bogue, Mystic laborer, openly boasted about Mystic that he was going to kill Ole Ostberg and Mrs. Eva Roberts for several days before their dead bodies, brutally hacked by Bogue with an axe, were found Saturday night at Mrs. Roberts' home in Slaughter lane, Mystic, were being investigated Wednesday by State Troopers Arthur Whitmarsh and Peter Busch of the Groton barracks. It was Whitmarsh who arrested the double murderer after Bogue had slashed his wrists and throat in a half hearted attempt to kill himself following the commission of his terrible crime.

Raymond Jennings, son of the slain woman by a former husband and Howard Wilson who had lodgings with Jennings in the house adjoining the murder house, have already stated that Bogue had said he was going to kill Ostberg and Mrs. Robers, but information reaching the state police through the speech of persons who knew Bogue and his two victims was that the murderer freely told several that he was planning to execute the couple and Sergeant George Webber, commanding the Groton barracks, Wednesday sent the two troopers out to question all of those who have been mentioned in connection with these rumors.

Coroner Edward G. McKay, Norwich, has made a careful examination of the scene of the murder and requested the state police to take various measurements that will be used by him in arriving at a finding. It was expected that the coroner would start examining witnesses but he did not find time to do so and it was said Wednesday that the formal inquest would be held up until the results of the investigation that is being conducted by Troopers Whitmarsh and Busch have been made known. Sergeant Webber said Wednesday that the state's entire case against Bogue will probably be completed before the end of the week and that the coroner's report probably will have been received by that time.

MID-AUGUST DEVOTIONS IN THE CATHOLIC CHURCH

Although the vacation season, hundreds of thousands of Catholics will crowd their churches this week, on Friday, for the Feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary and on Saturday, the 16th, which is devoted to honoring Saint Joachim, father of the Virgin and model of Christian fathers. The psalms and prayers of Assumption day are of extra solemnity—the lesson is Ecclesiasticus XXIV, 11-20 and the Gospel read in all the masses throughout the world is Luke X. 38-42, ending, "Mary hath chosen the better part, which shall not be taken away from her," the words of the Saviour to the worldly-anxious Martha. Psalm 44 is read at the Gradual, and a portion of Luke 10 at the communion. The feast commemorates the pious belief of the faithful throughout the centuries that, as the Mother of Christ had a life different from that of every earthly being through her great honor as Mother of the Saviour. so her death must have differed from every other human death and that she must have been assumed into heaven to join her Divine Son.

The day is always one of great devotion, especially among Italian Catholics, who observe it after the manner of their countrymen in their homeland. The church altars and vestments of the priests are of purest white and richest gold and the sermons accentuate the virtues of Mary, immaculate exemplar of all women, model daughter, spouse and mother.

St. Joachim and his holy spouse. Saint Anne, have been pictured by many artists, in their simplicity, devotedness and virtues, as parents of the Blessed Virgin.

The woman and Perri had lived together since 1913. Perri admitted to police that hers was the guiding hand in the rum ring which made his fortune.

The gunmen fired from the garage as Perri opened the doors to park his machine on returning home with Mrs. Perri after a visit to relatives. PLAIN MAN THE BUILDER; NOT PURITAN IDEALIST

ROCKPORT, Mass., Aug. 14—(AP)—Not the Puritan idealist, but the plain man, was the founder and builder of the Massachusetts bay colony, this year celebrating its tercentenary, Prof. Robert Emmons Rogers, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, told the Sandy Bay Historical society, here tonight.

Out of the wreck of New Canaan, he said, the plain man created New England. The vision, the dream, the ideal of the Puritan commonwealth, he said, came to nothing. The foundations and the later structure of the commonwealth, he said, were built by plain men who "had little truck with ideas and ideals."

DOUBT STORY OF NEGROES ABDUCTING WHITE GIRL

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 14.—(AP)—A day of investigation failed to produce any substantiation of the reported abduction of a 17-year-old girl near here by two Negroes late last night.

Sheriff Numa F. Turner, of Wake county, admitted tonight he was puzzled by the story related by Milton Rodgers, 22-year-old farmer of Johnston county, shortly after midnight.

Rodgers told officers he picked up the girl on a Raleigh street at her request, and was driving about six miles from this city when the road was blocked by an automobile. He declared two Negroes got out of the car, fired a pistol over his head to frighten him, and carried his screaming companion off in the darkness.

The farmer said he had never seen the girl before. She asked him, he related, to take her to her home in Elizabethtown, about 100 miles from Raleigh, and gave her name as Viola Edwards. Later investigation failed to establish that a girl of that name was known in Elizabethtown.

Rodgers was released after being detained several hours.

FATE OF 47 MEN TRAPPED IN MINE STILL UNKNOWN

PRINCETON, B. C., Aug. 14.—(AP)—The fate of 47 of the 49 men trapped in the Blackburn Coal mine at Coalmont, near here, by an unexplained explosion last night which wrecked a portion of the mine tunnel and killed at least two of the miners still was undetermined late today.

While fellow workers dug frantically to reach the buried men, relatives waited about the mine entrance in silence, hopeful of good news. The bodies of Clifford A. Smith, 40, and Albert Cole, 19, were recovered soon after the blast.

Mine officials and employes expressed fear tons of dirt had shut off air from the entombed men and that if still alive they would suffocate before they are reached.

Workmen from this and other frontier villages, almost 300 miles from Vancouver, were laboring in shifts to remove the caved-in debris. A cave-in about 300 feet from the mouth of the tunnel blocked the passage. Cause of the explosion was unknown. Some miners attributed it to marsh gas.

R-100 Might Reach Home Base Tonight

Reported Speeding Eastw[illegible] At Between 75 a[illegible] Miles an Hour

ON BOARD THE AIRSHIP R-100 Aug. 14—(AP)—The British dirigible R-100 tonight was sailing over the tossing Atlantic, homeward bound and giving every promise that she should make a record eastward crossing.

So fast was the speed, between 75 and 90 miles an hour, that those aboard believed the largest airship in the world could reach her home port, Cardington, England, by midnight tomorrow British summer time (6 p. m. e.s.t.).

It was felt that the dirigible, which left its mooring most at Montreal at 8:26 p. m. e.s.t. yesterday, should reach Cardington by 3:25 a. m. e.s.t. Saturday at least, even if held up by winds.

Those aboard are enjoying the flight greatly. When the breakfast of ham and eggs with coffee was served this morning, quite in hotel fashion, hardly a movement of the ship could be felt.

The passengers expressed amazement at the steadiness of the airliner as it penetrated huge ranges of clouds, and the only thing preventing absolute comfort was the fact that no smoking was permitted.

As darkness fell tonight the electric lights were switched on and a bell summoned the hungry passengers.

Through the darkness the great silvery cigar rushed, the gloom of the Atlantic atmosphere in night time broken only by the great, cold moon.

GUILTY OF DIVERTING SACRAMENTAL WINE

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—(AP)—A jury which included Bruce Barton, author, who believes the prohibition law is a bad law but should be enforced, today convicted Bishop Charles Mrzena of the Czecho-Slovak Old Orthodox Catholic church, of diverting sacramental wine to bootleggers.

He and six co-defendants, wine merchants and truckmen, were found guilty of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law. The government introduced testimony to show the bishop forged withdrawal permits, drew wine for churches which never received it, and received $1 a gallon—$40,000 in one year, investigators estimated—for the wine he turned over to illegal dispensers.

The jury recommended mercy for three of the four truckmen but made no recommendation for the bishop and the other men. They face possible sentences of two years in prison, a fine of $10,000, or both.

At the Zoological gardens the scared animal will be given treatment for a broken leg and given a home among the other coyotes. It is believed the coyote was brought around from the west coast as a sailor's pet and escaped from a ship.

Fire At Mine That Was [illegible]ombed Monday

PROVIDENCE, Ky., Aug. 14—(AP)—Fire destroyed a sixty-foot tipple at the number three mine of the Providence Coal company today, with loss estimated at $50,000. It was the highest property damage resulting from an act of sabotage since disorders began in Webster county July 1, when mines reopened after a three months' shutdown. Wayne Crow, a deputy sheriff, said the fire undoubtedly was incendiary.

The mine is one the three in the county that did not reopen. It employed 200 men when closed April 1. Officials said the burning was an act of retaliation against two company stockholders who went to Murphysboro, Ill., early in the week and identified Paul Montgomery's airplane as the one from which bombs were dropped in Webster county Monday.

The burning of the tipple was the second act of sabotage since Monday's bombing. Yesterday one end of an Illinois Central railway trestle was dynamited, but the damage was slight.

Essel, Grant, 35, and Ewing Riley, 20, miners arrested last night as suspects in Monday's bombing, were released under bonds of $5,000 each early today. They were arrested on information furnished by Montgomery, who States Attorney Fletcher Lewis at Murphysboro said implicated them as the men who flew with him over Providence to drop bombs.

DROUGHT RELIEF PROGRAM DRAFTED AT WHITE HOUSE

Federal Government and the States Are to Work Together—Objects Will Be to Aid Families Deprived of Their Means of Support, Prevent Unnecessary Sacrifice of Livestock and Protect Public Health—Banks, Red Cross and Railroads Will Be Called Upon to Assist

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14—(AP)—The groundwork for a far reaching drought relief organization made up of federal, state and county committees was agreed upon at the White house governors conference today with its immediate aim the prevention of livestock losses, assistance to needy farm families, and protection of the public health.

The conference was attended by governors of ten states and representatives of three other commonwealths and lasted more than three hours.

At its conclusion President Hoover declared in a statement that while the extent of the damage could not yet be determined it was certain at least 250 counties in the drought area were "most acutely affected" and required some degree of aid.

"It was the view of the conference," the president said, "that the burden of effective organization to meet the situation over the winter in the actuely affected counties rests primarily upon the counties and the states themselves, supplemented by such co-operation and assistance as may be found necessary on the part of the federal government.

Four principal methods of relief were agreed upon, placing loans privately or where necessary with the assistance of state or national agents; Red Cross assistance; employment; and reduced railway rates for food, feed and livestock.

"This relief," the president asserted "can be achieved justly and effectively only upon, first, a determination of the counties where such assistance is required, and second, upon an accurate determination of the needs of each family."

To determine such needs, the conference agreed that each governor, if he deemed it necessary, should set up a drought relief committee headed by a leading banker, Red Cross and railway representatives, and such farmers and others as the situation warrants.

The state committees would organize groups in each county where organized relief is found necessary with a personnel similar to that of the state bodies.

The president will create a national committee composed of representatives of the agriculture department, federal farm board, federal farm loan board, Red Cross, American Railway association, and the public health service, the duty of this committee will be to co-ordinate national, state, and county relief work.

The Red Cross, the president's statement said, had made a preliminary allocation of $5,000,000 "pending determination of the aggregate need." This relief organization will organize its own committees in each drought county, the head of which will serve also on the county drought committee.

The duty of the county committees will be to receive individual applications for relief and recommend the method of treatment.

The state committees, co-operating with those in the counties, will determine the extent of need beyond county resources. And, if unable to meet the situation themselves, will seek aid from national agencies.

In conjunction with the federal farm loan board, the intermediate credit system and other federal agencies, the state committees will find means of providing credit beyond local or state resources to farmers for purchase of seed, feed, support of families, or movement of livestock out of the drought sections.

To increase employment, it was agreed that the department of agriculture investigate the possibilities of advancing state road allotments to drought areas. This proposal was advanced by Governor Cooper of Ohio and others.

Under the program the agriculture department also will publish information regarding sources of food supply and localities to which livestock may be shipped for watering and feeding.

It was proposed that such states as Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and others, where a surplus of feed exists, create separate committees to cooperate with like organizations in states having surplus livestock in the moving of such stock.

President Hoover pointed out that the railroads "already have generously reduced rates by 50 per cent on food and feed inward to the drought counties and livestock movement outward, to dealers and persons that are entitled to relief and so designated by the county agents or the committees created above."

"By the inclusion of the county agents in the county committees and a railway representative upon the state committees," he added, "this service will be coordinated to the national agencies."

Although the conference formally ended, the state representatives were guests tonight of President and Mrs. Hoover at a White house dinner, after which informal discussion of the proposed relief set-up continued.

Further conferences will be held by the president tomorrow with representatives of farm organizations. Before leaving for a week-end trip to his mountain lodge in Virginia he will confer with Samuel H. Thompson, of the American Farm Bureau federation; Louis J. Taber, of the National Grange, and C. C. Talbott, of the National Farmers' Union.

Those present at today's conference were the president, Secretary Hyde, Governors Caulfield, Missouri; Emmerson, Illinois; Leslie, Indiana; Cooper, Ohio; Conley, West Virginia; Pollard, Virginia; Erickson, Montana; Weaver, Nebraska; Hammill, Iowa; and Reed, Kansas; Harvey T. FIND BEEF OF HEIFER AS PALATABLE AS THAT OF STEER

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—(AP)—This being the day of sex equality, the heifer has won recognition from meat study experts for as tender and juicy steaks as her brother, the steer, contrary to traditional belief.

The annual conference of meat investigators of 30 agricultural experiment stations and the United States department of agriculture reported today that up to a weight of 700 pounds the heifer produces beef which is just as palatable and economical as that from the steer.

In addition to bringing out that the consumer's dollar buys more meat today than at any other time since the World war, the experts said housewives could make that dollar go still further by buying little known cuts, such as plate, flank, breast, chuck, picnic and shank.

LEGAL FIGHT BY SAVIN ROCK CONCESSIONARIES

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 14—(AP)—Savin Rock concessionaries whose "bingo" and wheel game licenses were confiscated on August 6, by state and West Haven police, today sought a federal court injunction to prevent interference with their game.

U. S. District Judge Warran S. Burrows set the date for a hearing to be held in South Norwalk, as Thursday, August 21. Federal Judge Edwin S. Thomas will hear the complaint.

The concessionaires, nine in number, based their plea for an injunction on section one of the 14th amendment to the federal constitution. They contend also that their games do not come under the classification of gambling as construed by Connecticut statutes.

YOUTHFUL AIR PILOT HAD NARROW ESCAPE

ALTOONA, Pa., Aug. 14.—(AP)— A narrow escape from disaster was related by Eddie Schneider, 18-year-old Westfield, N. J., pilot, on his arrival tonight by plane from Water street at Schultz airport near Altoona from where he intends hopping off westward tomorrow in an attempt to set a new junior trans-continental east to west record flight.

Schneider related that on his flight to Water street from Huntingdon where he was forced to land earlier in the day because of fog and rain his plane scraped the top of a tree, tearing away part of the fabric from the lower part of a wing. It was Schneider's first warning that he was flying so low, he said.

Schneider, upon determining at Water street that the damage was slight, flew to Altoona later in the day to have the wing fabric repaired.

He said that, barring unfavorable weather, he will take off early tomorrow for Columbus, Ohio. He flew only 100 feet from the ground all the way from Huntingdon to Water street, landing at the latter place in a cornfield on the farm of Clare Harnia.

Schneider said he hoped to reach Los Angeles with an elapsed time lower than the record of 33 hours and 35 minutes.

SENATOR NORRIS SPENT $2,600 IN PRIMARY CAMPAIGN

LINCOLN, Nebr., Aug. 14. —(AP) — United States Senator George W. Norris, insurgent, who defeated W. M. Stebbins, regular, for the Nebraska republican senatorial nomination, spent $2,600 in his campaign, his account, filed today showed.

All of his fund of $2,900, he reported, except $228, was contributed by individuals living out of the state. Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, of Philadelphia, wife of Pennsylvania's republican candidate for governor, gave $1,000, and Senator Bronson H. Cutting, of New Mexico, gave a like amount.

BOMBING WARRANTS FOR MONTGOMERY AND MALONE

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Aug. 14—(AP)—W. S. Ingram, assistant United States district attorney, announced this afternoon he had ordered issuance, late today, at Murphysboro, of a federal warrant charging Paul Montgomery and James Malone, aviators with conspiracy in the bombing of the Providence, Pa., mining field.

Ingraham said the charge would be based on an act of congress giving the department of commerce the right to regulate air traffic. Montgomery, who has confessed he piloted the bombing plane, and Malone, who has admitted he introduced the bomb plotters to Mont[illegible] are in jail at Murphysboro

Charges of breach of the peace in the cases of Daniel Sullivan of 38 Jackson street and John O'Brien of 150 Oak street, were nolled on payment of costs in police court this morning. In an encounter at the corner of Union and Broad streets Sunday night O'Brien fell against a plate glass window of Shaheen Haddad's store, smashing the window. The fact that arrangements had been made to replace the window led Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Frank P. Fenton to recommend a nolle of the case.

A transient arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of intoxication was asked if he wanted a chance for freedom. He told the court that he had hiked everywhere and had tried to get work every day for the past month. He met with nothing but refusals and declared that he had better go to jail. Judge Frank H. Foss accommodated the man with a 30-day jail sentence and accordingly received the thanks of the transient.

DANIELSON

MISS BEATRICE R. LINDNER IS MARRIED TO E. N. BASSETT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Aug. 14—A wedding at St. Alban's church at 7 o'clock this morning was that of Miss Beatrice Rose Lindner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bertram E. Lindner, of Broad street, and Earle Newell Bassett, son of Mrs. Eva Bassett of Broad street. Rev. J. Rees Jones, the rector, was the officiating clergyman. The nuptials were attended by parents of the bride.

The bride wore a dark green suit with hat to match. Mrs. Lindner's gown was of navy blue silk, and she wore a harmonizing hat to complete her costume.

Shortly after the ceremony the newly married couple left for their wedding trip, a motor journey through the White Mountain regions of New Hampshire. Upon their return they will make their home with the groom's mother.

The bride is a graduate of Killingly high school and of the Willimantic normal school and for several years has been a teacher in this town, at Goodyear.

Mr. Bassett is also a graduate of Killingly high school and is manager of the Larkin-Reed company, with a plant on East Franklin street.

The territory in and about Danielson today was combed for a third time this week by state officers of the Danielson barracks in search of cars possessing defective braking systems and inefficient operating equipment. The drive is being conducted with marked intensity on the part of the officers who are co-operating with the state department of motor vehicles in an effort to increase the standards of highway safety.

This morning Officers Elton T. Neland and H. Theodore Strand established inspection headquarters at Plainfield and during the course of the day checked up on every car passing the scale house. A few drivers were arrested and summoned into court.

Although state requirements relative to fatal accidents necessitate that Coroner Arthur G. Bill conduct a formal inquest into the fatal accident occuring at Central Village on Sunday, August 4, causing the deaths of Charles Astroski and Mary Mrazik, both of Webster, there is little possibility of criminal responsibility being fixed upon the survivors of the terrible smashup. The coroner will question Miss Anna Spitz regarding the accident, as soon as she is recovered from her injuries. Miss Spitz is still a patient at the Day Kimball hospital, and is making a slow but favorable recovery, according to a late report from the hospital in Putnam this afternoon.

In the near future an efficiency movement will be made at the police barracks on North Main street. The improvement will be of vast importance and will effect the manner of outside communication by telephone. A small "PBX" switchboard has recently been installed which now enables the officer on desk duty to divert all calls to proper channels within a few moments. With the new instrument the homes of the lieutenant, sergeant and various rooms and buildings in and about the barracks are chained up. The mechanism is functioning at the present, but within a few weeks, the system is to be extended and elaborated upon whereby all communities within the territory patrolled by the officers of the Danielson station, will be herded into one exchange.

With this feature, one will be enabled to communicate with the police at Danielson from a telephone in Putnam or Willimantic exchanges, without having to pay the regular fee for such a call. As explained, such a practice will be made possible through the trying up of the barracks with wires running directly to the telephone exchanges in the various districts outside of Danielson, which are patrolled by officers of the North Main street station.

In addition to the improved system of telephone communication, the barracks is now preparing to receive the tel-type machine, the recent announced system of communication with other posts in the state.

Danielson is well represented in the drive for funds being raised for the construction of the proposed nurses' home at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam. At the close of the 7th week of the drive the total amount of money now on hand was reported today as being near the $10,000 mark. Danielson teams co-operating with the Putnam forces are now building up many plans which are certain to net a considerable amount.

Henry Johnson, manager of the Orpheum theatre said this morning that arrangements are now being made for a benefit movie performance to be given under the auspices of the Danielson Women's club, proceeds derived to be devoted to the home fund. It is certain that the theatrical pursuit will be run off early in September, although no definite date has been agreed upon as yet, Mr. Johnson stated. Food sales and other profitable ventures are being planned for, all of which are scheduled to be held during the first weeks of next month.

FUNERAL

Mary Bodo.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock, the funeral of Mary Bodo, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bodo of Mechanic street, who died yesterday at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam, was held from the undertaking rooms of L. E. Kennedy of Furnace street. Rev. Joseph Demers, M. S., of St. James church officiated and conducted the committal service at the grave in Holy Cross cemetery.

The announcement made yesterday at Washington, that bids for sites for the Putnam Post Office were opened at the treasury department, again brings to mind the imperative need of a similar building for Danielson. While Danielson is assured of such a federal building, negotiations here are not being made in the definite manner they are in the neighboring city of Putnam. From this it appears, that city will have realized a government owned post office some time in advance of this community.

Agents of the United States department of agriculture were in Danielson and near-by towns today investigating the extent of the ravages of the European corn borer. Last season when the borough rested on the edge of the established line of quarantine, an inspection station was conducted on the Brooklyn line for the greater part of the summer. As the resistance was not sufficiently great enough to ward off the attacks of the pest, the quarantine moved westward and this year no stations exist anywhere in the state east of the Conenecticut river.

Mr. and Mrs. Euclid Suprenant motored to Worcester Sunday.

Every man may have his price, but sooner or later the majority go to the bargain counter.

PUTNAM

BURGLAR GETS $300 IN A. AND P. STORE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Aug. 14—For the second time within a few days the operations of a lone burglar were discovered this morning when the management of the Main street store of the Atlantic & Pacific Tea company discovered a roll of currency and a bag of silver amounting to about $300, missing from its hiding place. The manager discovered that the burglar had entered the store by forcing a window in the rear of the Seder block, which opens into the back room of the business house.

The store was not ransacked and after a check-up of the stock it was learned that not a single item, other than the purse of money, had been taken. The affair was reported to the state police at Danielson barracks and Officer Henry Mayo was detailed to investigate.

Members of the Putnam police patroling that section of the city reported this morning that they observed nothing out of the way in the course of their rounds Wednesday evening. It is quite evident that who ever is responsible for the act, and incidentally the robbery at the Arnold sea grill on Bundy street, which occurred Saturday evening, is mindful of the hours officers pass on the Main street beat.

Fingerprints were copied and a few suspects were questioned this morning by Officer Mayo.

Manager Leslie E. Beebe, of the Putnam district of the S. N. E. Telephone company, said today that the sudden appearance of the navy dirigible Los Angeles over this city yesterday was responsible for an influx of phone calls being received at the local exchange. The increase in the volume of business, which occurred during the normal busy period of the day, was so great that the staff of operators was unable to care for a large percentage of the busy signals. During the fifteen minutes the giant ship remained in this vicinity, he said, the operators worked relentlessly in an effort to respond to the deluge of calls.

The Ballard family reunion was held yesterday afternoon at Roseland park and was attended by a large number.

A general alarm Wednesday evening from Box 36 on Providence street was for a small chimney and roof fire in a four-tenement dwelling on the corner of Providence and Church streets. There was little property loss incurred, Chief R E. Thurston said.

Four property owners in this city submitted bids for the site of the proposed government post office building, when the sealed proposals were called and opened at the treasury department in Washington yesterday. The bidders are R. H. Bradley, 60 Front street, owner of 12,000 square feet, with a 115-foot frontage on Front street and 150 frontage on the railroad right of way on Union street. The price was not mentioned, but will be agreed upon if the post office officials are interested.

Mary E. Gorman, of 80 Willow street, Waterbury, proposes for sale at a price of $17,000, a tract composed of 1650 feet with a 33 feet frontage in Union square and a 50 feet depth at the corner of Main and Harris streets.

I. K. McNally is the third bidder. He proposes a site containing 26,250 feet, which has 150 feet frontage on Main and School streets and a depth of 175 feet. No price is mentioned in the bid.

The last bidder is Samuel Yarock of 30 Pleasant street. He offers a tract of 13,020 square feet with a frontage of 92 feet on the easterly side of Main street extending back to Livery street. A price of $18,000 is asked.

A site agent is expected to visit Putnam during the next month for the purpose of inspecting the various sites, according to word received from the treasury department today.

With The Civilian Soldiers

The divisional parade was held Sunday afternoon and about 15,000 people witnessed the spectacle. All of the 43rd division, including men from Vermont, Maine and Rhode Island, passed in review. The Headquarter company did not participate in the parade as all men of the company are on special details.

Monday afternoon the special troops including five men from this company, Lt Murphy, Weiss, Murphy, Holgerson, A. Touchette, defeated the 172nd infantry by a score of 5 to 0. Private Weiss pitched for the special troops.

Tuesday morning the infantry, medical, machine gun and artillery units went on maneuvers in the woods surrounding the camp.

The troops are still being entertained every night with boxing bouts. They are now having the semi-finals and the bouts are very fast and exciting. One of the members of this company, Pvt. Weiss, entered the bouts and won by default as his man did not appear for the fight.

A few nights past a bunk tipping contest was held and many of the men found themselves and their belongings on the floor. Unfortunately the names of the contestants are not known and to the present date many of the men are curious to know who they are.

JEWETT CITY

WELCOME HOME PLANNED FOR REV. JOHN J. McCABE

A meeting of the men of St. Mary's parish was held Wednesday evening in the church hall to make arrangements for the home-coming of their pastor, Rev. John J. McCabe, who has been touring Europe.

The religious portion of the celebration will consist of a high mass Sunday, August 24th at 9:15. A committee was appointed to make arrangements for a public reception to be held at Finn's theatre shortly after Father McCabe's arrival. The members of the committee are: Rev. Nicholas Carron, chairman, Joseph H. McCarthy, Louis J. Masse, Richard J Dudkowski, Frederick Condie, Ulderic E. Jodoin, Thomas F. Barnett and Joseph Glavacki.

Mrs. H. E. Paul had as recent guests, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pickup of Hartsville, South Carolina. At the time when Mrs. Paul was Miss Ellen Potts of Manchester, N. H., and when Mrs. Pickup was Miss Clara Maillaird, of the same city, the two girls were school friends. It is a coincidence that Myron Alling, a one-time resident of Jewett City, is now superintendent of the cotton mills in Hartsville, S. C

Dr. and Mrs. G. H. Jennings are away for a week-end visit with their son, Dr. John G. Jennings of Weston, Mass.

Franklin G. Waters of Manomet, Mass, for many years a local resident, is visiting in town.

SILVER TROPHY CUP IS READY FOR FISK BALL TEAM

This (Friday) evening at 7:30, the directors of the Jewett City Twilight league, and the managers of the four teams, will meet at the home of the president, W. A. Richardson. There is approximately $100 in the league treasury, with which it is proposed to arrange for a chicken supper for the 75 men, who provided such good sport through the baseball season. Superintendent Richardson has the silver cup which was won by the Fisk Rubber company's team. Standing 20 inches high, the cover is adorned with a six-inch replica of a player at bat, while standing on a small gun metal baseball. The handles are two silver bats, attached to the sides. The engraving reads: "Championship Jewett City Twilight Baseball League. Season of 1930, won by Fisk Rubber Company."

August clearance sale at Arremony's store commencing today (Fri.) Very low prices are offered.—adv.

Sunday afternoon on the Fisk grounds the undefeated Q. C. Jrs. will meet the Elks' team of the Junior league. The battery for the Q. C's. will be Pizzo or Connely, p. and Tenzar, c. For the Elks LaVarge or Fuller, p. and Dugas, c. In order not to interfere with the Ashland Aces and Waterbury Giant game, this game will be called at 1:30.

Tomato growers were picking the vegetables Thursday in several gardens here, with the ones that had not been protected by the vines and had been exposed to the sun during the hot spell, showed a partly burned surface.

Bridge Rail Ornate

At the new bridge, in the rear of Mrs. Nellie Leonard's home, a 20-foot section of the finished balustrade has been completed for inspection purposes. This specimen of the all-cement rail serves to show how attractive the finishing touches will be, when both sides are thus adorned for distances of over 1,500 feet. On the river span of 350 feet, there will be no open work on the side guard rails, instead there will be, in the line of ornamentation, a continuation of closed architectural designs, suggesting the Gothic pointed style.

Consider the berry pickers! All day long under a broiling sun, with the mercury sizzling in the middle 90's local girls, yes and grown-ups, have picked hundreds of quarts of huckleberries, which some time next winter, when the silver is hardly showing in the tube, will be wrought into a blueberry pie, of wonderfully attractive make up. Some there are, who look forward to berry-picking time, as being the season when they may actually enjoy these days in the back pasture where the nicest and largest berries are to be found. The performer on a flag pole, or the sitter in a tree, has nothing on the persistent endurance of a bare-headed farmer girl, who picked twenty quarts of blue berries in half as many hours, with the temperature 96 in the shade. That is what one local young woman did, then came home and prepared supper for the family, milked two cows, got three children ready for bed, then studied school lessons until time to retire.

A circular letter received here reads: Although the American Junior Red Cross purposely discouraged returns for the hundred thousand Christmas boxes sent to poor children in foreign lands last year, it has recently received a number of "thank you" gifts in addition to large quantities of acknowledgements in the form of letters and post cards. The most recent thank you gift is a shipment of chocolate from the Junior Red Cross of Switzerland. The Turkish Junior Red Crescent had previously sent a thousand packets of dried sultanas and figs; and the Greek Junior Red Coss, a shipment of zante currants. The Turkish Red Crescent is a society formed on the same principles as the Red Cross, but with a different title to conform with the religious beliefs of the Turkish people. From the Japanese Juniors came twenty cases of articles made by them in their schools. Altogether, thank you material was received from nineteen foreign lands. The letters and post cards expressing gratitude for the Christmas boxes come from all parts of the world and are distributed by national headquarters of the American Red Cross among all American Junior auxiliaries contributing these boxes. The thank you gifts, although relatively small in quantity to the Christmas boxes, are equitably divided among these auxiliaries. No matter how small the quantity, the recipients feel that it is a tangible expression of good will.

The preparation of another shipment of Christmas boxes will begin as soon as the Juniors assemble again at the opening of the school year.

Mrs. Martha Moore and granddaughter, Miss Martha McPherson, of New York city, who are at Willimantic camp ground, are guests for a few days of James McCluggage and daughter, Miss Bessie McCluggage.

Lynwood Mort is spending a short time at home. During this summer he is on the survey of a railroad from Redding, Pa. to Lake Lucerne, N. Y., working in conjunction with the Delaware and Hudson R. R. He will return to Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at the opening of the school year.

The Feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary will be observed in St. Mary's church today (Friday). On Saturday, Saint Joachim, father of the Virgin will be honored.

Miss Alice Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cathcart and son, and Miss Ida Foster, of Jewett City, and Mrs. Alice Rood of Lisbon attended the Brown family reunion held in Mansfield Center. Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Barber of Westminster, Vt., who are visiting local relatives were also present.

Mrs. Emma Raney entertained the Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church at her home Thursday afternoon. She was assisted by Mrs. Frank Eccleston, Mrs. Edward Raney, Mrs. Winifred Sweet and Mrs. John MacLean. Mrs. G. H. Prior president at the business meeting.

INTERNATIONAL AVIATION

So rapid are the strides that aviation is making that the day is practically at our doors when flights will assume more and more of an international aspect, as was pointed out by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh when he spoke this week before a group of foreign representatives at Williamstown, where there was a conference on national air policies. He referred to the fact that commercial flying in the United States has progressed faster than in any other nation in the world in the past few years and that regular air services are now maintained between this country and Mexico and Central and South America.

It was the expressed opinion of Colonel Lindbergh that the time has been reached when international aviation should be simplified and encouraged by the adoption of national air policies, which would be of special aid to the private owner of aircraft, who would like to wing his way beyond the confines of his own national boundaries.

Colonel Lindbergh gave expression to his belief that there are still great opportunities to make the carrying of passengers and express a great deal faster than is done now if there should be a standard set of regulations, a simpler set of forms to be filled out, and if the various countries now served by United States air lines can be induced to co-operate, with an idea towards the future and what these lines will bring to them in the future.

Present conditions bear particularly hard upon the private owner of aircraft, who finds it almost impossible, in making an international trip by air, to find out in advance what conditions he will encounter, both in regard to air routes and also as to the regulations and restrictions laid down by the various countries he expects to fly through.

International aviation is on the way and Colonel Lindbergh has indicated that it is time for the various countries to take up the question seriously so that as international flying becomes more and more a practice, whether for business or sport, there will be no obstacles in the way.

DROUGHT AND DROUGTH

Whichever may be the preferred form farmers in the region affected by the prolonged dry spell are painfully aware that the effects are much the same whether it is spelled "drought" or "drougth". That there could be a difference in the arrangement of the last two letters was brought to notice when President Hoover announced that he would take steps to relieve the distress of those touched by the "drougth", while the department of agriculture declares that its good offices will be exercised for those whose crops have been almost ruined by the "drougth".

The Standard dictionary lists both drought and drougth, and also draut, drauth and drout, all meaning the same thing. The old Anglo-Saxon word for extreme dryness was droghte. Webster's dictionary prefers drought to drougth and gives droght as one of the old forms. The Century, which gives both words, says that drougth is equivalent to "dry-th", and is etymologically the more correct spelling. There is a similarity in making warmth from warm. Both forms—drought and drougth—have been in use since the middle English period, according to the Century, but drought has been more common.

It is not likely that the farmers, looking over acres of corn that the sun has fired, or pastures burned brown by excessive heat, with lack of rain, will be much concerned about whether they have suffered from a drought of a drougth. They may agree with President Hoover that they never experienced a worse drought and will be equally interested in what the agriculture department proposes to do about the drougth. It is results they are after, and whether they come under one designation or the other, the country will be more interested in what can be done than in the way to spell a word.

GUIDANCE FOR THE INDIAN

The government bureau of Indian affairs has always had for its objective the purpose of making the Indian industrious, self-supporting and fit for the rights and obligations of American citizenship, but progress towards the goal has been slow and far from steady. In the past the methods of the bureau and the quality of its agents have left much to be desired, but a new note is discernible in the ideas advanced by Commissioner Rhoades in his annual report.

Mr. Rhoades and his assistants, as known friends of the Indian, have been reconstructing the Indian schools and emphasizing vocational training. They desire to teach the Indians improved farming methods, enabling them to benefit by the scientific [illegible] achievements of their white fellow citizens, and they propose to find employment for Indians who seek work outside the reservations. Agencies for the sale of Indian pottery, baskets and rugs will provide markets for these and other Indian products.

For one thing, Commissioner Rhoades and his associates are to discourage Indians linking up with wild-west shows and similar enterprises. Within limits there is no objection to this, they say, but the practice can be carried to excess. The exploitation of the Indian by unscrupulous agents and other white men has been notorious in the past, and the Indian affairs department has been a by-word for red tape, dishonesty and waste.

The re-organized bureau has gone about its task of reform in the right spirit and proposes to institute business principles and methods in the conduct of Indian affairs. These applied with integrity should give reasonable expectation of accomplishing much for the red man as time goes on.

DUBIOUS UNEMPLOYMENT CURES

It has been the general assumption that construction of public works and further increases in customs duties are to be two of the methods employed by the new conservative ministry of Canada in attempts to solve the unemployment problem. Rather loose and vague talk attributes to Mr. Bennett, the new premier, the determination to cut off about $500,000,000 worth of dominion trade with the United States in addition to the considerable reductions in such trade which will be ascribed to legislation passed by the late liberal government. But Mr. Bennett and his colleagues may find that retaliation is a two-edged sword. To cut off imports is to reduce exports in virtually the same measure. International trade is essentially an exchange of goods and services. No country unselfishly confers favors on another by buying its goods. It may transfer a portion of its trade from one foreign market to another, but it must obtain an equivalent benefit for the transfer.

In Great Britain, where there is formidable reaction against free trade, encouragement has been given to the friends of protection, in and out of politics, by the frank advocacy a change in the nation's fiscal policy by the Electrical and Allied Manufacturers' association, which favors a systematic restriction of imports. Indirectly this is advocating high protection as one remedy for British unemployment. This is advice that runs contrary to British economists and progressive business men who have been urging greater freedom of international trade as a means of recovery from world-wide depression. They have argued that restraint of trade aggravates instead of relieves unemployment situations and they believe in special efforts to cultivate old and new foreign markets.

POSTAL SERVICE EFFICIENCY

In line with the policies of the Hoover administration, an efficiency survey in 19 cities, including New York and Chicago, has been conducted by the post office department, according to announcement, with a view to putting the postal service on a better business basis.

It is not the intention to dismiss employes, but every effort will be made to effect economies, while improving the efficiency of the service. In some cities, it appears, reforms already have been introduced, which include more collections both in the business districts and the residential sections of the cities affected. Time and money are also saved, it is claimed, by sending mail directly to branch offices from which it is to be distributed, instead of having it go first to the main office as has been the practice.

It is the intention of the postal officials to extend the survey to the service in all the larger cities and to order in each of them the particular changes deemed desirable in the interest of better service. In the course of time it is possible that the postal survey may be extended to the smaller cities.

So far so good. There are no doubt places where improvement can be made without the addition of much, if anything, to present costs. But in some quarters the question is raised whether the department has looked close at home at some of the Washington phases of the postal problem. Have the surveys thrown any light on the economies to be effected by stopping abuses of the franking system, by adopting modern accounting and bookkeeping methods and by co-ordination?

It is suspected that reform in the postal service could be started within the limits of the District of Columbia but it need not end there.

DEAR LITTLE SPITFIRE

Jacqueline had a temper, quite a temper, indeed. But somehow Arnold didn't mind that. He had been reared in a family of women who never lost their tempers. The more angry they got the chillier became the atmosphere for miles around. Wherefore, Arnold's sisters and cousins took it upon themselves to warn him of the frightful consequences of marrying a girl with a temper like Jacqueline's.

"She flares up like a skyrocket," stated his eldest sister, who had not been known to lose her self-possession since the day she was 18. And that was a good many years ago.

"Goodness, and she's so undignified!" Arnold's youngest sister-in-law chimed in. "Just yesterday we were downtown together——"

"Oh, you two going out together?" queried Arnold, a bit mollified.

"No," laughed his sister-in-law, in a tone of voice that implied how great was the distance between the undignified Jacqueline and herself. "We just happened to meet downtown and were going the same way. What I started to say," she went on, "is that Jacqueline is altogether too impulsive. We had the right of way while crossing Dearborn street and a man came along in a car and almost ran us over as he turned the corner."

"And Jacqueline became righteously indignant?" laughed Arnold.

"Indignant? I was indignant. But I didn't permit it to get the better of me. I simply stood back and froze him with a look. That's the proper way to treat these people."

"But Jacqueline?"

"Oh, she gave one appealing glance at the traffic officer—she can be so appealing when she wants to——"

"She can and is," stated Arnold firmly, much to the general annoyance of the others.

"Yes, and he blew his whistle to make that motorist step back. And then what do you think she did, at her age?"

"Stamped her foot?" hazarded his eldest sister.

"Cussed?" grinned Arnold.

"She put her tongue right out at that motorist!" finished his sister-in-law amid the general amazement. "Right on Dearborn street."

Of course, Arnold might have replied very fittingly to all their palaver. He might have told them that he was fed up on dignity and the roles of martyrdom to which he had been treated so many years by them all. "I'd rather marry a girl with a rousing good temper who flares up for an instant and forgets about it than marry some one who broods over every little thing for months. That patient, long-suffering stuff doesn't make a hit with me!" But being a gentleman, Arnold merely shrugged his shoulders and turned away.

The worst part of it according to him, was that Jacqueline never got angry with him. He would have enjoyed a flare-up or two, with its attendant reconciliation, which always took place immediately, as far as Jacqueline was concerned.

"Guess she just doesn't care enough about me to get angry at anything," he mourned. "Even the night I was three-quarters of an hour late for the dance she didn't get mad. Any other girl would have been storming, but Jacqueline was as calm as—as a summer day. Sweet about it too. Not this martyr calmness. Heavens, no!"

It was a week later that Arnold had to leave town and something that Jacqueline said in answer to his proposal of marriage led him to hope that she'd accept him when he came back. Still, there was that fear in his heart: Jacqueline just didn't care enough or she couldn't take him so calmly.

"I—did you get my letter, dear?" he asked upon his return.

"Letter?" Jacqueline, who had barely had time to greet him at the door, turned furiously upon him. "I should say I did. But I didn't read it. If I'd known where to send it back, I'd have sent it, I assure you. But I—I burned it up. The very idea of sending me another girl's picture! What do I want with a picture of one of your girls?"

"A picture—ye gods!" Arnold broke into a hearty laugh. "Honey, you should have read the letter. I asked you to have your picture taken for my watch, and the picture I sent you was an add, just to show you the size I wanted you to get to fit my old case. I'll be hanged! Here, stop crying, Jacqueline girl. And don't dare apologize, no siree. So you do really care, you dear little spitfire."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14—When the first regular session of the 71st congress shut down July 3 it is a notable fact that none of the "four horsemen" of republican house management was on the job.

Longworth, Tilson, Snell and Will Wood were all elsewhere.

Which has called to the mind of a press gallery friend the fact that one of the most bashful and retiring men in the house is nevertheless one of its most important members.

He is Carl Mapes of Michigan, who wielded the speaker's gavel at adjournment.

He is so reticent about himself that the only matter of note he found to put in his congressional biography were that he was married, had three children and had been elected "to the 63rd and succeeding congresses."

Yet Mapes unusually is called to the speaker's chair whenever Speaker Longworth is necessarily absent at a critical time. The house membership generally seems to like him and respect his parliamentary knowledge and his fairness. He does not have much trouble as acting speaker.

Curiously enough that closing session of the house found three Michiganders acting as sort of deputy horsemen.

Michener pinch hit for Tilson as majority leader, while Crampton covered the vitally important rules committee job for the absent Snell of New York.

Add Purnell of Indiana, filling in as appropriation committee boss in the absence of his colleague, Will Wood, and you have a complete deputy set-up to carry on with house leadership methods.

Yet the odd thing about this deputy set-up is that three of the four, Mapes, Michener and Purnell, are rather close-mouthed men.

They are a greatly relied on trio in house management but not very often active in debate.

Crampton is. As committee watchdog of interior department appropriations he has had rows galore with senators.

Probably his name has got into senate debates in recent years about as often as any other house member for that reason. Heavyweight senate verbal artillery has bombarded him time and again; but produced no visible result. Maybe he enjoyed the resulting publicity. At any rate, he kept right on Cramptoning.

No one can deny that the "four horsemen" or "big three" house management arrangement further developed and efficiently operated by Messrs. Longworth, Tilson and Snell has rolled selected legislation through that body at amazing speed.

It is machinery devised to replace the czarship of the speaker, overthrown in Uncle Joe Cannon's day.

But a veteran of house and senate, now just official onlooker at proceedings, so to speak, told the Bystander that sooner or later a revolt would break out.

"The house will never long tolerate arbitrary control by a handful of men," he said, with three decades of congressional experience to support his view.

YOUR HEALTH

How to Live Long

By Everett Minhus, M. D.,
Marshfield, Oregon
From Gorgas Memorial Institute,
Washington, D. C.

The life time of an individual is limited, but useful persons should live as long as possible. The prolongation of life depends upon the rate of discharge of units of energy; complete exhaustion may take place in a short space of time and induce early or sudden death, but the physical condition of those who have reached a standard age of expectancy is determined by the intervals of rest that have been taken.

Rest and food are mainly the two sources upon which we rely to restore and readjust balances in structural relations of our bodies. Rest is a very important factor in this dual combination and should be given more consideration than is ordinarily observed. Night time is the natural period for rest; however, a full night of sleep is not sufficient to carry a busy human organism through 14 or 16 hours of activity without incurring the deleterious effects of over work. To counteract the disintegrating effect of prolonged hours of both physical and mental labor, the mid-day meal should be followed by a rest of at least a half hour in the recumbent position. An hour's rest is even better.

The increased number of cardio vascular disease at an early age, are the result of prolonged strain and increased arterial tension incident to the performance of strenuous work. To be sure, there are personal differences in the matter of endurance, but no one is so constituted that he can escape the ill effects of excessive toil.

If one should take an extra peaceful hour of rest in the recumbent position each day, the beneficial results at the end of the year would be greater than if one should take a whole month of continuous rest and then labor strenuously the balance of the year. Ninety minutes for the noon day meal and rest is not without profit and physical improvement. When one lies down the rate of the heart beat diminishes and its muscular tone improves; but, to receive the full benefit of repose, the mind should be at rest or at least pleasantly engaged. Indeed the rate of the heart beat may be accelerated while one is in the recumbent position if the mental state is one of excitement or anxiety.

Just what are the limits of safety in the expenditure of physical and mental energy is not possible to estimate; but we have sufficient general information, from practical observation, to realize that all animal organisms are affected disadvantageously when the rate of discharge of vital energy makes an excessive demand upon the maintenance and reserve forces of cellular activity.

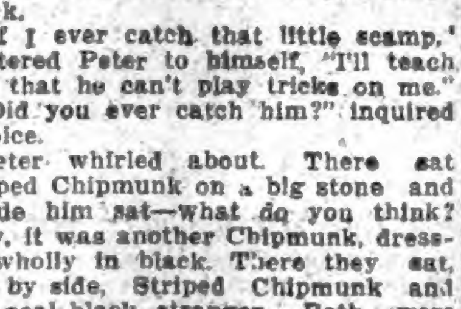
Therefore, our recourse for protection against premature disintegration must be found in the application of those principles that affect matter in general—that wear imposes tear, and the greater the wear, the tear is proportionately greater.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Truth at Last

The truth will out if you but wait.
Alas, it is sometimes too late.
—Mother West Wind.

Peter Rabbit was getting very much provoked. Peter doesn't often lose his temper, but he was very near to losing it now. You see, he had a feeling that he was the victim of a joke. He had the feeling that Striped Chipmunk was playing a joke on him. First he would see Striped Chipmunk on the old stone wall, then he would hear a little noise in the other direction and turning his head would see a black Chipmunk. When he looked back Striped Chipmunk would be gone, only to reappear where he had seen, or thought he had seen, the black Chipmunk. It was getting so that Peter didn't know whether he was dreaming or awake. He didn't know whether he was really seeing things or thinking that he was seeing things. But he had a strong suspicion that it was all the fault of Striped Chipmunk.



"Well, Peter," said Striped Chipmunk; "what do you see now?"

"If I ever catch that little scamp," muttered Peter to himself, "I'll teach him that he can't play tricks on me."

"Did you ever catch him?" inquired a voice.

Peter whirled about. There sat Striped Chipmunk on a big stone and beside him sat—what do you think? Why, it was another Chipmunk, dressed wholly in black. There they sat, side by side, Striped Chipmunk and the coal-black stranger. Both were grinning at Peter. Yes, sir, both were grinning at Peter.

"Well, Peter," said Striped Chipmunk, "what do you see now?"

"I—I"— began Peter and stopped. He didn't know what to say.

Striped Chipmunk chuckled. "I don't wonder you are puzzled, Peter," said he. "This is one of my last family of children. I have named him Impy. Even Black Pussy the Cat is no blacker. I have heard it said that one of my great-great, ever-so-great, grandfathers wore a black coat, which may or may not explain how Impy came by his. He has been keeping pretty much out of sight, but, of course, he has had to come out some time, and you and Sammy Jay and one or two others have had glimpses of him."

Peter gave a great sigh. Striped Chipmunk looked at him inquiringly. "It's a great relief," said Peter.

"What is a great relief?" asked Striped Chipmunk.

"To know that my eyes are all right," replied Peter, "and to know that I know that I'm awake. I remember that Reddy Fox one time had a son with a black coat but I didn't suppose that there ever was a black coat in the Chipmunk family. If I were in Impy's place, I know what I would do."

"What would you do?" asked Striped Chipmunk.

"I would sleep all day and travel around at night," replied Peter.

"What for?" asked Impy, speaking for the first time.

"Because I would feel safer then," replied Peter. "I don't believe that even Hooty the Owl, despite his wonderful eyes, would be able to see you running around in the Black Shadows."

"Humph!" said Striped Chipmunk. "He wouldn't be able to see himself. You see, Peter, we Squirrels have been given eyes for light, not for dark. Now, it doesn't seem to make a great deal of difference to you whether you are running around at night or in the daytime. But it does make a great deal of difference. So I guess Impy will have to live like the rest of us Chipmunks, even if he doesn't look like us."

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Changsa: City of Fireworks and Stair-Climbing Wheelbarrows.

Changsha, China, reported looted by communist forces, is described in a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society as follows:

"Changsha is a city of fireworks, literally and figuratively. The Fourth of July firecrackers used by the American small boy before the 'Safe and Sane Fourth' was so widely enforced were imported heavily from Changsha. The city long was a focal point for operations between the northern and southern armies, especially in 1922 when it was a scene of the long delayed meeting of the two units.

"The city is the capital of the hilly province of Hunan, important because it contains enormous coal fields, many unworked, and because in it, to the north of Changsha, is the huge lake, Tung-ting hu, which acts as a reservoir for the Yangtze floods.

"Among Changsha's most interesting sights are the wheelbarrows that climb stairs. Some distance ahead of the regulation wheel there is another smaller one. In climbing over flagstone steps or bridges, the handles of the wheelbarrow are lowered until the auxiliary wheel rises above the next higher step. Then the wheelbarrow, which often carries 300 or 400 pounds, see-saws from wheel to wheel until the next level stretch of the flagstones is attained.

"In Hunan, the necromancer has exerted much power and Changsha was so well protected by the lucky constellation under which it was founded and by the Holy Hill which guards it that it formerly was thought a profanation for the 'foreign devil' to enter. In 1910, there were serious riots, mainly directed against the growing commercial power of foreign firms but the disturbance also had its astronomical accompaniments, for it was the approach of Halley's comet which touched off the explosion.

"Today Changsha is closely linked with New Haven, Conn., for there is, just outside the rapidly disappearing wall, in which the inhabitants once took great pride, one of the best known mission schools in China, which is Yale's contribution to the education of the Chinese who cannot come to America.

"A large part of Hunan is an unworked field of anthracite and bituminous coal and at Pinghsiang, which is connected with Changsha by railroad, there is one of the mines which furnishes fuel for the great iron works at Hanyang.

"Among the great men who have been among Changsha's chief products the most famous was General Tseng Kuo Fan, whose cooperation with 'Chinese Gordon' was largely instrumental in putting down the Taiping rebellion. General Tseng was not only a soldier and statesman but a literary man as well and his collected works of 156 books were edited by Li Hung Chang.

"Changsha lies on a projected line of railway between Peiping and Canton; and trains have already competed with the light-draft steamers which make the 220 mile trip from Hankow. With about 500,000 inhabitants, it rules a province of 22 million and is one of the cleanest cities in China.

"Many of the streets are long and straight and at one time the city itself was divided between two magistracies. The bazaars are full of life and interest, some of the candies being famous for miles around.

"The Episcopal mission has a live Boy Scout troop and the visitor who watched tent-pegging, fire rescue, stretcher making and other Boy Scout activities would marvel at China's quick changes. For until after the Boxer trouble, Hunan's capital excluded the dread foreigner from its walls whose brick battlements, rising above the site of a former wall constructed in 202 B. C., were themselves built while Shakespeare was alive."

LOCAL MAN ARRESTED FOR DRUNKEN DRIVING

Henry A. MarcAurelle, 34, of No. 366 Central avenue, motorman for the Connecticut company, was arrested Thursday evening on a charge of driving a machine while under the influence of liquor. While driving along the Norwich-Jewett City highway MarcAurelle, it is said, forced a machine off the road. He was followed by the owner to St. Mary's cemetery, where the latter notified Officer Burns.

They started in pursuit after the alleged drunken driver, who took them over several streets in the Greeneville section of the city and finally eluded them. The registration of the offending machine was secured, however, and all officers on duty were on the watch for MarcAurelle. Later, he was detected driving into his garage and was arrested.

He was locked up at police headquarters under a bond of $300 and will be presented in city court this (Friday) morning.

CENTRAL CHURCH MEMBERS GUESTS AT PINE LODGE

Thursday was the annual at home day for members of the Central Baptist church, held by Rev. Dr. and Mrs David A. Pitt at Pine lodge, their summer home at Voluntown, and about 75 of the church members motored out there during the afternoon and early evening. The time was spent in an informal social way and at 5:30 there was a basket lunch, following which the regular mid-week church meeting was conducted with Rev. Dr. Pitt as the speaker upon the pleasures and the value of Christian friendship. Mrs. Pitt also spoke in a similar line and the delightful gathering came to a close as the shades of night suggested that it was time to return to the city.

PEQUOTSEPOS MANOR, DENISON HOMESTEAD, AT MYSTIC

700 DENISONS TO MEET AT OLD HOMESTEAD IN MYSTIC

Of the 900 persons invited to participate in the organization meeting of the George and Ann Borodell Denison society, to be held at Pequotsepos manor, the family homestead in Mystic, on Saturday, Aug. 16, it is announced that more than 700 persons have accepted. The invitations were issued by the present owner of the homestead, Mrs. Ann Borodell Denison Gates (Mrs. N. Stanton Gates). They read as follows:

"The first annual meeting of the George and Ann Borodell Denison society will be held at Pequotsepos manor (the old Denison homestead) on Saturday, August 16, 1930, at 2 o'clock, d. s. t. There will be an election of officers and by-laws will be adopted. All descendants of George and Ann Borodell Denison are eligible to membership. It will give me great pleasure if you and the members of your family will lunch with me at 12:30 d. s. t. and remain for the meeting."

To Have an Endowed Home

Supplementing this invitation, Mrs. Gates explains:

"It was long a fond dream of my husband and myself to organize a Denison society. I believe this dream will soon be a reality.

"The George and Ann Borodell Denison society has been incorporated under the laws of the state of Connecticut. The purpose of this meeting is to complete the organization and elect officers.

"At some future time the old Denison homestead (Pequotsepos Manor) will be transferred to the society. The house and surroundings will be adequately endowed, so there will be no expense to the society for maintenance and upkeep. In other words, the Denison society will be an organization possessing a sufficiently endowed home."

The Far-Flung Denison Clan

The descendants of Captain Denison are very widely scattered throughout both this country and Canada. Captain Denison settled in Stonington in 1654, and until the fourth generation the great majority of the family lived in southeastern Connecticut. Then they began to scatter. One member of that generation, Captain Robert Denison, son of Robert of Mohegan, settled in Nova Scotia, where his posterity are numerous and highly respected.

Robert Denison of the fifth generation, son of Daniel, emigrated to Knox, N. Y., and from there two of his sons and three of his daughters went to Napanee, Ontario, Canada, founding a branch of the family in that part of the dominion. There was a large emigration quite early to Vermont and border towns of Massachusetts, and at about the same time or a little later to New York and Pennsylvania. Thence the Denisons have spread westward to Ohio and the northwestern states and across the continent to California and Oregon. Only a few are reported in the southern states.

The intermarriage of Captain Denison's daughters and granddaughters with the Palmers, Cheseboros, Stantons, Williamses, Billingses, Browns and Babcocks gives him a very numerous posterity in Stonington and vicinity. It is said that nearly half the townspeople of colonial stock can trace their lineage back to him.

A biography of Capt. George Denison will appear on the editorial page of The Bulletin tomorrow.

A VISIT TO THE DENISON HOME, PEQUOTSEPOS MANOR

In the town of Stonington are a number of old houses in a good state of preservation, but the one that overshadows them all in historic interest and furnishings is the George Denison Mansion house in the Pequotsepos valley, a little over a mile east of Mystic, owned by the eighth descendant of Capt. George Denison. Ann Borodell Denison Gates (Mrs. N. Stanton Gates) daughter of the late Captain Edgar Denison and Margaret E. Mandeville. The house was built by George Denison, grandson of Captain George Denison, about 1717. It is fortunate that the homestead has remained in the Denison family, as each generation has taken great pride in keeping it in good repair without alterations.

The mansion is situated upon a slope of a hill commanding a fine view of the surrounding valley. There are flat rocks near the house and two immense elm trees which stand directly in front furnish shade and add to the beauty of the place.

In the west end of the yard is the old sleigh with a fresh coat of paint and as you look at it you are reminded how much our ancestors enjoyed sleigh-riding. Now, in the days of automobiles, one is seldom seen in the winter.

Old-Fashioned Flower Gardens

The attractive flower gardens with their stepping stones are situated west of the house. In them you will find the old varieties cultivated by the owners' ancestors, hollyhocks, marigolds, zinnias, lilies, phlox in many colors, and numerous other kinds.

In the garden is a pool of water, flowing into an immense shell, thence into a lower pool. Living frogs look at the visitor as much as to say, "This is my beautiful home."

Everything about the exterior of the house and grounds shows the careful attention the present owner has given in its upkeep. The house was originally covered with long three foot shingles, which with the passing of the years had become weather-worn. Mrs. Gates, with great difficulty, has obtained reproductions of the original shingles with which she has had the house re-covered. At present it stands in its original state with prospect of surviving another two centuries.

The front door with its old iron knocker, is in the center of the house. After knocking you are greeted by Mrs. Gates, a most lovable and hospitable woman, who invites you in and makes you welcome. Your first impression, after stepping into the hall and getting a glimpse of the priceless furnishings, makes you wonder how it will be possible to do it justice with mere words written down on paper.

In the front hall there are two old jugs with dates 1830 and 1847. The electric light shines through an old perforated tin lantern, which once held a candle to furnish light for the family to go about the place. Grandfather's clock stands in the corner, ticking, still telling the time of day. On the floor is a hooked rug. Upon either side of the hall are two large sunshiny rooms, and in each are two summer beams.

Progenitor's Will is Framed

Upon entering the east room (now used as a living room) the first article of interest shown by Mrs. Gates, is the framed will of Capt. George Denison, dated 1693, in such excellent condition that visitors can still read it, if they care to take the time.

The old corner cupboard is filled with dishes—a Welcome glass in honor of Lafayette's visit to America, marked 1825, another very large glass used in olden times, holding a sufficient quantity for several persons. This glass was customarily filled and passed among the guests, until emptied, a very different idea from our individual drinking cups of today. Of especial interest is the set of dishes which was a wedding gift to Mrs. Gates' grandmother in 1825. While they have been used on special occasions, the set is complete and looks like new.

On the mantel over the fireplace are brass candlesticks owned by Ann Borodell Denison, and a luster pitcher that was Mrs. Nathan Noyes', great-grandmother of Mrs. Gates. Also on the mantel is an old fluid lamp.

A beautiful maple writing desk, in use by the owner, and a great-grandfather's chair are two more interesting articles in this room. Here also are other old chairs of interest, large hooked rugs and old pictures.

Relic of Hero of 1812

Leaving this room, we go into a smaller one in which we find an old gate-leg table and all Windsor chairs. A trunk owned by Fred Denison, who was killed in the war of 1812, stands here.

We now enter the dining room and are told that the table and chairs are the only modern furniture in the house. We notice first the immense copper kettle and cannot refrain from saying that we have never seen such a large one. There is the old fireplace with the crane holding a kettle, as it has done since the house was built. The chimney oven has been removed but is to be restored by Mrs. Gates.

The sideboard is admired; on it is a four-piece silver set brightly shining and of rare design.

On the mantel, ticking merrily, is a genuine Terry clock. Opening the door, one finds the inscription: "Invented by Eli Terry. Made and sold at Plymouth, Conn., E. Terry and Sons. Warrented, if well used." As you close the door, you will at once decide that the instructions have been well carried out. Also on the mantel are pewter plates and candlesticks in excellent condition.

Four-Poster Bedstead

A bed-room leading from the dining room is furnished with a single four-poster bedstead, dressing table, old stand, a chair and a high-boy, all of maple wood; a large hooked rug and two historical pictures.

The parlor is the west room, leading from the front hall. It is most beautiful. Each side of the fireplace, with its crane and kettle and old andirons, is paneled. Two brass hooks, used by Ann Borodell Denison to hang her knitting bag on, project from the walls. Two tables, fiddle-back chairs and one banister-back Windsor chair, very rare and valuable, comprise part of the furnishings.

A temptation to any musician to try, is the old melodeon in perfect condition. There are six hooked rugs on the floor. The parlor has recently been re-decorated by an interior decorator and the color scheme used is very attractive. Before leaving the room, we notice a Betty lamp and tinder box on the mantel.

After seeing the lower floor, we go up the stairs and discover two large sleeping rooms on either side of the hall, where the sun shines in brightly. As we enter the west room we see the mahogany high-post bedstead with canopy top, with ancient bedquilt for a covering and three steps that are used to get into the bed. There is also a fire-place in this room; a stove with four pillars on the top, with a pipe connected to the chimney, ready for use. This stove is an exceptionally rare antique.

An old looking glass on the wall, a velvet carpet-bag, two old band boxes used to keep grandmother's best bonnets in, chairs and dresser to match and braided rugs, four large and two smaller ones, furnish this room.

Over the mantel is a framed sampler made by Mrs. Marcia Denison Stanton, aunt of Mrs. Gates, when she was eight years old. It has all the children of Oliver Denison, father of Marcia, except the last, who was born after the sampler was made. It is an excellent piece of work and it is doubtful if a child of today would be able to do a thing of that kind. In the bedroom out of the room just described is an old sleigh bed with dresser and chairs and stand.

Summer Beams in Front Rooms

The east front room, like the west front room, has one summer beam and is furnished with four-poster bedstead, a Windsor settee, a very rare piece of furniture; a Windsor desk, dresser, high-boy, stand and chairs, all of maple. Braided rugs are on the floor.

In the upper part of the front hall hang three sets of pictures, "Drunkard's Pilgrimage," "Stages of Man's Life from Cradle to the Grave" and "Stages of Woman's Life from Cradle to the Grave."

From the front hall we go upstairs into the attic, where we find two looms, all set up with every equipment used by our grandmothers for weaving.

We have not described the kitchen, as this is the ell which has been added on during the last century.

While modern conveniences have been installed, the house has been in no way changed from the original architectural plans. The electric lights have sconces that harmonize perfectly with the interior of the house. While steam heat is now used for heating the house, the fireplaces may also be used.

The Original Manor House

Only one permanent house preceded Pequotsepos manor as the Denison homestead. This was the original dwelling built by the founder of the family, Capt. George Denison, grandfather of the George who erected Pequotsepos. This original dwelling was put up by Captain Denison when he removed from New London to Stonington in 1654. The house, its site and the original home acres are described in "A Record of the Descendants of Captain George Denison of Stonington, Conn.," a genealogical work prepared by John Denison Baldwin and William Clift and published in 1881. As this book is now quite rare, the description of the original house and holding is given herewith:

"His homestead place (originally of 500 acres, and excluding later additional tracts which brought his total land holdings up to several thousand acres) was bounded on the west by John Stanton's farm, now mainly owned by Joseph S. Williams; on the south by the Mason highway, which with slight variations is the road from Mystic bridge to the Road church; eastward to Palmer hill and then by Amos Richardson's land, easterly by Richardson's land and the town lots and westerly by said lots and lands of Capt. John Gallup.

"The first house was probably a log house, which only served a temporary purpose and was removed in Captain Denison's life time to make room for his mansion house. This was located in the northwest corner of his tract, a few feet west of the present dwelling of the Misses Sarah and Phebe M. Denison.

Was Easy of Defense

"The spot was undoubtedly selected with the eye of a military leader for the purpose of defense against the Indians, who were then numerous and disputed possession of the country with the English. There is no other spot so eligible for defense in the neighborhood.

"The house stood upon the southern slope of a narrow plot of ground about 25 rods long, buttressed with steep ledges on every side. This acre of ground, more or less, elevated from 20 to 30 feet above the surrounding ravines, and stockaded, was impregnable against any force the Indians could muster.

"There was a stone fort inside of the stockade near the house, and the remains of the old wall are still pointed out. It was removed about 100 years ago by those who had slight appreciation of historic monuments. The stones are still visible in the walls near the house.

"The location is a pleasant one, standing high above the adjacent fields and looking southward over a broad tract of intervale, once probably cultivated by the aborigines and now lying in meadow, the best part of the neighboring farms.

Vista of Rare Beauty

"In this direction you get glimpses of the Mystic river and the sound, with Fisher's island and Long island in the distance. To the west lies Pequod hill, once crowned with an Indian fort, and the scene of the terrible slaughter under Capt. John Mason. To the north lies Quocataug with the Mystic valley on the left, stretching away toward Lantern hill; a scene of rural beauty not easily matched in the county.

"The land has many ledges, with loose, well-rounded boulders upon the top, left in the ice period, geologists tell us, and ground into their present form by the moving glaciers. It is still hard land, even for Stonington, with rough pastures which the plow has never broken and probably never will break. There are, however smooth fertile acres between. Emigrants had been here for five years before Captain Denison, to spy out the land, and the best locations had already been appropriated.

"Perched on this ledge of rocks like a baron in his castel, Captain Denison had a comanding influence among his townsmen for 40 years, was their trusted leader in military forays against the Indians and their frequent representative at the general court at Hartford."

LUCIER ALLOWS SMOKE SHOP BUT A SINGLE HIT AS ITALIANS TRIUMPH

Lefty Lucier, with a bum wing, shut out his former teammates at the campus last night and barely missed entering the City legue hall of fame. But for a hard hearted scorekeeper, who ruled Gibbs' slow grounder to Yerrington in the fourth a safe hit, Lefty would have gotten away with a perfect game, the hit in question being the only one that the Smokers got off his delivery in five full innings. Lucier took the hill at the start of the game with a very sore arm and as the innings wore away the wing pained more and more. Despite the pleadings of his teammates the gritty southpaw would not quit until he was certain in that he had defeated his one time alma mater.

For the third time in as many nights the opposing teams resorted to the defensive type of game. As mentioned, the Smoke Shop got one single and the Italians got away with two more. The score was 3 to 0. Each club turned in its share of good fielding, but one error being made by each of the opposing sides during the course of play.

Zip Gero, product of the New London City league, worked from the Smoke Shop rubber and was pretty conservative himself with his hits. He gave but three bingles, two in the second and one in the third.

The Italians made good use of the pair of safeties that they got in the second, scoring three times. Yerrington opened the inning with a grounder to second that Breen mussed up and moved on a base while T. Kegler was walking. Woodward moved the pair around still another base with his scratch single to third but was caught napping off first. F. Kegler was tagged between the shoulder blades and the bases were filled. While the Smoker infield was talking over the situation Yerrington scooted home with the first run of the game. After [illegible] got three quarters way to the plate [illegible] Couillard made an attempt to [illegible] him but his throw was a little off. [illegible] Tombari then cleared the bases with a clean hit over third. Lucier [illegible] out to Couillard unassisted and Tombari was cut down when he tried to make third on the play.

The only other times that either team threatened were the third and fourth innings. The Italians got a runner to third in the third and the Smokers were most dangerous in the fourth. The score:

Cits and Ideals Clash Tonight

The league leading Polish Citizens go to work at the campus tonight, meeting Tony Bernard's Ideals. Although out of the title chase themselves the Ideals are known for being able to make things miserable for others.

It was the Service station outfit, it will be remembered, that started the Thermos tumbling down the ladder three weeks ago. Bernard and his men are confident that tonight they will give the Cits a dose of bad medicine, yes, worse than the one they handed out early in the season.

The Citizens have lost but three games to date and one of the defeats was at the hands of the Ideals. The leaders really think more of the game tonight than they do of the one with the Thermos which winds up the season in two weeks. Should the Ideals take the rubber game from the Jarvis-Greene clan the Cits and Thermos will once again be tied for the league lead.

BENEFIT GAME FOR ECCLESTON ON SATURDAY

On Saturday afternoon at the Riverview diamond there will be a benefit game for Enos Eccleston, who a few weeks ago broke his leg in a game at the state hospital. The game will be between the Riverview club and a picked team from the City league, Eccleston being the regular catcher for the Thermos club until his injury.

As an added attraction the Rotary boys' band will give a concert before the game and between the innings. This musical organization has been making marked progress in band music under the direction of John M. [illegible], honorary member of the club.

Red Stars Tackle Twilight Champs.

The Plainfield Red Stars have two games this week they play the Fisk Rubber Co., of Jewett City, Saturday, and the New London Colored Giants Sunday.

Having trimmed the Danielson twilight champs last week, the Red Stars expect to continue the good work by beating the champs of Jewett City Saturday at Slaters field, Jewett City. On Sunday the Red Stars travel to New London to tackle the Colored Giants. "Peck" Allard will most likely start Saturday and Marriot or Pechie Sunday.

GREENWICH, Aug. 14—(AP)—Tennis the year around is the plan of Mrs. William G. Rockefeller, who has awarded a contract for a $100,000 glass enclosed building on her estate here.

The building, 124 by 62 feet, will be a one-story affair, finished in stucco, with two wings. There will be lockers for men and women, showers, kitchen and a lounge.

And there will be night tennis, too. The clay courts will be especially illuminated for this.

WHITEHILL HANGS UP HIS 10TH CONSECUTIVE WIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 14—(AP)—Earl Whitehill of Detroit established a new season's winning record for major league pitchers today as he made it ten straight by hurling the Tigers to a 5 to 1 victory over the Yankees.

Whitehill let the Yanks down with seven hits and struck out eleven batsmen. Sam Byrd's home run in the fourth inning saved New York from a shutout. The Tigers also were held to seven hits, but they bunched six of them in the fifth and sixth innings for all their runs. Elias Funk decided the contest in the fifth by hitting a triple with the bases full. A Yankee error and a wild pitch were joined with three hits to score two sixth inning runs.

FERRELL HOLDS ATHLETICS AS INDIANS GET 15 RUNS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 14—(AP)—Wes Ferrell, star pitcher of the Cleveland Indians, turned in his twentieth victory of the season against the Athletics today, the Redskins winning by a score of 15 to 0. The triumph was also Cleveland's first of the year in 11 games played in Philadelphia.

The Indians pounded Jack Quinn, Mahaffey and C. Perkins for a total of 20 hits, reaching the peak of their attack in the fifth inning when they scored six runs. Eddie Morgan hit a home run and a single in this inning, accounting for three tallies.

SENATORS SWEEP SERIES BEATING WHITE SOX, 5 TO 4

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—(AP)—The Nationals made a clean sweep of the three game series with Chicago by winning today, 5 to 4.

As Philadelphia lost, Washington gained a game on the leaders in the American league race.

Three National pitchers opposed Caraway of the White Sox. Fischer started and lasted four and a third innings. Liska then took up the burden only to be yanked in favor of Crowder when the Sox showed signs of a rally in the ninth.

HERMAN PICKS UP POINT IN BIG SIX RACE

In a day of light action, Babe Herman furnished most of the interest in the big six batting list yesterday, as he continued his chase after first place. With Terry and Klein both kept idle by the weather, Herman gained a point on each of his leading rivals by hitting twice in four times at bat to lift his average to .405. Although he lost ground, Lou Gehrig regained the American league batting lead by a small fraction of a percentage point over Al Simmons, who suffered a greater loss. Simmons went to bat twice without getting a hit and Gehrig made one safe blow in four times up. Babe Ruth's mark remained at .363 as he hit once in three times up.

GAIR OWLS CLINCH FLAG IN MONTVILLE LEAGUE

The Robert Gair Owls clinched the pennant in the Montville Industrial league Thursday evening at the Gair diamond in Uncasville, when they blanked the Textilers by a score of 6 to 0. Although the Textilers outhit the Gairmen and Ski fanned eleven of the Gairmen, they were badly crippled without their star catcher, Kobos, in the lineup.

Bullet Shahan, star pitcher of the Owls, turned in his ninth victory in eleven starts. McGinnis, with two singles, and Hudumas were the leading hitters.

This game completes the playing schedule of the league but the Textilers still have three postponed games to be played off, two with the Owls and one with the Eastern Connecticut Power Co. The score:

TILDEN QUITS COURT WHEN CROWD RAZZES HIM

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 14.—(AP)—Big Bill Tilden took his turbulent personality out of the eastern grass courts singles championship today, when he withdrew from the defense of his title in a match with Clifford Sutter, intercollegiate champion from New Orleans.

The youthful Tulane university star had won the first set 6-1, and was leading 4-love, love-15 in the second set when Big Bill took offense at the heckling of the crowd, which packed the bleachers of the Westchester Country club, and walked off the court.

Tilden, throughout the match, limped and let ordinary easy returns drop for placements to Sutter's credit. After several such plays a portion of the crowd began to laugh at the lanky Philadelphian's style. Two or three times before defaulting he paused and cast his "famous glare" in the direction of the hecklers.

In talking with newspaper writers after the match Tilden refused to blame his showing on a bad leg, although he fell yesterday and was under a masseur's care two hours before taking the court today. Later, however, he admitted to Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion, that his right leg bothered him.

After a short rest Tilden took the court with his doubles partner, Francis T. Hunter of New Rochelle but the veteran combination lost to Keith Gledhill, Santa Barbara, Cal., and Ellsworth Vines, Jr., Pasadena, Cal., national junior doubles champion. The score was 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 and placed the youthful west court pair in the semi-finals.

MALONE PITCHERS CUBS TO FULL GAME OVER BROOKLYN BY WINNING 5 TO 1

CHICAGO, Aug. 14—(AP) — The brawny right arm of Percy Lay Malone throttled the Brooklyn Robins to a mere chirp today and derricked the Cubs back into a full game lead in the bitter fight for the National league pennant.

Backed by faultless support and bunched hits early in the struggle that carried him over the top, the big fireman from Altoona, Pa., gave Uncle Wilbert Robinson's warriors just eight scattered blows and conquered them, 5 to 1, in the third game of the first place series. Thirty-eight thousand spectators gave him a big ovation as he waded through the Flatbush ranks with his famous smoke-ball that never worked more effectively. He struck out six, walked but three and permitted only one man to reach third up until the final inning.

But for a careless let-up in the ninth inning, Malone would have daubed the whitewash on the Robins. Rube Bressler opened the inning with a weak single and when the next two batters flied out, Bressler was permitted to jog around to third base without a play. Then Johnny Frederick came through with a single over second that scored Bressler and wiped out what looked like an almost certain shut-out.

The Cubs scored all their runs in the first three innings, during which they sent Watson Clark, Brooklyn's prize left hander, to the showers. After one was out in the first inning, English opened the way with a walk. Cuyler responded with a short fly to right that fell for a double and sent English to third. Hack Wilson then looped a hard single to left and both runners scored. The rally stopped then, however, as Danny Taylor, who subbed today for Riggs Stephenson, struck out.

Gabby Hartnett started the rush that netted another run in the second. With none out, he splashed a single off Gilbert's glove. Farrell and Malone were easy outs but Blair socked another single to left. Here a break came for the Cubs. Blair over-ran the first base bag and was trapped. While he evaded the trap, Hartnett rushed home. English added the final polish on Clark with a double and Clise Dudley relieved him and ended the rally in great style. He started by hitting Cuyler with a pitched ball and filling the bases but forced Wilson to send an easy tap to Moore for a force out.

The Cubs added their final two runs in the third through no special fault of Dudley's. Taylor beat out an infield hit to start the inning and Hartnett blazed a long single to center, which escaped Frederick. In his hurry to retrieve the ball, Frederick threw wild and Hartnett scampered home. Taylor went to third and came home a minute later when Wright and Bissonette were getting Farrell out at first.

From that period, Dudley held the Cubs well in check, although they filled the bases with two out in the eighth.

All five of Brooklyn's hits up to the ninth inning were belted out by Wally Gilbert and Babe Herman. Gilbert rapped out two singles and a double and the Babe collected a double and a single. Neither got past second base, however.

The Robins made their first and final serious gesture, except for the ninth, in the eighth inning, when they loaded the bases with two men out. Gilbert and Herman singled after Frederick had rolled out. Bissonette delayed the suspense by flying to Taylor in short left and both runners held their bags. Boone then batted for Wright and strolled. Hendrick batted for Lopez, who like Wright had been held hitless, and ended the threat by hoisting a long one to Taylor.

Today's triumph not only pushed the Cubs to a full game lead in the pennant scramble but placed them in an excellent position for tomorrow's game. Manager Joe McCarthy indicated he would send Charles Root or Young Bud Teachout to the mound while Manager Robinson expected to send in Adolfo Luque, the tricky Cuban who has beaten the Cubs twice this season.

So far for the three games, the attendance totaled approximately 118,000 spectators. More than 40,000 were expected for tomorrow's finals, which would establish a new attendance mark for a four-game series in the National loop.

BRAVES DIVIDE DOUBLE BILL WITH CARDINALS

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 14— (AP) —The Boston Braves and the St. Louis Cardinals split a double header here today, the Cards taking the first game with a ninth inning rally, four to three, and the Braves winning the nightcap, 3 to 2, behind the effective pitching of old Tom Zachary.

In winning the first game, St. Louis extended its latest winning streak to six straight. A two-run rally made possible by Jimmy Wilson's single in the ninth gave the Cardinals the game after they had trailed since the second inning, when Mancuso's home run with one on counted the tallies.

Zachary held the Red Birds to ten scattered hits, but his mates made their eight blows in the second game count for more runs.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut.

The Greist Manufacturing Company New Haven

The business of this company was founded in 1871 by the late John Milton Greist. It was moved to New Haven in 1892 and incorporated under the present company name under the laws of Connecticut.

Sewing machine attachments were its original and sole product and have continued over the years to be the principal item of manufacture. Because of the very high degree of precision reuired in a product of this character it was but logical that, as the years went on, the company should expand its business to include, as it now does, a number of lines of mechanical specialties. With its specialized facilities the organization has developed to a perfected stage a number of other products which, at the present time, include mechanical indexes, drop wires for automatic stop motions for looms, a complete line of clamping and portable electric lamps and parts and assemblies for special tag and ticket marking machines.

During the World war its facilities were used almost exclusively in the production of small munitions for the government, including cartridge clips, machine gun magazines, rifle cleaning tools and detonator sub-assemblies. During that period it gave employment to 1000 persons, its number of employes normally running from 300 to 500.

The present officers are: Mrs. Mary F. W. Greist, president and general manager; W. C. Greist, vice president and treasurer; James E. Wheeler, secretary.

WESTERLY

LOCAL PEOPLE DEMANDING ACTION ON BRIDGE QUESTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 14.— So questionable has become the condition of the Pawcatuck river bridge over the river separating the town of Westerly and Stonington at Broad and West Broad streets on the Boston Post road, known as federal route No. 1, that motorists have stopped to ask police officers if it was safe for them to cross. The policy of the selectmen of the town of Stonington is not divulging officially the nature of the report by Connecticut authorities called in consultation by them has increased rather than diminished fears held for its safety. Some two weeks ago, Charles L. [illegible], Connecticut highway department engineer, attached to the New Haven office of the Connecticut state highway department, came to Westerly and in company with Engineer E. Adolph L. Leon, engineer for the Westerly highway commission, made a careful and thorough examination of the condition of the river bridge and the materials of which it was constructed, and it is understood that this report is now before the Stonington selectman for action.

A certain Westerly town official was asked if damage should result from a giving way of the structure who would be responsible and who would pay the bill. The reply was received that he was not a lawyer and such information would have to come from such a source. There seems to be a general opinion at the present time and under present conditions that the highway authorities of the town of Stonington and Westerly would be the responsible party—selectmen of the town of Stonington and the Westerly highway commission.

A year ago, the Westerly highway commission, in making up its budget for the year past, had an engineer from the Rhode Island state board of public roads come to Westerly upon the invitation and in co-operation with Engineer A. L. Leon of the Westerly road commission and as a result some recommendations were made by R. I. Bridge Engineer Daniel Cargill of Providence, with the result that Engineer Leon placed the cost at $200,000.

As the result of Wednesday evening's secret session of the Stonington selectmen at Stonington town hall, when newspapermen were barred and to which had been invited representatives of the Westerly town council, Westerly highway commission and Harry R. Milner, chairman of the municipal improvement committee of the Westerly chamber of commerce, it would not surprise many if the authorities should post warning notices on each end of the river bridge, stating that the bridge was in a dangerous condition and loads over 10 or 15 tons were barred. Should this prove to be a result than many of the through passenger bus coaches would be forced to seek a new route to avoid the bridge and motor van trucks with heavy loads would also have to be re-routed.

Some efforts by interested parties have been made to secure a copy of the text of the Connecticut engineer's report from Connecticut Highway Commissioner McDonald and also from Executive Deputy Clinton G. Nichols, the latter taking the stand that it was asked for by the Stonington selectmen and that the information should come from them. There are other Connecticut state officials who are of the opinion that a state report is a public document and that the people who ultimately pay the bill for its cost and remedy are entitled to know the contents and more especially if it is of the nature to involve public safety.

The present Pawcatuck river bridge was built jointly in 1885 by the Berlin Bridge Construction Co., of Berlin, Conn., at which time a commission was named from the towns of Stonington and Westerly. There are residents of the town who go so far as to urge, in view of the admission of Highway Engineer A. L. Leon at the last meeting of the Westerly chamber of commerce, "the bridge is in a pretty dangerous condition," that a public mass meeting be held and if action is not forthcoming the matter be carried over local authorities to the state department heads and even to the governors of both states as a last resort. They declare that if a notice was posted that the bridge was closed to traffic on account of its dangerous condition, the U. S. federal authorities would quickly step in and demand immediate action. And in the latter event they would expect to have a proportionate part of the huge expense borne by the national, state and local parties interested.

Unfavorable criticism is also made of the stand of Rhode Island state board of public road authorities of which George H. Henderson, of East Providence, is chief engineer, and Abram L. Atwood, of Providence, the chairman, with B. Frank Robinson, of South Kingstown, the secretary. Comparison is drawn to the action of the state board in having a state bridge built at Alton at a cost of $108,000 to the state and over which bridge one auto passes to every 800 which go over the Pawcatuck river bridge. The necessity of there being a state highway leading to the bridge (on each side of the Pawcatuck bridge at the present time are town highways, making a short gap to the extension of state highway approaches on both sides of the river) is question when the million dollar bond issue of Rhode Island was voted for the building of Washington bridge between the city of Providence and the town of East Providence, and where there are at the present time no state-owned highway approaches.

Federal engineers have declared themselves to be uninterested as neither Rhode Island or Connecticut highways extend to the Pawcatuck river bridge, and that it is understood that the state departments are now contemplating a major improvement of trunk line highways at a more northerly point. Their stand in the matter further is that their interest begins when the state either takes action or unduly delay taking action or should the states show disinterestedness.

Pawcatuck lodge, No. 90, A. F. and A. M., of Pawcatuck, Raymond Pendleton, master, held stated communication in Masonic hall on Thursday night when the Master Mason degree was conferred by the lodge officers. Light refreshments were served at the close.

Shortly before 10 a. m. Thursday, residents of the business center of Westerly sighted the navy dirigible Los Angeles which crossed over the town in a generally westerly direction about half way between the business center and Watch Hill. The navy craft was proceeding slowly at a low elevation and when on the western skyline was observed to have changed its course to a more northerly one as if it were going to pass over the submarine base at New London. For the past few days the residents and visitors to the Westerly beaches have had an opportunity to see the craft passing to and fro but this was the first time that it approached anywhere near the town's business center.

The Night Moths

Out of the night to my leafy porch they came,
A thousand moths. Did He who made the toad
Give them their wings upon the starry road?
Restless and wild, they circle round the flame,
Frail wonder-shapes that man can never tame—
Whirl like the blown flakes of December snows,
Tinted with amber, violet and rose,
Marked with hieroglyphs that have no name,
Out of the summer darkness pours the flight;
Unknown the wild processional they keep.
What lures them to this rush of mad delight?
Why are they called from nothingness and sleep?
Why this rich beauty wandering the night?
Do they go lost and aimless to the deep?

—Edwin Markham.

What motorists tell US about the New Socony—BANNER GASOLINE

Quick starting. "I've tried other popular-price gasolines, but none respond so quickly to the starter as your new Banner."

Instant pick-up. "You claim that Banner gives instant pick-up. I'll say you're right. No other gasoline in its price class that I've tried can touch it."

More power. "You feel the extra power in Banner at once. There's an enormous power difference in favor of Banner over other popular-price gasolines."

More miles per gallon. "I'm going to get the most for my money out of the gallons I buy, and I'm getting that with Banner. It's got every other gasoline in its price class beat on mileage."

No knocking. "My car knocked on non-premium gasolines until I tried Banner."

No sticky valves. If there had been, we certainly should have heard about it—and there's not a single letter. Not surprising since we know Banner is completely gum-free.

We know that all these things that people tell us are facts, for we have proved them by actual road tests made in New London, Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport and Waterbury, June 30th, July 1st, 2d, 3d and 28th.

Now

there's a Banner around the best popular-price pumps in Norwich

It wasn't enough for the Standard Oil Company of New York to offer motorists the best premium gasoline—Socony Special plus Ethyl.

Motorists wanted the best popular-price gasoline, too—and now they have it—in the New Socony—Banner Gasoline.

On sale only three weeks. Already motorists are telling US of its quicker starting and pick-up, extra power, greater mileage, absence of knocking and entire freedom from gum.

We didn't ask people to believe these things on our say-so, but to try out the gasoline for themselves. They have—thousands of them—and they are keeping on using it. Every single day more motorists drive up to the Banner pumps—the busiest pumps in town.

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

A NOVELIST SETTLES THE FARM PROBLEM

(Written Specially For The Bulletin)

It seems to be accepted, now-a-days, that the less one knows about a thing the better fitted he is to lecture on it. You see, facts are often refractory and rough-cornered chunks that won't fit pre-conceived theories. They aren't like bricks, - - - of a size and shape, as easy to lay as childrens' toy blocks.

Real facts are apt to stick out right where they're most in the way, and to develop an irritating instability just when you want 'em to lie flat and hug close.

Once you get used to it, you can lay a pretty neat wall with baked bricks or cast concrete blocks. You can build it about as you want it, and make it look about as you choose. But when you have to work with unhewn field stones, in the shapeless jaggedness with which they are blasted from the quarry, your wall will have to be about what the materials will permit you to make. Not always nor often what you'd like.

So with the thousand public and private, domestic and social problems we have to face. The less one knows about their real inwardness, the surer he is to have an opinion about them, and the more likely to try foisting or forcing that opinion upon others.

There isn't a grocer in town who hasn't customers who consider themselves qualified to tell him better ways of conducting his business.

It is a common saying in newspaper offices that most of the readers think they could edit the paper better than the editor.

It is doubtful if there is a church in the land whose pews don't hold some who feel that their religion requires them to criticise the preacher.

The less we know what President Hoover or Governor Trumbull or Senator Bingham are up against, the firmer our assurance that they'd ought to take our advice.

Therefore, it isn't at all surprising that people who wouldn't recognize "the farm problem" if they should meet it in the middle of the road at high noon on a sunshiny day are usually the most vocal and vociferous in their remarks about it, and most fertile in the formulation of panaceas to cure it.

In perhaps a majority of cases, especially of late years, the farm problem solvers have been recruited from the ranks of men who have attained success or gained wealth in other occupations. They pride themselves on their "business" ability and are inclined to believe and to say that farming would succeed if managed along "business" lines.

We dirt-grubbers have become accustomed and a little calloused to such well-meant advice. Most of us listen to it with assumed respect and, as the slang phrase runs, let it go in one ear and out 'tother. We've most of us seen what happens when such kind-hearted but not too judicious mentors set out to show us how their ideas would work in practice. They usually march up the hill with colors flying and bands playing, only to straggle down some subsequent dark night, with very little to say and less to bring.

Wherefore we don't pay much more attention to them.

Then there are the politicians who want us to like them enough to let them get their hands into our pockets. Of course, they're full of sympathy and advice. We're beginning to "get on to their curves," too.

There are, also, the manufacturers of farm machinery and the compounders of fertilizers, who maintain huge publicity bureaus to show farmers how the purchase of their engines and the unlimited use of their soil-enrichers will turn farming from a labor into a sport and produce profits out of the jaws of bankruptcy.

It is pretty generally understood, now, that the advice of these volunteer physicians is less altruistic than they'd have us believe.

The latest non-farming trade to be heard from is that of the novelists. Sinclair Lewis, who has attained considerable notoriety as the writer of various imaginative fictions about certain almost imposible abnormalities, twists, freakishnesses which he pretends to be "typical" of American life, is the last to ask "What's wrong with farmers?" and to come out with a solution.

Come to think of it, it is a bit queer that the fiction-writers haven't tackled the farm problem long ere this. They have the simply tremendous advantage of not being at all hampered by facts. If the facts of a case don't fit in with the story they want to tell about it, why, they just make up a set of pseudo-facts which will fit. And there you are. Nothing could be easier and simpler.

Mr. Lewis applies this trouble-saving and short-cutting plan to farming. Briefly condensed, his idea is for 300 farmers, each owning a 200-acre farm, to bunch them all into one 60,000-acre farm, making a ranch nine miles by ten. In the center of this ranch shall be the village where all the 300 farmers, their families and their hired men shall live.—about 1,3500 in all.

Just outside the village will cluster the henneries, the stables, the community garage and carpenter-shop, etc.; next outside the arable fields, meadows, pastures, orchards; farthest away the woodlands, which are to be as carefully cut and replanted as other parts.

The farmers and their hired men are to be taken out to the farm-work each morning in a community bus; they are to have a hot dinner brought them every noon from the community kitchen in army chow-wagons; they are to be brought home at night "to all the companionship and life and convenience of the town"

This town is to be of comfortable cottages, all supplied with hot and cold running water, electric lights, community kitchens, community laundries, community stores, community movies, a community school, a community doctor and a community creamery. - - - Mr. Sinclair, whose religious principles are understood to be quite his own, fails to specify a community church wherein, we suppose, Catholics and Methodists, Christian Scientists and Rationalists, Spiritualists and Seventh-day Baptists will all worship together in complete unanimity and universal self-satisfaction. Why not?

Mr. Sinclair* admits that there is nothing original in his plan. In view of the number of Utopias and New Atlantises and Happy Valleys and Brooks Farms which have been dreamed and written about he could hardly claim originality. On the other hand, he does flatly assert that "there is nothing fanciful and impractical" about it.

H'm'm.

He dates his suggestion from "a Vermont farm." Casting his eyes over that largely agricultural state, one can't help wondering how many plats of nine by ten miles, containing 60,000 acres, he would find topographically adapted to the scheme of a central village with stables, etc. just outside, meadows and grain fields next in order, and forests belting the circumference. Practical farmers have supposed that meadows were best prepared on lands devoid of craggy ledges or mountain-tops. And that rocky-ridges were more suitable for trees than for potatoes or hay. I have travelled more or less in New England and I frankly confess that at this moment I can't think of an area in all the six states, which would lend itself to any such possible arrangement.

Not only does the configuration of the surface make the suggestion extremely impracticable, but the character of the soil also vetoes it. The working farmer, as he learns his farm, discovers very quickly that differing soils are adapted to differing crops. There are areas where potatoes will grow like weeds; there are others where they don't want to grow and can't profitably me made to.

The wise farmer studies his farm to find out what it wants to grow or can reasonably be induced to grow. Then he takes all the advantage he can of its natural proclivities. He doesn't devote land which would produce good to timber and cord-wood, nor try to grow corn on barren ridges and rocky ledges. He doesn't try to raise onions on land so naturally poor that it won't grow really good moss.

If all dirt was like all other dirt, and all farm land was level or gently rolling, and the farmer could raise any crop he chose on any plat he selected, that would be one thing. But farming on the tumblefications which make up the surface of New England and on the heterogeneous hodgepodges which compose its almost infinite variety of soils is a very different thing.

Nor does Mr. Sinclair take into consideration human nature. Where will he find, either in New England or anywhere else this side of the New Jerusalem, three hundred farmers any six of whom will agree as to the proper way to farm a 60,000 acre ranch? Or three hundred farmers' wives who will agree as to exactly how the community kitchen shall be managed, or who shall be the community doctor?

He is emphatically insistent upon two assertions. First, that farming is just a form of manufacturing and that, in one as in the other, the bigger the combine the more economical the production; second, that combined farming will pay better than individual.

In other words, he assumes that the one and only object of farming is to "make it pay."

Of course that is one object of farming, as it is of every other vocation.

But home-making is another object. And character-building is still another. Some of us still think they are the more important.

Indeed, it is doubtful if the most careful raking would collect many communities of real farmers who would be willing to exchange a home, even if its sole water-supply was from a pump, for a barracks with running water and meals rationed out from a "chow-wagon."

FIVE OFFICIALS NEEDED FOR TOWN'S 4 VOTERS

HELENA, Ark.—(AP)—Phillips county has a town with more election officials than voters.

L'Anguille township has only four qualified voters and the law requires that three judges and two clerks preside at the election. The same law further requires that the judges and clerks be qualified voters of the township which they serve.

With the democratic primary just in the offing officials are informed that L'Anguille voters desire to cast their ballots. But how it can be done is still a matter unsettled.

SPOTLIGHT DEER HUNTERS UNDER BAN IN MICHIGAN

LANSING, Mich. — (AP) — Mobile squads have been organized by the Michigan state game department to combat deer shiners

The deer shiner, conservation officials say, uses the spotlight on his car to find and attract the deer before killing the animal with a load of buck shot.

It is believed that many deer have been shot by the shiners.

Cows Need Water For Milk.

EAST LANSING, Mich. —(AP)— A dairy cow drinks 3.4 pounds of water for every pound of milk she produces, Michigan state college experimenters here discovered. The water supply for milk cows is as important as rations or food supplies, they said.

Lovesickness?

Lovesickness isn't insanity, Miss Tyyne Neimi, above, reasons. That's why she has sued Leslie Buswell, wealthy amateur theatrical producer of Gloucester, Mass., her former employer, for $50,000. She charges he had her committed to an insane asylum because she refused to spurn the attentions of a famous musician guest of Buswell's. After 30 days physicians declared that she was "merely lovesick," according to the girl's story.

MANY LEADING SHARES UNCHANGED IN IRREGULAR SESSION OF MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—(AP) — The speculative pulse fluttered feebly on the stock market today, but it remained in the hands of the bears.

It was the short interest that provided most of the activity, covering and selling alternately throughout an inconclusive session, which saw a turnover of only 1,525,000 shares. The close was irregular. Many of the leading shares were virtually unchanged.

Events in the business world contributed meagerly to the course of the market. A cut in copper metal prices to 10 3-4 cents by some of the custom smelters inspired a flurry of selling soon after the irregularly higher opening, but it was felt chiefly in the steel and copper shares and the market soon turned upward. Prices continued to advance until leaders were one to seven points net higher, whereupon the shorts, having completed their profit taking for the time being, resumed selling and the market lost its advances.

Shares of three companies were particularly weak. Canadian Pacific, which has been steadily sold during the past week, tumbled 10 3-4 points to 165 3-4, another new low. The liquidation reflects the poor showing made by the road's earnings and the prospect that the directors will have to dip into surplus for the dividend, or reduce it.

Republic Steel was freely offered, for Wall street is skeptical about the $4 annual return to the stockholders in view of the large expenditures incident to the organization of the company several months ago, and the current low rate of operations.

The third weak spot was International Paper, all of whose shares touched their lowest figures of the year, in expectation of the unfavorable earnings statement.

Otherwise, the market seemed governed by the passing speculative expediency. U. S. Steel, which closed at 159 on Wednesday, sold as high as 160 5-8 and as low as 157 3-4, closing only 1-8 net lower. General Motors, Radio, General Electric and American Can either finished unchanged or a shade either side of yesterday's final.

The cut in copper, although not followed by the producers, carried the price to the lowest in years and again called attention to the generally unsatisfactory condition of the industry. The news was accompanied by breaks of one to two points in the copper shares, Kennecott and American Metal touching new minimums.

Brokers' loans dropped $59,000,000 in the trading week ended Tuesday to $3,155,000,000, the lowest since July, 1927.

Merchandising and rail shares firmed considerably, Sears Roebuck, Union Pacific, New Haven, Rock Island, Atchison, and Safeway Stores gaining a point. There was isolated heaviness in some of the utilities and specialties. American Telephone lost more than a point, while Woolworth, Hudson Motors, National Power and Light sagged to about the same extent.

The French franc lost a little more ground, adding further relief to the gold situation. Last night's exports of the metal were understood to have been made without profit and were regarded as a special transaction.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Curb prices were inclined to heaviness today, although price variations were largely narrow, and trends often divergent.

Bullish activity was resumed on a large scale in Ford, Ltd., which rose a point to 23 1-4, within a fraction of its peak, but it closed at 22 1-2. Electric Bond and Share was another active feature. CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Re-assurances that banks will finance the 1930 movement of Canadian wheat and that provincial government guarantees are probable, did much to lift wheat prices today. Persistent reports of unseasonable weather in Europe hampering the wheat harvest there counted also as a stimulus to upturns in wheat values. Besides, export business today in North American wheat was of more liberal volume than of late, 1,000,000 bushels mainly wheat from the United States with Liverpool quotations 18c above Chicago, the widest difference so far this season.

Chicago's closing prices on wheat were firm, 7-8a1 1-4c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed unchanged to 3-4c lower, oats 1-4a3-4c up, and provisions unchanged to 5c down.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—(AP) — Quickened interest in domestic investment issues tended to lift the bond market out of its mid-summer trading rut today. The railroad section was strong and provided the leadership for the advance which carried the list upward to duplicate its recently established new high in the averages.

The demand for railroad obligations spread further among less active issues and allowed them to catch up with leaders which some time ago reached the best price levels of the year. Some profit-taking appeared in the final hour but gains far outstripped losses among the better grade liens in the domestic list.

Canadian National Railways 5s of October 1965, Chicago, Northwestern 5s, Chesapeake and Ohio 4 1-2s "B", Louisville and Nashville 4s, New York Central 4s of 1932, Pennsylvania 4 1-2s and Consolidated 4s, were pushed into new high ground for the year.

Good buying came into the market for some of the telephone and electric company bonds in the utility section. Detroit Edison collateral 5s rose 1 1-4 points to a new high, and North American Edison 5s and Bell Telephone and Pennsylvania 5s reached new peaks for the year.

Interest in second grade bonds still lags, and the miscellaneous industrial group continues to suffer from rather wide fluctuations. However, high grade industrials have crept forward gradually and made a new high in the averages, erasing the previous record established last March. Inland Steel 4 1-2s and Lehigh Valley Coal 5s, reached new highs.

Changes in the foreign list were inconsequential. Standard issues were fairly stable.

U. S. governments moved irregularly. Liberty 3 1-2s and Treasury 3 3-4s, sold off about 1-8th of a point.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

Tomato and sweet corn supplies were very heavy, and prices sharply declined, now reaching extremely low levels. Tomatoes were showing the effects to a greater extent than corn, but corn was very weak and hard of disposal.

This is the time for housewives to can their tomatoes as prices are at a low point. Most of the early stock has dried up in the fields and midseason varieties of better texture are now coming marketward.

Green and wax beans were in light offerings and lima and shell beans moderate. Native celery of good quality is increasing on the market. Cucumbers and peppers were liberal and slow.

Native apples were in moderate supply with graded stock bringing good prices. Native peaches appear in a small way as yet but will probably be more plentiful before the week closes. Clapp's Favorite pears are the newest arrivals in fruits.

The egg market continues firm and demand active and live poultry remained weak at unchanged prices.

Visit From Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Job

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert K. Job, of Richmond, Va., spent a few days last week as guests of their son G. Curtiss Job and family. Mr. Job was on a vacation of ten days from his combined work for the game commission and the state board of education of Virginia. This is a post which he took this year, after having been for six years state director of nature and conservation education in South Carolina. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert K. Job spent Old Home day Saturday in Union last year, and he was one of the interesting speakers on the afternoon program. It was a disappointment that an important engagement called him back to Richmond this year before Union Old Home day.

WESTMINSTER

RUMOR DISTINGUISHED VISITORS WERE IN TOWN

A ripple of excitement spread over this locality one day recently when a local wag passed the word along that Al Smith and Al Smith Jr. were visitors at the home of Jupstice Colt, at Weedwell farm. Every one hereabouts knows that the Colt family moved from New York to Canterbury and at once surmised that the visitors who arrived in a snappy high powered car was the Al Smith of brown derby and Side Walks of New York fame. The innocent cause of local interest proved to be Al Smith and Al Smith Jr., but their home address is Ridgewood, N. J. With them was Wm. Nagle. All are former neighbors of the Colt family and are spending the summer at Crescent beach, near here.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Albin and daughter Mabel of Westport and Mrs. A. J. Nash of Darien were visitors at Elm Orchard farm for several days this week.

Berry Pickers Offend

The largest crop of huckleberries, blackberries and blueberries in years has drawn many berrypickers to this locality, causing much inconvenience to farm owners, fences torn down and gates left open, to say nothing of petty thefts of peaches and apples have amazed property owners to the extent that berry pickers will find plenty of no trespass signs along the state road next year.

To the growing scarcity of foxes is attributed the increase of wild rabbits seen this year up this way.

Frank Koch entertained a large party of relatives who motored up from New Rochelle, N. Y., to spend the week end at the Koch summer home.

WESTMINSTER

Salve Olsen had a narrow escape Monday when his Dodge touring car crashed through the railing of the bridge over Little River, near his home and landed on its side 20 feet below in the water. Mr. Olsen said something went wrong with the mechanism of the car while crossing the bridge causing it to get out of control. As the car left the bridge in its plunge to the river bed Mr. Olsen jumped clear and landed safely with the result of only minor scratches.

Merchants in the orient, short of wrapping paper last year, purchased thousands of tons of old editions of New York, Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia newspapers. POETRY

Evening

Pearl-tinted shells lay one by one
Along the shore of crimson sun;
While flying clouds, like ribbons gray,
Veil the sky, at close of day.
Birds twitter softly in the trees
Rocked by a straying, vagrant breeze;
Across the east a trailing plume
Of train smoke mingles with the gloom,
As slender, rosy fingers reach
To touch the shells along the beach.
Then twilight comes, with silent tread,
And gently tucks the sun in bed!
Over a sea of velvet blue
A crescent moon, like a wee canoe,
Drifts slowly, while stars softly light
The way, as Day keeps tryst with Night.
—Virginia Eaton.

That Harp You Play So Well

O David, if I had
Your power, I should be glad—
In harping, with the sling,
In patient reasoning!

Blake, Homer, Job and you,
Have made old wine-skins new.
Your energies have wrought
Stout continents of thought.

But, David, if the heart
Be brass, what boots the art
Of exercising wrong,
Of harping to a song?

The sceptre and the ring
And every royal thing
Will fail. Grief's lustiness
Must cure the harp's distress.
—Marianne Moore.

"Well, you see," explained the farmer, "some cows is born without horns an' never have any, and others shed theirs, and some we dehorn and some breeds ain't supposed to have horns at all. There's lots of reasons why some cows ain't got no horns, but the big reason why that cow ain't got no horns is because she ain't a cow—she's a horse."—Exchange.

Since the report that tar-chewing builds strong teeth was accepted by the children, repeated raids have been made on the city streets. "I know it's a funny thing to ask," said a Kansas City young man who is getting married in the near future, "but would you mind letting me have back that wedding invitation we sent you and your wife?" "Not at all," the friend answered. "We'll send your wedding present right back to the store." "Don't kid me," the harried bridegroom-to-be said. "The facts of the matter are that we forgot to invite some distant relatives of the girls and ran out of invitations, so I'm picking up some from my best friends."

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

"SWAT THE FLY" AND TAKE OTHER PRECAUTIONS

The house-fly—which has been appropriately called the typhoid fly—is unusually abundant and persistent this summer, says the bureau of entomology, U. S. department of agriculture.

See that garbage is kept in tightly covered pails and that the pails are emptied and washed thoroughly—daily is possible.

At least every three days remove manure and other fermenting refuse which attract flies and serve as breeding places and clean them systematically. Do not forget the chicken house. The refuse may be scattered thin in the garden or fields, or it may be stored in pits which are fly-tight and have a fly-trap to catch flies which breed and try to escape. A light application of ordinary borax to refuse will destroy the fly maggots.

Thoroughly screen the house and keep the screens in good repair.

Use a fly swatter or sticky fly paper to destroy flies in the house.

Set one or more flytraps in the yard or around outbuildings and keep them well baited. This is especially important on farms.

If flies are numerous, employ an effective fly spray in the barns and the house.

Protect all food from flies, and be careful in washing fruit and other foods which are eaten raw.

These fly invaders can not be combated successfully without some knowledge of their habits and of the most effective methods of fighting them. Farmers' Bulletins Nos 1408-F and 734-F, which can be obtained free upon request to the office of information, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C. give this information.

SCIENTISTS REVIVING VARIED USES OF HONEY

Ancient literature, telling of the adaptations of honey to suit the varying tastes and needs of past centuries, provides clues which scientists are now following to revive old uses and to develop the present possibilities of the product.

The early Romans in their writings often mentioned the honeybee and honey. Among the products they mentioned frequently are water honey, salt-water honey, water mead, rose honey, honey foam, and honey vinegar.

The United States department of agriculture is studying the chemical properties of honey and methods of inducing chemical changes in it that will open the field for new honey products. Specialists are perfecting methods of making honey candy, and some manufacturers already have secret process for making this confection. Many housekeepers now use honey to sweeten beverages, cereals, and cakes, and generally in cooking. It is also used as a sirup on waffles and hot cakes. Eminent physicians proclaim that honey contains the most beneficial of the sugars.

NEW RURAL BUILDINGS

A dual-purpose type of building is appearing in rural communities which fulfills more functions, houses more activities and centralizes the varied economic and social interests of the community more effectively than does the ordinary community building, says the United States department of agriculture. Modern farm organizations recognize that farming is a mode of living rather than merely a business; they plan their community buildings to closely relate the economic and social factors in the conduct of their business.

SOUR SKIMMED MILK

Methods for making concentrated sour skimmed milk developed in the research laboratories of the bureau of dairy industry, United States department of agriculture, have been introduced in about 20 plants which are now making this product. In 1928 and 1929 these plants, located in various parts of the country, used more than 76,000,000 pounds of skimmed milk for this purpose.

THRIFTY SHEEP GROW MOST AND BEST WOOL

The character of a sheep's fleece is largely within the control of flock owners, says the United States department of agriculture. An investigation by the bureau of animal industry indicates that there is a close relationship between the thriftiness of sheep and the quality and quantity of wool produced. Fibers were found to grow fastest and coarsest in summer and fall and slowest and finest in winter, but generally the period of greatest wool growth was also associated wit ha thriyt condition of the animal. Least wool growth, in ewes, occurred during lambing time and the 45 days preceding.

SOYBEANS

The soybean was introduced into the United States as early as 1804, but only in the last 10 years have we really begun to appreciate it. Production is now reaching commercial proportions, according to the United States department of agriculture. The crop has many things in its favor. It produces a large yield of beans and an excellent forage. It is easy to grow and to harvest. The beans have great possibilities in the production of oil, meal, and human food and industrial products. Soybean production will continue to increase as we find better methods and machinery for handling the crop and still more uses for the soybean and its products for industrial purposes.

The ancient Romans used lead extensively in plumbing.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Firestone Rewards Men.

AKRON, O., Aug. 15—In the last two weeks, 22 men have walked out of the Firestone factories in this city at quitting time with varying sums up to $500 each in their pockets because they had thought of ideas to turn out a better product.

Every man in the factory is on the alert to improve the manner in which his particular job is done and the product which he is making. It is a huge research laboratory of 15,000 research engineers. Daily new ideas are turned into the suggestion board, composed of 12 men—representing equally the various Akron plants. These ideas range from a quicker way to pack Firestone tubes to installation of a row tire conveyors.

The suggestion system at Firestone is probably on a more efficient basis than in any other industrial company in the country, it is believed. In this factory a man's limitations are his own thinking. Fifteen thousand workers at the Firestone factories are automatically 15,000 research engineers, each eager to find new ways to improve tires or make the machinery more efficient.

Proof of the effectiveness of such an organization is the fact that Firestone brought out for automobile use, the first rubber non-skid tread, the first commercial demountable rim, the first patented gum-dipping process and the first balloon tire.

The suggestion system is well developed at the company's other tire factories, located in Los Angeles, Hamilton, Ont., London, England, and fabric mills at New Bedford, Fall River and Newburyport, Mass., and the footwear factories at Hudson, Mass.

The local dealer for Firestone is The Goldberg Rubber Tire Co. of Franklin street.

Broadway Theatre.

Inez Courtney, petite dancing comedienne who was seen recently in "Song of the Flame," again has a funny dancing role in "Bright Lights," First National's all-Technicolor melodrama with music, which is at Warner's Broadway theatre.

Miss Courtney came to Vitaphone pictures via the stage. Ability with her feet made her a hit in the plays "Good News," "Polly," and "Spring is Here." Recently she was named on the "All-American Dance Team" for 1929, whose members are selected by the country's outstanding dance directors and the editor of Dance Magazine. She also made the team in 1928.

The actress appears in support of Dorothy Mackaill and Frank Fay in "Bright Lights." The story of a hula dancer, told in vivid scenes and popular music, was filmed under direction of Michael Curtiz.

BOSTON FAMILY OF SIX INJURED—AUTO COLLISION NEAR NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 14.—As a result of an automobile crash in Waterford late this afternoon, the entire family of Michael Cawley, a Boston police officer, comprising himself, wife and four children are patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital tonight. All are suffering from painful injuries, but only one is dangerously hurt. Cawley sustained a serious injury to the left wrist and his wife suffered greatly from shock. Eileen Cawley, 5, suffered a possible fractured skull and numerous bruises and her condition is the most serious. John Cawley received an injury to his left arm and Mary Cawley's wrist was sprained. Richard Cawley has a head injury, but not believed to be of a nature to cause alarm. The Cawley auto was headed toward New London and when near Moosbroker's corner where many accidents have occurred, it is claimed it was being driven on the left hand side of the highway. Just as the approach to the corner was reached the driver did not have time to proceed to the opposite side of the road and at the time a car driven by Miss Dowd, of Brighton, Mass., approached from the opposite direction and traveling at a fast rate of speed. In another instant the crash occurred, the impact being such as to cause Cawley's automobile to overturn. The car was wrecked and Miss Dowd's auto was damaged, but the driver escaped injury. The accident is being investigated by State Police Officer William Elmer MacKenzie.

OCEAN BEACH MERCHANTS STUCK ON COUNTERFEIT BILLS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 14—Counterfeit money circulators are working in the state and the spurious bank note workers have been in New London. It was ascertained this afternoon that two merchants at Ocean Beach had been victimized, the worthless money being negotiated with them. The bills are of the denomination of $20 and are supposed to be of the issue of the federal reserve bank of Boston. Following the merchants victimized at the beach reporting their loss to the police it became known this evening that numerous bills of the same denomination and worthless have been circulated in Hartford and as a result five arrests have been made. It is believed that the gang that operated in Hartford is the same that put the worthless money into circulation here.

Second Visit From Los Angeles

The navy dirigible Los Angeles, which passed over the city yesterday forenoon en route from Newport, R. I., to Lakehurst, N. J., was a visitor here again today. After making the trip to the flying field yesterday, the huge dirigible returned to Newport, where she was moored for the night. This morning the trip back to Lakehurst was started and the Los Angeles passed over the city shortly before 10 o'clock, taking the same course as that of yesterday. Arriving at the mainland, the dirigible proceeded to the submarine base and after circling the naval reservation, started its flight over the Thames and out over the sound.

Trolley Car Leaves Iron

The trolley car due to arrive in New London from Norwich at 5:15 o'clock this afternoon was delayed a quarter of an hour in reaching the State street terminal. At Bullard's corner, Main street, the car was derailed, presumably by gravel getting on the tracks where highway work is in progress. The wrecker from the New London car-house was sent up, but the car was gotten back on the tracks before it arrived.

A. B. Lloyd, employed by the Aken Hardware Co., Bank street, reported at police headquarters this afternoon that during the day a .25 calibre revolver was stolen from the stock of the store. The clerk did not know the number of the revolver.

A man was arrested on North Bank street this afternoon, charged with intoxication and breach of the peace, being arrested by Patrolmen Lawrence Fardy and Edward Riordan. He was locked up and will be in court tomorrow.

George H. Cockell, son of Mrs. Arthur Cockell, of Morgan street, and Miss Dorothea M. Snooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Snooks, Mercer street, were married at St. James' Episcopal church yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock by Rev. Arnold A. Fenton, rector of Seabury Memorial church, Groton. Edward Bailey was best man and Miss Alice Snooks, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Cockell held a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The Shamrock V is in mid-stream and an excellent view of the racer can be obtained from any of the piers. The work of attending to the mast and perfecting repairs will be started this week and will not be concluded, it is expected, for nearly 10 days after which the boat will be taken to Long Island sound for trials.

Stanley Saxton, Flanders and Burton Diamond, 122 Montauk avenue, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Benjamin DeMishik, employed at the restaurant, 91 North Bank street, and Joseph Gallant, proprietor of the locker room, 196 Main street, were in the police court this morning, both charged with violation of the liquor law on one count, actual sale, and upon evidence supplied the police by United States coast guard stool pigeons and who, it is understood, had been customers of both drinking resorts a long time. A second charge against DeMishick and Gallant was not made because no liquor or beer were found in either place when a raiding force went there.

The first raid was made yesterday afternoon when a squad of officers went to the North Bank street restaurant and which is but three doors from police headquarters. Although the stool pigeons claimed to have purchased drinks there on three different occasions, a search of the premises did not result in a semblance of intoxicants being found. No arrest was made, but DeMishick or his employer, Max Markoff, were ordered to present themselves in court and defend the charge. When court convened, DeMishick was there and pleaded guilty. He was fined $200 and costs. It was the first time that DeMishick has been arrested for violation of the liquor law.

Last night, and acting upon further information of the coast guard informers, a raiding squad went to the locker room and a search there did not result in booze or beer being found. However, Gallant was arrested and compelled to furnish a surety on his bond of $1,000. Today, in court, Gallant was fined $200 and costs on a charge of actual sale. Gallant has been arrested before, charged with violation of the liquor law.

John Filipino, Charles Favolosi, Samuel Biscontin, Joseph Palpina, John Grippo and James Romano, Italian youths residing in the vicinity of Bank and Shaw streets, were in a mood to annoy Patrolman Henry Sylvia, for a feeling of enmity exists between the youths and the officer as a result of Sylvia having arrested several of the younger set of Italians, for various forms of violation of the law, including Philopena for violation of the liquor law and as a result of their acts, Philipena was arrested twice and the others once on charges of breach of the peace. In the police court this morning, Philopena was fined $15 and costs and in the cases of the others the court suspended judgment, with a warning to the young men that it would stand them in good stead to behave themselves in the future. The gang was on Bank street about 2:30 o'clock this morning and Philopena was playing a ukelele. When Patrolman Sylvia ordered the youth to refrain from playing the instrument, Sylvia was given a flow of verbal abuse that caused the officer to arrest Philopena. He was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $50 and a short time later the gang was riding about the city in an automobile. Passing through Bank street, Sylvia was observed near the corner of Shaw street and one of the occupants of the auto chided the officer. The youths then went to the gasoline filling station, corner of Bank street and Jefferson avenue where they were loud and boisterous. Sylvia and Patrolman George Bruhns went to the filling station and re-arrested Philopena as well as his comanions. Ever since Patrolman Sylvia has been assigned to duty on lower Bank street, he has encountered trouble with the youthful population of that section.

Benjamin Collins, 16, residing on Benham road, Groton, was charged with theft. His case was continued until the 21st inst. Collins was arrested last night by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh for being implicated in the theft of $130 from the safe of the Y. M. C. A. July 28. Edward Kempner, of Gardner avenue, is jointly charged with theft for he shared in a division of the money, but he is visiting relatives in Pennsylvania and will not be arrested until he returns to New London. Collins has confessed to committing the theft and has said that he did so when Kempner started to do the stealing, but became scared. The money was spent by the youths prior to Collins being arrested.

Mrs. B. L. Depew, 775 Ocean avenue, was charged with driving an automobile without having a license. Her case was continued until next Thursday and she was allowed her freedom upon her own recognizance. The automobile, which Mrs. Depew was driving at Ocean Beach yesterday afternoon hit Mrs. Flata Auerbach, of Hartford, and who is visiting at the shore. The young woman was knocked down and sustained bruises, but only of a slight nature for she was discharged at Lawrence Memorial hospital a short time after she had been taken there by Patrolman Dennis Murphy.

Samuel Shind, 123 Bentley avenue, Hartford, was charged with reckless driving upon complaints of Richard Johnson, 12 Godfrey street, Groton, and Harry Stein, of Chicopee, Mass. His case was continued until tomorrow. Shind was driving on Broad street yesterday and when near Jefferson avenue there was a three-cornered crash. Johnson and Stein placed the responsibility of the accident upon Shind and caused him to be arrested by Motorcycle Officer Thomas Cavanaugh.

Angelo Pedro was charged with intoxication and pleaded not guilty. As Pedro convinced Judge Daniel M. Cronin that he was not under the influence of liquor, Pedro was found not guilty. He was arrested last night by Patrolmen Louis Pine and George Labore on Bank street.

YOUTH ON PROBATION FOR ROBBERY AT ROBERT GAIR RESTAURANT

At an all-day session of the Montville town court Thursday, four cases were heard and disposed of by Justice of the Peace Oscar E. Church. A youth, Joseph Dutrumble, 17, of Uncasville, was charged with breaking and entering, two men were charged with violating the liquor laws, and a third man with breach of the peace. The arrests were the result of a complaint to Police Officer Howard Lamphere that some one had broken into the employes' restaurant at the Robert Gair plant, sometime between Friday night and Monday morning and stolen $51 from the cash register.

After an investigation, Officer Lamphere arrested Dutrumble. He was questioned by Officer Lamphere and State Trooper John Smith and in the course of the grilling, admitted taking the money. He spent all but $23.21 for liquor, etc. When asked where the $23.21 was, he told Officer Lamphere that he hid it in the paper mill department of the Gair plant, underneath a boxed-in hydrant. The officer went to the hydrant and found the money. At the conclusion of the questioning Officers Lamphere and Smith arrested Adam (Scotch Irish) Rotsko, who conducts a store on the Robert Gair road, Uncasville, on a charge of keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell. There, the raiding party found two cases of home brew. At the place of Joseph Valentine, also of Uncasville, they secured two more cases of home brew and arrested the proprietor on a liquor law charge. Later they arrested John Lavigne, of Montville, on a charge of contributing to the deliquency of a minor. Lavigne, who was arraigned first, had his charge changed to breach of the peace on a plea by his counsel, Perry Hollandersky, of New London. He was fined $20 and costs.

Joseph Valentine was found guilty of keeping liquor with intent to sell and was fined $200 and costs.

The case of Joseph Dutrumble was nolled on payment of the costs of court. The youth's father reimbursed the Gair Co. The accused boy was put on six months' probation.

The last case was that of "Scotch-Irish" Rotsko. He was found guilty of keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell and was fined $100 and costs.

FIELD DAY TODAY AT 4-H CLUB CAMP

County Club Agent Randolph H. Whaples has arranged an interesting programme for the final day of the New London county farm bureau camp at Avery Lake, Preston, on Friday when the annual 4-H club field day will be presented. Members of the 4-H club at camp, in addition to about 100 who were unable to attend, will participate in the programme, which is scheduled to start at 10:30 o'clock. Parents and friends of the members have been invited to be present.

The programme calls for barnyard golf, swimming, relay races, three-legged races, spoon and egg race, boating, dashes, sack races, and many other events. It will close with a candlelight service, at which all present will take part. Club Agent Whaples will be assisted in the programme by Agent Walter T. Clark, Miss Ruth T. Russell and Miss Elizabeth Grover and State Club Leader A. J. Brundage, and Assistant Miss Elsie Trabue.

The regular routine will continue at the camp today (Friday) with the morning dip at 6:30 to wake the group up. Those who think it is too chilly to attempt an early swim are very generously treated by the camp council.

Thursday morning, the girls, under the direction of Miss E. E. Grover, had a material identification contest. The winners were: Mildred Rathbun, first; Ruth Hart, second; Lucille Holden, third; Margery Webster, fourth; Ruth Avery, fifth. On the whole the girls did very well for it was no easy task to tell the names of 33 small pieces of cloth.

Club Agent Whaples held a vegetable judging contest for the boys. The vegetables included cucumbers, potatoes, carrots and beets. The boys who placed high were: Gilbert Hagen, first; L. Garrich, second; Edward Leroux, third; C. Helmboldt, fourth; Jason Kingsley, fifth; Raymond Helmboldt, sixth; Richard Smith, seventh; Sidney Frank, eighth. It is quite evident that these young people will show good choice in their picking of the vegetable exhibits for state fair.

The camp committee is making use of the children's desire for sweets for they are selling candy and ice cream at the camp. They have helped the nurse out a little by limiting their expenditures to 15c a day.

The proceeds will be added to the all-playground outing fund. The lighting effects, which are effectively arranged, have been made possible through the co-operation of Charles W. Taggart, general manager of the gast and electric department.

The list of booths and participants follow:

Soda stand—John Golumbeski, Bill Dynon.

Ice cream—Joe Lienkowski, Ed Perusnik.

Pop-corn—Joe Perringer, Donald McGinnis.

Candy wheel—Steve Toth, Stanley Bolara, Paul Maginnis.

The members of the New London county 4-H clubs, who are at camp at Avery's pond, Preston, heard two very interesting talks Thursday evening by Arthur L. Peale and William C. Kendall of Norwich. Mr. Peale's talk was upon the Indians of Eastern Connecticut and Mr. Kendall spoke on his recent trip to California, illustrating his talk with stereopticon slides.

About 100 persons attended the meeting, which also included a programme of stunts presented by the boys and girls of the 4-H clubs.

TELLS WHEN PASSING TO RIGHT IS PERMISSIBLE

In an article read from radio station WTIC, Hartford, Thursday afternoon, Robbins B. Stoeckel, state commissioner of motor vehicles, explained why passing to the right is permissible in city traffic and against the law on open highways. The commissioner in the article said that the exception to the general rule was allowed first in Connecticut in the case of passing street cars. "As traffic increased," he said, "it often became more dangerous to go around street cars to the left than to go straight ahead and to the right of the trolley." It was realized that while a street car is a vehicle, it is not a motor vehicle, and because it travels on rails and is limited to the path taken by the rails, the driver of a following car can always judge exactly where the street car is going to be. From this custom of allowing motor vehicles to pass to the right of trolleys followed the practice of allowing cars to pass to the right of other cars in directed traffic where there is a great deal of movement and many cars.

The commissioner pointed out that the theory of directed traffic is that where there is a policeman or traffic officer, whose direction can be taken all other rules are off. The officer is there to tell you what to do, and if you do not know, you can require him to tell you. Nowadays it is an accepted practice in Connecticut for an officer to send a car in front of himself or in back or anywhere in the road that it will move most conveniently and safely.

The commissioner says that the good city driver divides most of his city roads in his mind into four lanes, two each way. If he is going to turn right, he sticks to the right hand lane, and if he is going to turn left, he gets into the left hand lane. All operators have begun to adopt this principle, and everyone must know about it. As soon as an operator gets into a city, he must plan ahead as to where he is going to turn. If he knows that he is going to turn to the left in a block or two, he must get into the left hand lane a block or two ahead and be ready for the left hand turn without having to cross in front of other cars.

WON'T MOVE TELEPHONE POLE UNTIL WRENS LEAVE

(Special to The Bulletin)

MOOSUP, August 14—What was it we used to hear about "heartless corporations"? Well, whatever it was, folks in this town are willing to take it all back, if they ever did say such a thing.

Telephone pole 1462 in Highland street, this town, is just an ordinary telephone pole to hundred of passers-by, but right now, it is playing an important part in several lives. This pole has been home for a pair of happy house wrens who have nested in it season after season.

The telephone company is replacing poles through Highland street and when pole 1462 was reached recently Ma and Pa Wren had a small family. The telephone men didn't want to evict the wrens, so when John E. Prior, a subscriber, interceded for them that ended the discussion.

Pole 1462 will remain where it is until September 1, or thereabouts, at which time Ma and Pa Wren and their little family will be quite able to fly to new quarters.

He is charged with violation of the prohibition laws. Federal agents raided the Bolton Cider mill, alleged to be conducted by Silverstein, several days ago, and seized 20 barrels of alleged hard cider. Silverstein was arrested.

CONTRIBUTE OVER $125 FOR LOCAL PLAYGROUNDS OUTING

The fund which is being raised for the annual all-playgrounds outing at Ocean Beach, August 27, has been increased by $125.14, made possible through the contributions of local baseball fans at the benefit game between the Royals and Thermos Wednesday evening at the Academy campus. Additional donations of money, however, are needed if the children are to be assured of the outing. There is also an urgent need for at least five additional busses.

One of the features of the outing will be the Rotary Boys band, which has been secured to accompany the children.

DEMOCRATS EXPECT 1,050 DELEGATES AT CONVENTION

Preliminary plans for the Democratic state convention which is to be held in New London Sept. 11 and 12 were discussed Wednesday at a conference of party leaders at the Mohican hotel. National Committeeman Archibald McNeil of Bridgeport was present and played a leading part in the discussion with Alton T. Miner of New London, member of the state central committee from this district and Chairman Joseph C. Keefe of the New London town committee and others present.

To State Central Committeeman Miner and Chairman Keefe have been delegated the task om completing the arrangements for the accommodation and entertainment of the 1,050 delegates that will attend the convention, as well as for the large number of guests.

The convention business sessions will be held at the state armory and convention headquarters will be established at the Mohican hotel.

LEDYARD MEN NARROWLY ESCAPE IN EXPLOSION

The crew of the sea going tug, Russell, No. 7, in command of Captain Gus Cook, Robert Bennett, chief engineer, both of Ledyard, narrowly escaped serious injury when the Tydol gasoline plant at Newtown Creek, Long Island blew up. At the time of the explosion they were towing away an oil ship that was tied up alongside the plant and which had just unloaded a 300,000 gallons' cargo of gasoline. This did not explode as the gas line had been shut off.

When the explosion occurred, glass was sent flying in all directions. The tug itself was covered with glass, making it dangerous to walk on the decks. The concussion caused several windows to break in the pilot house in which Captain Cook was stationed. Glass was hurled through the doorway of the engine room, but luckily Chief Bennett was not injured. Neither was Captain Cook.

Realizing the danger if the oil ship were to catch fire a line was quickly placed on the ship and it was towed to safety by the tug. The only damage was to the rigging which was partially burned.

Captain Cook and Chief R. Bennett deserve credit for their courage and resourcefulness in saving the ship.

More Money to Fight Peach Moth

An additional appropriation of $3,000 to continue the fight for the extermination of the oriental peach moth in this state was requested of the state board of finance and control by Dr. William E. Britton, state entomologist, and Elijah Rogers, a member of the board of control of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station, New Haven, Wednesday. The meeting was the last for the board until the governor returns from his vacation in September.

ENGINEERS PLAN TO HALT LEANING OF PISA'S HISTORIC TOWER

Pisa's top-tipped tower is in tip-top shape.

That statement is the gist of an engineering report which is the result of a year's study of the Leaning Tower of Pisa, world wonder and traveler attraction of one of Italy's mos historic cities.

"Pisa's growing inclination is due to the fact that its foundations are laid in clay and sand," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. "Plans are being made to inject hardening material into this soil, and so fortify the base. For many years pumps have been disposing of water from springs which surround the foundations.

"In ten years the famous tower increased its inclination by a little more than a third of an inch. A hundred years ago the tower leaned 15 feet in 179 feet, and now it has attained a 16-foot slant. But further leaning will be averted by the proposed reinforcements.

"The builders of the Tower did not set out to construct a leaning wonder. There is an oft-told story that a cobuilder planned it to be crooked in ironic commemoration of the fact that he was a hunchback. However, Bonnano and William of Innsbruck started it straight but the foundations failed to reach firm soil, the Tower began to tilt when the second story was put on, and the workers were frightened so that for years to come progress was impeded. The structure was begun back in 1173 when campanile construction was as popular among Italian cities as skyscraper building is among American cities today.

"Mark Twain climbed the 293 steps to the bell tower and the exertion prompted him to write that the Leaning Tower is 'the height of four ordinary three-story buildings and is a very considerable altitude for a tower of uniform thickness to aspire to, even when it stands upright.'

"The perilous point to which Mark Twain crawled may have been the sae spot Galileo sought in order to perform an experiment which caused as much controversy in the scientific world of his day as the Einstein theory does today.

"Galileo droped a huge, heavy ball and a light ball. Both hit the marble pavement below the marble tower at the same instant. Previously it had been taken for granted that Aristotle was right in thinking a heavy object fell faster than a light one. Continuing his experiments Galileo also watched a lamp swinging in the cathedral next door to the Leaning Tower and thus worked out, while still in his early twenties, the law of the pendulum.

"The stabilization of the Tower may encourage the more frequent ringing of the seven huge bel's hung in the top floor. Each of these bells has a name and the oldest bears the inscription, 'Locteringus of Pisa made me in A. D. 1262.' The bells now are rung only three times each year because it is feared their vibration might jar the structure."

JUST TO SHOW you the popularity of beach pajamas this season, Mrs. Jewett, wife of Major Jewett, stationed at Bolling field, Washington, D. C., wore them while flying across country recently.

As she climbed from the open cockpit, Mrs. Jewett explained that pajamas are just the thing for airplaning in hot weather.

Mrs. Jewett's costume consisted of wide trousers in solid color, with a jacket decorated with large polka dots.

WINDHAM

Although the threatened shower Sunday morning did not materialize it interferred with the church attendance, but there were 40 at the Congregational church who listened to an excellent sermon on "Tolerance" by Rev. E. F. Smiley. During the offertory, Earle M. Harvey sang "My Task." The C. E. service was omitted and about 20 attended the monthly union service of the Windham, North Windham, Scotland and Chaplin societies, at Chaplin, where members of the colored Baptist church of Willimantic, sang a number of Negro spirituals which were much enjoyed.

PARIS, Aug. 1[illegible]—(AP)—Embroidery is back in the column of things chic.

WOOLENS ARE ROUGH IN WINTER COATS

The newest coat fabrics have a crepe-like texture without actually being crepes. Spong-surface is a phrase Paris uses to describe the coatings.

TEXAS IMPORTS TOADS TO WAR ON INSECTS

They're now expected to work toward prevention of millions of dollars in insect crop damage.

Giant Surinam toads are being brought into the state from Porto Rico to rid the lower coastal regions of the mole cricket, one of the most destructive insects of the region.

The cricket does most of its damage underground in the daytime, but comes to the surface at night. The Surinam toads, which sleep little, are expected to catch the pests when they come out of their holes.

But crickets are not the only insects that Porto Rican toads thrive on. The imported pest-catcher is expected to aid materially in extermination of May beetles, boll weevils, white grubs, cockroaches, fleas, melon beetles, leaf hoppers, millipedes, house fly pupae, centipedes, land snails and caterpillars.

The toad's appetite seems insatiable. Tests show it is fond of 83 different kinds of insects, most of them detrimental to crops. One toad has caught 128 flies in less than a half hour.

Recently a shipment of 89 toads was received, and this number is expected to care for the needs of Jefferson county, so fast do the toads multiply. The production from the spawn of one female is estimated at between 1,000 to 2,000 a year. Combs asserts that a single toad will be worth $19.80 a year because of the cutworms it will kill.

CONVENTION WILL SURVEY FARM LIVING STANDARDS

MADISON, Wis. Aug. —(AP)—Means of improving the standards of living for the nation's farm population will be surveyed here in October by 3,000 members of the American Country Life association at the organization's 13th annual convention.

A feature will be presentation of the Capper award of $5,000 and a gold medal for outstanding service to agriculture. These will go to Stephen Moulton Babcock, professor emeritus at the University of Wisconsin, who invented the Babcock milk test. Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, is the founder of the award.

Scrutiny of the farm living problem will be directed at the farmer's income in relation to his standard of living, utilization of his income, and the cultural arts.

WARTS FOUND 'CATCHING' IN VETERINARIAN'S TESTS

WASHINGTON, Aug. —(AP)—Dr. Gilbert T. Creech, veterinarian, believes he has proven that warts are transmissible by experiments with calves.

There still is no positive evidence that warts are caused by some form of life but Dr. Creech believes they are the result of a filterable virus, which is a form of life so small it cannot be distinguished except by its damage.

MAINE FARMERS GET FLORIDA CROP TOO

PORTLAND, Me. Aug. —(AP)—Rotation of crops is an old idea but rotation of farmers is something new. After raising their regular crops in the Pine Tree state, certain Maine potato growers go to Florida late in the fall and raise another crop of potatoes there.

Besides doubling their production in normal years they are safeguarded at other times for there is seldom a crop failure in both states in the same twelvemonth.

THINK IT'S DRY NOW? REALLY WAS IN 1838

CIRCLEVILLE, Ohio, Aug. —(AP)—A musty diary of the Rev. Joseph A. Roof reveals a really "dry spell" almost a century ago

"From June 13, 1838, to May, 1840, not sufficient rain fell to moisten the earth two inches," he wrote. "When promising drizzles began they stopped almost abruptly, and the entire dry spell lasted 21 months. All vegetation failed and most of the streams dried up in their beds."

Italy Opens Rice Program

FORLI, Italy, Aug. —(AP)—Mussolini, as "first farmer of Italy," has just been presented with the first 20 pound sack of rice to be distributed under the new producer-to-consumer system throughout Italy. In it was Card No. 1 for the national rice lottery, drawings for which will take place on Oct. 28, eighth anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome.

Advises Canning Chicken

STILLWATER, Okla., Aug. —(AP)—Can chicken and save money, farmers are advised by food specialists at the Oklahoma A. and M. college. It provides a variety of meats the year round, and canning the fowls when they reach their prime saves feeding them until they are eaten in the winter.

Pineapples Back in Florida

FORT PIERCE, Fla., Aug. —(AP)—A trial order of 30,000 pineapple plants has been received here from Porto Rico. An additional shipment of 200,000 plants is expected to stimulate the once extensive pineapple industry in this section.

Pigs Gain Rapidly

ATHENS, Tenn., Aug. —(AP)— Gaining one and one-half pounds each day from birth until they were 124 days old, a litter of pigs owned by G. M. Brock here, averaged over 200 pounds per pig. Mr. Brock's litter was the first to be sold in the state litter contest. The largest pig weighed 240 pounds.

ON-MAN GARRISON AT COAST DEFENSE FORT

ABERDEEN, Wash.—(AP)—Private A. E. Daily is a one-man fort.

Besides being commandant of the army post on the sand dunes facing Grays Harbor, south of here, Daily is the staff and entire complement of the post.

Each morning for five months, Private Daily has blown his own reveille, issued his own orders and then carried them out.

Every day he polishes the two disappearing guns built too late for the last war, and never fired since.

Then he sweeps up the quarters in which he lives.

The six-inch guns and Daily's quarters are all that are left of the post, built to form a link in the chain of coast defenses and abandoned with the signing of the armistice.

The rest of the fort has crumbled rapidly. Buildings are disintegrating, machinery rusting.

But Daily polishes the guns every day.

COAST-TO-COAST BIOLOGY STUDIED BY BUS COLLEGE

WINFIELD, Kas.— (AP) —Biology is studied from coast to coast by students on 50-day bus tours sponsored by Southwestern college here.

This year 650 students are enrolled in the "omnibus college" which tours the country during the summer. Students ride in large buses and are fed from field cafeterias. They sleep at tourist camps.

Biology is studied in the mornings at camp sites or at the roadside, and credit is given. Museums in large cities along the route are visited.

A church in Long Island City, N. Y., is running free band concerts as a counter-attraction to nearby speakeasies.

CONFESSES THE SLAYING OF DETROIT RADIO ANNOUNCER

Stranger Surrendered in Stryker, Ohio—Says He Was Hired to Assassinate Jerry Buckley—That After the Crime He Went to Nebraska—Had Been Sleeping In Barns and "Bumming" Rides From Motorists—Gave the Name of Edwin L. Miller of Detroit.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Aug. 15.—(AP)— A man about 35 years old who surrendered in Stryker, Ohio, this afternoon signed a confession, according to authorities, that he had shot and killed Jerry Buckley, radio anouncer for Station WMBC in Detroit several weeks ago. He said he was hired to be the entertainer's assassin.

The man alighted from a truck on which he had "thumbed" a ride into the town and then asked where he could find an officer of the law. He was told that Marshal Ben Farber, who is also a deputy sheriff, was at work in his automobile repair shop.

The stranger first went to a lunchroom, worked there for a few hours and then surrendered to the marshal.

The confession was scribbled in pencil and said:

"I killed Jerry Buckley, Detroit radio announcer and friend of the needy."

There were no details but the prisoner, who was taken to the town jail, added that he had been paid well by a Detroit gang to shoot the announcer.

Detroit detectives immediately were notified and said that they would send a squad of police to Stryker.

The prisoner declared that after the crime he went west as far as Nebraska and then returned to this section of the country, sleeping in barns and hay stacks and "bumming" rides from motorists. He did not say what he did with the money which he said the Detroit plotters gave him.

The suspect acted nervously and was vague in his answers when questioned about the circumstances surrounding the killing. He repeated that his conscience bothered him and he wanted rest.

Marshal Farber said the man gave his name as Edwin L. Miller, of Detroit. The marshal said he believed the confession authentic, adding that he had not questioned the man very thoroughly.

DETROIT DETECTIVES HAD NEVER HEARD OF MILLER

DETROIT, Aug. 15.—(AP)—Detectives Leo Doyle and Williams Delisle left late today for Stryker, O., to question Edwin L. Miller, said to have signed a confession there that he killed Gerald E. Buckley, radio announcer.

Police said they had never heard of Miller.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS DEATH OF YOUNG WOMAN

SPRINGFIELD, Vt., Aug. 15—(AP)—A meeting today of the family of George J. Packard, including a wife thought a suicide and a girl he married a month ago, failed to lighten the mystery surrounding a young woman, apparently killed by poison last summer and identified nine months later by Packard as his estranged wife.

While Catherine Rockwell Packard, 22, was discussing with her husband the possibility of divorce so that he might remarry his second wife and while she wept at the sight of her little boy of three and her baby girl, less than two years old, a man known as Robert B. "Romeo" king, 32 had entered police custody in Concord, N. H. King, according to the authorities, is the man with whom Mrs. Packard became friendly after leaving her husband early last summer. He had been sought for questioning.

At Montpelier, the Vermont state capital, the records of the department of public welfare were being studied in an effort to learn if King was the man who had served sentences twice in Vermont for larceny and burglary.

All of the victims of the tragedy today were married and are survived by their widows and large families. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

Deadly Underw[illegible] Feud In [illegible]eland

Many Me[illegible] Been Slain in the [illegible]rn-Sugar Racket Recently.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 15—(AP)—Terrors engendered by the deadly underworld fued connected with the corn-sugar racket here, were described tonight as Raymond Porello, one of five brothers who believe they are "marked" for murder victims, commented on the explosion which today wrecked his pretentious home here.

Two other Porello brothers, Joe and Vincente, were slain a month ago in a hail of bullets from gangsters waging war for control of the racket, and many others also have been slain in the strife. Joe and Vincente were known as "barons" in the racket.

Police were uncertain tonight whether the explosion in Raymond Porello's home was an accident or committed by enemies. The owner and his family were not at home when gas or some other explosive completely demolished the structure with a blast that shook the entire neighborhood.

The Porellos believe, however, the explosion was another act of violence by their enemies and admitted they have been living in a virtual seclusion of terror since the two brothers were killed. The escape of Raymond Porello and of his wife and two small children from the blast, was due to that seclusion. They have been living with his parents, and the other brothers also have spent most of their time recently in hat place which they seem to believe is a temporary haven of safety.

Raymond, who like the others believes enemies intend to snuff out their lives, one by one, said unless he could have police protection, his last resort would be to flee to some place "where no one can find me."

R-100 Expected At Home Base This A.M.

At One Time Head Winds Reduced Speed to 15 Miles an Hour.

LONDON, Aug. 16. (Saturday)—(AP)—The air ministry announced early this morning that it expected the British dirigible R-100 to moor at Cardington between 8 and 8:30 a. m., British summer time, today (2 and 2:30 a. m. E. S. T.)

R-100 ENCOUNTERED FOG, HEAD WINDS AND RAIN

ON BOARD R-100, Aug. 15.—(AP)—Widely contrasting speed, ranging from 15 miles an hour to 100, were shown by the R-100 today as it first bucked squalls and bad weather in general but later sped into ideal conditions with a pleasant wind behind it.

The ship was tortured by heavy rains and wind last night, the gale reaching a speed of 45 miles an hour and cutting that of the airship to 15. The rain broke through the fabric of the ship into the kitchen and put the electric cooker out of commission.

Some of the swirling water also came through the gangway but it did not bother the passengers. They slept peacefully through the terrific storm and their first intimation that anything had happened came this morning at breakfast, when they were informed there would be no hot drinks because of the disabled stove.

A heavy fog lasted until noon, but then it cleared and with a favorable wind the gigantic airship roared toward the Irish coast and Cardington at a speed of 100 miles an hour.

The passengers did not mind going without hot coffee or tea for breakfast, but they are are craving a smoke.

Despite the high speed reached after the fog had cleared, it is now considered doubtful that the R-100 will establish a record crossing; the storm is to blame for that.

COP DROWNED, MANACLED WITH HIS OWN HANDCUFFS

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 15. —(AP) — Drowned while his hands were manacled together with his own handcuffs, and with no evidence of violence apparent, the death of Patrolman Michael T. Connolly tonight remained a mystery as county and city officials attempted to trace his movements during the early morning hours. The officer's body in full uniform but with the cap missing, was found face down in the sand in a little cove below Fort Allen park, a few hundred yards from the Grand Trunk docks this morning by John Lee, of 23 Mountfort street, a longshoreman, who was hunting driftwood.

An autopsy showed that death was due to drowning and medical examiners said bruises and cuts about the head were probably caused by the washing of the body against rocks.

The possibility of suicide was broached by some officials who said the manner in which the handcuffs were placed on Connolly's wrists indicated they were fastened by one accustomed to use the manacles.

RUSSIAN ARCTIC PARTY DISCOVERS NEW LAND

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 15—(AP)—A Russian Arctic expedition on the icebreaker Sedov today radioed that it had discovered new land at 79.25 degrees latitude an 76.10 longitude.

The message added that the land extended for a great distance westward, and the expedition expects to plant the soviet flag upon the new soil.

Vladimir Wiese, a soviet scientist, predicted the discovery of land in this region in 1924 and explorers have been searching for it since.

The position given is high in the Arctic Ocean off the north coast of Siberia, lying about 200 miles north of Yeneisei Bay. Available charts show it as open ocean at present.

FARM ORGANIZATIONS TO AID DROUGHT RELIEF PLAN

Assurances Received by President Hoover From Representatives of Three Organizations—Rain Is Falling in Many Sections of the Drought Area—War Department to Turn Over Several Thousand Acres in Virginia For Private Grazing—Conditions in Montana Are Viewed as the Most Difficult.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15—(AP)—Reports of continued rains in many sections of the drought area reached the White house today as President Hoover received assurances from representatives of three farm organizations of support in his program for relief.

Meanwhile, the governors or their representatives from 13 states who yesterday formulated with the chief executive a far reaching program of relief were enroute home to complete the state committees for dealing with the situation.

As soon as the banker representatives upon these committees are named they are to be called to Washington by the president to discuss the financing of relief measures.

The War Department moved today to help relieve the situation in two states. Diversion of greater quantities of water from Lake Michigan by the sanitary district than the amount fixed recently by the supreme court was authorized by Secretary Hurley to diminish the health menace. He also informed Governor Pollard of Virginia that several thousand acres of artillery ranges would be turned over to the state for private grazing.

Mr. Hoover was told by Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange, C. C. Talbott, chairman of the board of directors of the Farmers Union, who also represented the Farmers National Grain Corporation, and Sam H. Thompson, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, that the relief organization outlined at the governors' conference was the most workable plan yet presented.

The conditions in Montana were viewed today as among the most difficult at this time, and Secretary Hyde already has initiated steps to provide aid. Several million sheep and about 500,000 head of cattle soon will need feed in the central part of the state, reports indicated, and immediate activity to move the cattle to better grazing land or to ship in emergency food to be initiated.

Hope of general relief throughout the drought area was revived by the reports of additional rains. Secretary Hyde saw in these not only a helpful psychological factor for the farmers, but said also the rains probably would rejuvenate much pasture land.

Agreeing with this view, Thompson said the cooler weather also would be a great aid as the pastures would not deteriorate so fast.

The Department of Agriculture reports showed from one-half to one inch of rain has fallen during the last few days in nearly all of Missouri, the southern half of Illinois and Indiana, nearly all of Kentucky, most of West Virginia, southwest Virginia, and nearly all of Tennessee and Alabama.

At the same time it was said good rains were had over the area extending from South Central Kansas northwest over the state and into extreme southwest Nebraska. Southern Ohio also has had some showers and general but mostly light rains have occurred in North Carolina and northward along the seaboard.

RECEPTION COMMITTEE TO GREET SIR THOMAS LIPTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 15—(AP)—Sir Thomas Lipton, British merchant and yachtsman, arrives tomorrow for his fifth attempt to lift the America's cup, of which he has said: "I would swap all the trophies I have for that mug the Americans hold."

It is Sir Thomas' 83rd voyage to America—he's been a regular caller ever since 1867—but tomorrow for the first time he is to be given the sort of reception that New York accords distinguished guests, the crowned and uncrowned heroes of the day.

At quarantine the titled tea merchant will be transferred from the Leviathan to the decorated city tug Macom on which more than 100 prominent men have been invited to act as reception committee. After the ride up the bay among the tooting harbor craft he will be taken up Broadway under police escort.

Although the veteran yachtsman comes as a foreign invader intent on degrees latitude and 76.10 longitude. est trophies, he comes also as an old friend and frequent visitor, and he will be received as an honored guest.

It will be left to him to find out whether the key to the city will be of any help in unlocking the chains that have bound the America's cup so tightly to American soil.

TSINAN RECAPTURED BY CHINESE GOVT. TROOPS

NANKING, Aug. 15.—(AP)—Government troops today recaptured Tsinan, capital of Shantung province, from rebels who had held it several weeks and sharply defeated other insurgents in Honan province, said a telegram from President Chiang Kai-Shek in the field at Liuho, Honan.

General Chiang reported the northerners retreated from Tsinan toward the Yellow river, abandoning large quantities of ammunition.

The nationalists counter-attacked heavily along the Haichow-Tungkwan railway in Honan, he said. The rebel defeat caused him to believe "the nationalists shortly would be able to drive the rebels from Honan and capture Kaifeng and Chengchow."

ORGANIZED A GANG OF BOYS TO STEAL GOLF BALLS

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—(AP)—Convicted of having organized a gang of boys to steal golf balls on a golf course. Adolph Kurdtz, 19, was fined $25 and costs today.

Kurdtz had hired 18 boys from 5 to 9 years old to pick up "lost" golf balls before they stopped rolling, the park policeman testified. He paid the boys a dime each for the balls, sold to golfers at a profit, and then won the boys' dimes back in dice games, the officer said.

HOOVER PRESENTS MEDAL TO COLONEL LINDBERGH

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15—(AP)—A slim, smiling young man upon whom three years of fame has left no apparent impression, was honored again today by his country.

It was the same self-conscious Charles A. Lindbergh of 1927 that stepped forward to receive from President Hoover the special congressional medal voted for him two years ago, and his replies to the brief remark to the president were hardly audible.

The presentation tok place in the president's office with Mrs. Hoover, Mrs. Lindbergh and a group of government officials looking on.

The ceremony was brief.

"It is a real pleasure," the president said, "to present you this congressional medal on behalf of congress and in commemoration of your achievement in aviation. I am sure that sentiment expressed by congress is shared by the whole American people."

Obviously embarrassed, Col. Lindbergh reached out his hand and took the medal, hesitated momentarily and then said slowly:

"Mr. President, I thank you and wish to express my thanks to congress, and my appreciation to you."

BELIEVE 48 MINERS DEAD IN BLAKEBURN, B. C. MINE

BLAKEBURN, B. C., Aug. 15—(AP)—Death of a canary lowered into the blast torn Blakeburn coal mine today was regarded by veteran workers as confirmation of the belief that 48 miners had perished.

The 48 miners were entombed by a blast which occurred Wednesday night. Forty-four men still are unaccounted for, four bodies having been brought to surface.

Failure of the bird to survive the dread "after damp" gas of the lower workings was believed indicative of the fate of the missing men.

The bodies of Harry Edwards and Josiah Bradbury were found in the main tunnel today. Edwards was badly burned. The bodies of Albert Cole and Clifford Smith were taken from the debris shortly after the explosion.

TWO SENT TO JAIL FROM LOCAL COURT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 15—The registration of two more "floaters" sentenced from this city, at the Windham county jail in Brooklyn this afternoon brought the total number of prisoners to 64. Of the number 11 are waiting superior court trial. There are three women, two of whom are bound over prisoners. With fall weather just around the corner the jail capacity of 96 prisoners will be taxed by about the middle of November at the present rate of commitments. An average of one prisoner per day, the majority of them transients, seeking the jail as a haven against unemployment conditions, was maintained during July. This average has climbed so that so far this month it is nearly two per day. While a 30 day sentence is the rule there are several committed for 60 and 90 days, causing a slow "turn-over" of prisoners and a gradual gain on the jail capacity.

Many of these "floaters" who fail to get arrested and sent to the jail for a sentence are getting overnight lodging in the lock-ups throughout the county or at the jail. It is noted by the authorities that very few of these are at liberty over 24 hours before they manage to make contact with some form of intoxicant that is admittedly imbibed for the sole purpose of getting a suitable sentence. Courtesy has crept into the floating ilk so that it is now a common occurence for police court judges to be thanked for imposing a sentence. At the jail Assistant Jailer Walter Tripp keeps as many men as possible at work on the jail farm and premises. The prisoners are content to perform such tasks as are assigned them for the return of jail cell accommodations and three square meals a day.

The delegation from James J. Shea post No. 13, American Legion, to attend the national convention at Boston in October is expected to occupy two Pullman cars, according to a report of Lester H. Blish, chairman of the legion "On to Boston" committee. The cars will be attached to a special train leaving Monday morning, October 6, and returning Thursday night. Wives of the legionnaires are also expected to make the trip. The members will sleep in the Pullman cars at the South station yard, while in Boston, a special low rate of $16 per person having been fixed by the New Haven railroad for this purpose.

The local post is making progress in the organization of a fife and drum corps. George B. Robinson, chairman of the committee, has ordered the drums and bugles. Wilfred Moreau, Alvin V. Nelson and Wilfred Lariviere have been appointed a committee to organize a drill team.

Police Court.

There were five cases heard in police court this morning. Two were of intoxicants who chose 30-day jail sentences to suspension of judgment for 24 hours.

Eugene Hilaire, 20, of 120 Main street was charged with assault on his brother, Raymond Hilaire of the same address. He pleaded not guilty, saying that his family nagged him because he was out of work. He said that he had sought employment in cities, going as far as Biddeford and Houlton, Me. Mrs. Jennie Hilaire, mother of the accused, said that her son, Eugene, had caused much trouble at the house and testified that he had assaulted Raymond. Raymond said that he had been grabbed by the neck, without provocation. When Eugene agreed that he would leave home and avoid further trouble with the family, Judge Frank H. Foss ordered the case nolled.

Edward Bacon, 60, of 14 Center street, pleaded nolo contendre to a charge of violating the fishing law by illegally setting an eel pot in the Indian Hollow pond in Windham. Deputy Game Warden Charles Colburn said that the eel pot was discovered last Saturday. He and Deputy Game Warden Dewitt Lathrop returned to the spot Wednesday and saw Bacon handling the apparatus. Bacon testified that the pond was owned by his brother. He said he and his family went there Wednesday for an outing. He said that he saw the eel pot and was looking at it when the officers accosted him. In the opinion of the court the accused knew more about the eel pot than was admitted and a fine of two dollars and costs, amounting to $9.36 was paid.

Mrs. Grace Searles of Pomfret Center was fined $10 and costs, amounting to $17.90 on a charge of speeding. On August 6, Mrs. Searles was driving along the North Windham road when her car struck the rear of a light lumber wagon driven by John Csambako of North Windham. On conducting an investigation State Policeman Charles F. Hill of the Stafford Springs barracks found wheel marks on the concrete for 60 feet, showing where the brakes had been applied before the collision and 11 feet further after the contact with the wagon. It was on this testimony that the speeding charge was fixed. Mrs. Searles said in her defense that she was traveling about 20 miles an hour as she came over the brow of the hill near Sunset farm. She said she applied her brakes upon seeing the wagon but that they failed to work properly. In avoiding a collision with a car coming in the opposite direction her car struck the wagon. She told the owner of the wagon at the time that her insurance would cover his damages.

The truck was passing the wagon at the four corners when Sheridan was forced to pull aside upon the approach of another automobile. JEWETT CITY

ALL-STAR BOROUGH TEAM AS HAL CHASE PICKS IT

Hal Chase, editor of Asco Smiles, asked to give his opinion on the selection of a ball nine from among the 75 or more local players who have given such fine exhibitions of the national game this summer in the Jewett City Twilight league, says:

"In the catching department Pizzo of the Fisk team is easily the best bet in the league. Gaudette of Ashland and Vachon of the Fisk are my choice for the pitching department. At first base I'll place Lloyd Jarvis and expect no argument as to his hitting, base-running or fielding ability. Lloyd played with the Campers. At second base we'll have a little argument. Sawicki of Fisk is without question the class of the league from all angles, but could hardly be regarded as a regular. For this reason I am picking Johnny Burda to play second base. Johnny played shortstop for Ashland and was out of position not by his own choice, but for the good of the team. At short stop we'll take Guillet who played third base for the K. of C. and who likewise was out of position. We expect no dispute in the selection of Mat Solenski to play third base, the position he filled so well for the Campers. Here is the best looking ball player of the younger crop. He has plently of natural ability but lots to learn. On just how well he learns, his baseball future depends. Lack of spirit seems to be his biggest drawback and this in a ball player is a serious fault, but Mat is young and may snap out of it. The heavy arguments will occur in the selection of the outfield. We could make up quite an outfield from the three Gilbert boys, but we'll go into it on a little finer basis. For right field I pick Joe Perry on all around ability. In center Joe Gilbert measures up in all around ability and his faculty for getting on and scoring runs together with his hitting in the pinches just about gives him the berth on this mythical ball club. Joe was a big help to Ashland. Rocky or Buba or whatever his name is, who played first base for Fisk was out of position and is rightfully an outelder and to him goes the left field position with little chance of argument in the writer's opinion. Rocky is a hard and timely hitter and knows baseball better than the average player in this league. Now there is one man's opinion of an all star team. There is just one addition to be made and that is old man Liberty as the all star hat passer."

Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting

Thousands of Pile sufferers have learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, after years of study discovered a real internal Pile remedy and called his prescription HEM-ROID. He prescribed it for 1000 patients with the marvelous record of 960 cases, and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID from their own druggist with a rigid money-back guarantee.

Dr. Leonhardt's prescription has a wonderful record of success right in this city and Lee & Osgood invites every Pile sufferer to try HEM-ROID and guarantees to refund the purchase price if it does not end all Pile misery.

DANIELSON

ANOTHER CIVIL WAR VETERAN ANSWERS LAST ROLL CALL

DANIELSAN, Aug. 15—Death again thinned the ranks of the squad of Civil war veterans still resident in this town when Thomas Truesdale Bates, 93, passed away this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. E. Harrington, at Elmville. It so happened that his passing was on the day of the 62nd annual reunion of the Eighteenth Connecticut Volunteers association at the Buckingham Memorial in Norwich. Colonel Henry W. Babson, life president of the association, and a resident here, was informed of Mr. Bates' death soon after it occurred, and said that it would be his sad duty to make announcement of it to those attending the reunion. Mr. Bates had been seriously ill for several weeks past.

Born in Killingly Dec. 13, 1837, a son of Sheldon and Esther Russell Bates, he had lived his entire life in this town with the exception of the three years that he served in the Civil war. He was a member of K company, 18th Connecticut Volunteers. During many of his active years Mr. Bates was a mill man, and was employed in plants at East Killingly when the textile industry was thriving in that part of the town.

In addition to his daughter, Mr. Bates is survived by three grandchildren, three great-grandchildren and a number of nephews and nieces. In point of years as well as in length of time of residence here he was one of the oldest of Killingly's citizens. Mr Bates' death leaves less than ten veterans of the Civil war resident in this town, and only two of the many companions that served in his company during the war.

Copious Consumer of Clams

Behold George LaBelle bringing another championship to Killingly! The Ballouville man has been crowned as the champion clam-eater of all the thousands who have eaten shore dinners at Rocky Point.

Mr. LaBelle went to the Rhode Island shore resort on the local Carpenters' union outing. He is a husky and blessed with a good appetite. Having stowed away four bowls of chowder and two dozen clam bakes, some member of the party inquired if he were not going to eat any clams. "Yes, and plenty," he replied.

A waiter that overheard the remark brought him four pans and casually mentioned to him that the record eating at one sitting at Rocky Point was 248 clams.

Thereupon Gerge set out to make the man who held that record look like a weakling flapper. Having disposed very easily of the four pans of clams, ten more pans were ordered for him. By this time a gallery had gathered and George was the object of much attention. He ate steadily on until he had devoured 310 clams, and only stopped then, he says, in order that he might finish his meal with a few earns of corn and a slice or two of watermelon. There were no disastrous after effects, and George stands ready to bost the clam eating-record just as soon as anyone surpasses it.

Next Monday evening will find Grangers from far and near gathered in Danielson to attend an inter-state meeting sponsored by Killingly grange. Among them will be officers of the Connecticut and Rhode Island State granges. A member of Killingly grange, Rev. Charles A. Downs of Goodyear, is chaplain of the Connecticut State grange.

Committees have been at work for weeks making arrangements for this meeting, and invitations have been sent out to granges for 50 miles around. It is not unlikely that the attendance will total several hundred. The meeting is to be held in the town hall.

Of interest to many here is the announcement of the marriage of Paul Shumway Parsons, son of Dr. and Mrs. Luther parsons of Baltimore, and a grand-nephew of the late Judge Milton A. Shumway of Danielson. He was married to Miss Marion Hepburn Buckler at the American cathedral of the Holy Trinity in Paris on July 24. The couple are to be at home in Baltimore after October 1.

There were 64 prisoners at the county jail in Brooklyn today, this being an unusually large number for summer time. Six prisoners from various parts of the county were committed yesterday and two more were received today.

General business conditions are at least partly responsible, it is held, for so many being locked up during the hot weather period. An official of the town court of Killingly said it is not unusual to find men nowadays who actually are anxious to be sent over to do a term of jail service, and some of them would like a six months' sentence better than one of 30 days.

In this town at least an effort is being made to send no more men than necessary to Brooklyn from the town court. In some instances, of course, giving jail sentences is practically unavoidable.

Members of the Danielson fire department have taken the precaution to arrange for speedy transmission to them of an alarm for fire that may come in here while they are at Old Killingly pond for their annual outing and clambake on Sunday. In an emergency a telephone call will be put through to the Mason homestead and from there promptly transmitted to the firemen. In any event, the firemen will be away only a few hours, from about mid-forenoon to mid-afternoon, and fast cars would bring them back, if they should have to come on an alarm, in a very few minutes.

A neighborhood store operated by William Mousteferis on Elm street, West Side, was broken into last night and some money and cigars taken. Entrance was gained through a window. The matter was reported to state officers, and State Officer Henry Mayo was engaged today in investigating the matter.

Next Sunday evening's union service under the auspices of the Danielson Federation of Churches will be held at the Baptist church, with Rev. Albert Abbott of the Methodist Episcopal church as the preacher.

Local state officers were working in Putnam today on the equipment checking campaign that has been engaging their attention for several days past in various towns throughout this section.

Jehu Downes of Wauregan and his friend, Percy Spring, organist at the Central Baptist church, Providence are motoring in northern New England this week.

In the absence of Rev. A. E. Gallup, who is away on vacation, Kent A. Darbie of Broad street, will have charge of the Sunday morning service at the Nazarene church.

Numbers of trustees or directors of local banking institutions plan to visit the new banking home of the Cargill Trust company at Putnam on Wednesday of next week.

Mrs. Julia Brown of Willimantic is visiting with her cousin, Mrs. Adrianna Potter.

Frederick A. Jacobs, who has been spending several weeks at Harwichport, Mass., has returned to his home here.

Miss Helen Cronin, who has been in Europe for several weeks, has rarived in New York and will return to her home here in a few days.

Walter Shippee, the local boy who recently won distinction for having made the best model plane displayed at Camp Woodstock, will have his reward on Saturday, when as the guest of Governor Trumbull he will be given an airplane trip from Brainard field, Hartford.

Captain Harold E. Greene, who will return here Saturday from a tour of duty at Camp Devens, writes that there has been plenty of work for officers and men of the Danielson units this year, and that the athletic programs have been fine.

Carroll B. Allen, formerly in business here and later a resident of New Haven, has been appointed manager of the Leavitt Department store at Manchester, N. H.

There were many expressions of thanksgiving today over the steady rainfall that continued throughout the day.

Hundreds of the members of St. James' parish attended the masses in observance of the feast of the Assumption this morning.

The westerly section of the nearly three miles of concrete highway between Wauregan and Danielson is complete, though travel is permitted over only a part of it. The easterly half of the new highway will be under construction during the coming week.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Sheridan and their little daughter, of Northampton, Mass., were guests today of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Witter. Mr. Sheridan is an officer in the Northampton fire department.

WAUREGAN

The Wauregan Men's class won another short contest against the Brooklyn Men's class this week. Two horseshoe pitching games were won with a schore of 203 to 162 and 201 to 149. Harris, Ashworth and Clemens represented the Brooklynites and Girsch, Bowden, Carpenter and Stones, Wauregan.

Louie Labonte, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Pellerin and Mrs. Riapel left this week for a motor trip to Plattsburg, N. Y. and Canada.

Among the girls who returned Friday from Camp Woodstock were Louise Milligan and Nina Williams. Both report a great camping period.

PUTNAM

T. L. TAYLOR IS LAST SURVIVOR OF NAVAL BATTLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Aug. 15—At his home on the east side of Oak hill, Thomas L. Taylor, an elderly colored citizen of the community today read with interest the following dispatch which appeared in the afternoon editions of Thursday's papers: "Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 14—(AP)—William Francis Blake, said to be the last surviving veteran of the battle between the Monitor and the Merrimac, is dead here today at the North Carolina Confederate Soldiers' home. He was 91 years of age."

Although the southern veteran may have been the "last" survivor of the famous naval encounter of the ironclads, Mr. Taylor, who is now in his eighties is believed to be the only member of the crew of the Union "cheese box on a raft" now living. The battle of the two ships, which saw the dawn of new types of naval war vessels, took place 68 years ago on March 9, off the coast at Hampton Roads Va. Mr. Taylor was aboard when the Monitor steamed out of its base at Hampton Roads and during the thick of the battle which raged for several hours after the Confederate iron covered hulk was encountered, he served as a "powder monkey". His duties consisted of passing up explosives from the ammunition hold to the gunners in the revolving turret. The rest of the happenings occurring on that eventful day are known to all.

With the constant thinning of the ranks of the veterans of the Civil war, announcements have appeared in the press from time to time in recent years citing instances where the "last survivor of the Monitor battle dies". In most cases these dispatches have been followed in the local press by prompt denials, together with brief mentions of Mr. Taylor, referring to him as still the last living member of the crew of that famous ship.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Jessie H. Gilpatric

The funeral of Mrs. Jessie Hodges Gilpatric, who died suddenly sometime Wednesday morning, was held privately from her late home on Seward and Fremont streets at two o'clock this afternoon. Only relatives and intimate friends of Mrs. Gilpatric were in attendance. Rev. Frank A. Fuller, retired Congregational clergyman, officiated at the service and conducted the committal service at the grave in Grove street cemetery. The bearers were Roswell and Donald Gilpatric of New York and Richard and George H. Gilpatric of this city, all grandsons of the deceased.

This city has experienced only a few cases of contagious disease during the summer season, thus far, Health Officer Peter A. Gardner, said this afternoon. Mr. Gardner said that during the present month only one case of diphtheria has been called to his attention by physicians, such a record being unusual for such a time.

State Officer Henry M. Mayo continued his investigation of the $365 robbery at the Main street store of the Atlantic and Pacific Tea company today, but at a late hour had not definitely fixed the responsibility for the theft with any person or group. Appearances are that the rear window of the store which was unlatched, was raised and protective bars inside the window framing were lifted from the sockets, permitting the burglar to slip through the opening with ease.

An agent of P. Leroy Harwood of New London, who is editing a new volume called, "History of Eastern Connecticut", is located in this city engaging in the collection of facts and dates of northern Windham county's history, which is to be included in a section of the volume. Work on the book has been underway for several weeks and when completed it is expected to be one of the most complete histories ever published pertaining to the section of the state east of the Quinebaug river. Luther M. Keith of Grove street, supervisor of the bureau of highway beautification of the state highway department, is a sponsor of the work which will be published, it is thought, in about a year and a half.

A delegation from the local fire department, composed of Deputy Chiefs Alphonse Dumas and Phillias Clouthier, Company Foremans Edmund Keane and Frederick Dumas and Firemen W. A. Wheaton and Eugene Berthiaume, left for Bridgeport this morning to attend the two day session of the convention of the state firemen's association.

Miss Gertrude Warner of South Main street is making a satisfactory recovery from an operation for appendicitis, which she underwent a week ago at the Day Kimball hospital.

SIX ARRESTED IN RAIDS ON PUTNAM SPEAKEASIES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Aug. 15—This city was included in the county-wide raids on speakeasies tonight when a squadron of state officers from Groton, Stafford Springs and Danielson barracks, operating under the direction of Sergeant George L. Gardner, visited the homes and business houses of several alleged violators at 9 o'clock. While it was not definitely stated, it appears the raids are the result of work performed in this city during the past few weeks by undercover agents of the state police department.

The party of officers, upon arriving here, was split into details of two men, all of whom descended simultaneously upon each suspected establishment. As the result of the raids, five men and one woman are under arrest on charges ranging from owning and keeping the sale of intoxicating liquor.

Officers Scranton of Danielson and Daley of Stafford Springs barracks raided the home of Philip Desautelle of 43 Ballou street, where they seized a quantity of liquor. Desautelle was arrested and charged with owning and keeping and sale. The beer parlors of Edward Dubos at 120 Pomfret street, were raided by Officers Carmody of Danielson and Smith of Groton. A large quantity of home-brew beer was seized and the owner placed under arrest, charged with owning, keeping and sale. He is being held at the barracks in Danielson tonight in default of bonds of $500.

Mrs. Julia Gardner, 194 Main street, was arrested by Officers Murphy of Danielson and Busch of Groton after a small amount of liquor was seized at her home. She is being held in bonds of $500 on charges of owning keeping and sale. Archille Gregorie, who conducts a fruit and produce store at 209 Providence street is at liberty under bonds of $200, posted after his arrest by Officers Nolan of Danielson and Zehrer of Statfford Springs, on a charge of sale of liquor. A search of his store failed to reveal any intoxicants.

Ernest Beaudry, 66 School street, was arrested on charges of owning and keeping and sale when his home was raided by Officers Poirer of Danielson and Kathe of Groton, who seized 170 bottles of beer during the search. He is being detained at the local police station for appearance in court Saturday morning.

A warrant was held for the search of the home of Fred Bibeault, of Railroad street, who escaped the possibility of arrest by his timely removal from Putnam a few days ago.

While the liquor raids were in progress Officers Scranton and Daley visited the United Cigar store on Front street and made a search for alleged gambling machines. No devices of this nature were found, it was said at the barracks tonight.

The South Main street office of the Providence street and Pepin Taxi Co., was raided and Arthur Plankey, an employe, was arrested on a charge of sale. No liquor was found here.

Sergeant Gardner said tonight that the group arrested, in all probability, will be arraigned in city court sometime Saturday to enter pleas.

Besides the raids in Putnam one establishment in Killingly and three in Wauregan were searched and arrests were made in each case.

Ralph Bradford, his sister, Miss Marjorie C. Bradford, and his mother, Mrs. Thomas Bradford of South Main street, are away from the city on a motor tour through the White Mountains of New Hampshire, this week.

Peter A. Gardner of Livery street, will leave Sunday for a two weeks' vacation to be spent at his summer home at Oakland Beach.

An inspector of the state motor vehicle department and Captain of Police Dubreuil, conducted an equipment examination and brake testing session at a point near the Grove street cemetery yesterday afternoon. During the inspection several cars were checked up but no arrests resulted.

Former Superintendent of Schools Ralph C. Jenkins, Mrs. Jenkins and family, were in this city today visiting with friends and renewing old acquaintances. Mr. Jenkins is now principal of a normal school in Johnson, Vermont.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Beebe of Whittemore street, and Mr. and Mrs. Iver S. Nelson of Main street, are to vacation during the next two weeks with Mrs. W. J. Bartlett, at her summer home at Crescent Beach.

LISBON

Sunday morning there was a good sized congregation at Newent church when Norman Kilpatrick told very interestingly of conditions in Bulgaria and of his experiences as a teacher in the Sofia-American schools. In the evening, a large audience witnessed the pageant, The Light of Truth, given in Community hall by a large cast from Canterbury Green church.

Next Sunday Rev. Dr. T. M. Shipherd of Park church, Norwich, will preach the morning sermon.

The Ladies' Aid society met at Community hall Wednesday afternoon. A quilt was tied and other sewing done. There was an attendance of twenty-four. Plans were made for a garden party soon on the parsonage grounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hull and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mell returned Monday after spending nearly a week on an automobile trip to Canada, Niagara Falls and other places.

Mrs. F. E. Hyde was in Goshen Thursday to attend the reunion of the Mary A. Stark Sunday school class, at the home of her sister, Mrs. James A. Randall.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Hyde and two children, of Jewett City, have been spending some time at the Hyde homestead.

All eyes were turned skyward Wednesday forenoon when the dirigible Los Angeles passed over. The words U. S. Navy on the side could be easily read with the naked eye and the name, Los Angeles, with the aid of an ordinary field glass.

IT'S WISE TO CHEVROLET CHOOSE A SIX

Announcing a new production record

2,000,000 Chevrolet Sixes now on the road

Since January, 1929, Chevrolet has produced and sold over 2,000,000 six-cylinder automobiles—nearly five times as many as any other manufacturer has ever built in an equal length of time.

These 2,000,000 buyers have chosen Chevrolet because it offers many desirable qualities not obtainable in any other car so low in price—

—the smoothness, silence and flexibility of a modern six-cylinder valve-in-head engine—the greater comfort and roadability of a modern, full-length chassis—and the style, safety and distinction of bodies by Fisher.

Yet, despite these fine car advantages, the Chevrolet Six is unusually economical. Its gas, oil, tire and upkeep economy is unsurpassed. And any model can be bought for a small down payment and easy monthly terms! Come in today. Learn for yourself why two million buyers have agreed—"it's wise to choose a Six."

KEEPING THE WHEELS TURNING

The American people are not buying as many cars this year as they did in the previous twelve months before the stock market crashed and an industrial depression set in. But they have not, apparently, cut down in the great American habit of seeing the world, which is particularly indulged in during the summer. It might have been expected that they would not tour as widely or in such large numbers as in the summer of 1929. True, one does not need a new car to take to the open road during the vacation season, but one has to buy gasoline, tires and other things. And in times of unemployment the wherewithal does not come so easily. But what is the experience this year? "Tourist travel at home and abroad already has broken all records," it is reported. The number of visitors to our national parks, which has been steadily increasing for several years, has mounted to new heights this summer. Up to early in July there had been 250,000 more visitors to the national parks than in the same period a year ago, and of that number an increasing percentage were automobile tourists. The figures at Mount Ranier national park are an illustration, for rail travelers decreased 63 per cent during June while motorists increased 28 per cent.

There is nothing to indicate that industrial depression is causing curtailment on the part of motor tourists for states are reporting larger gasoline sales than ever before, judged by the receipts of taxes from dealers. And it is not a good automobile year either, viewed from the standpoint of the automobile manufacturers.

If conditions caused automobile owners to put their cars away and postpone trips they had planned, the outlook might be dark indeed for the manufacturers. But when motorists are buying more and more gasoline and covering ever greater mileage, every mile of which brings their old cars nearer to the point at which they must either go to pieces or be traded in on new cars, the automobile industry must be on a fairly solid foundation.

NEW YORK'S UNCLEAN STAGE

Denunciation of the character of performances now appearing too often on the stage in New York has been given in a letter directed to his parishioners by the rector of a prominent cathedral, who styled them an outrage on public decency and asked for development of public opinion that would keep people from patronizing such performances. The rector had two certain plays in mind in writing his letter, one a so-called revue and the other a production from a classic Greek drama. In the case of the former its producers and some of the performers were arrested in a recent raid by the police and taken into court on the charge of debasing public morals, but the grand jury refused to indict them. Meanwhile the show has been purged of some of its objectionable features and is playing to even larger houses than before. What effect the rector's letter may have had among his parishioners of course is not ascertainable, but the producers of the Greek comedy have nothing to complain of as a result of the criticism, for the advance sale, which had averaged about $1,000 a day through the summer, has increased to $3,500.

These figures indicate what a hard course one has to pursue by trying to correct the abuse of the stage by public denouncement. Only a small percentage of theatre-goers are turned against the stage by such measures. Nevertheless, the denunciations of practices which encourage notorious and indecent shows is wholesome even though it may result in immediate profit to the producers. It serves at least to show, that there is a standard of taste and toleration to measure up to.

RAISING AN OLD QUESTION

Certain American oil companies have announced plans to engage in the retail selling of automobile tires. Every service station operated by them is to offer tires of various makes and prices.

Naturally, independent retail dealers in tires, as well as theoretical champions of the independent retailer, predict the early disappearance of the small dealer in tires. It is assumed that all the important oil companies will soon be selling tires at their respective service stations, and that the leading manufacturers of tires will establish company stores or service stations. What chance will there be for the small independent dealer caught between these millstones?

Perhaps he faces the necessity of retirement from his present field of operations, but perhaps not. The chain store has not driven the small retail storekeeper out of business. There may be room for the efficient and progressive retail dealer in tires, as there is in notions, or tobacco, or groceries, or meat and vegetables.

At any rate the course of economic and industrial life cannot be controlled by legislation dictated by dogma. Experiments cannot be prohibited arbitrarily. If a given chance is conducive to economy and efficiency the new method will survive until superceded by another innovation of genuine merit. Progress has its temporary drawbacks, but the amount of dislocation and unemployment coused by technical progress has been greatly overestimated. Society is morally bound to give proper aid to the actual victims of economic progress and thereby it recognizes the human aspects of the question of industrial efficiency.

MUSSOLINI AND MOSCOW

What Mussolini will probably regard as a successful business coup has been carried out in the signing of a trade treaty between Italy and soviet Russia, which was considered important enough to be celebrated by a commemorative banquet at Rome, where the treaty was signed, and at which the red flag of the Russians waved side by side with the Italian standard bearing the arms of the House of Savoy. While disturbed trade relation exist between the United States and Russia, Mussolini sees in this condition an opportunity for profit for Italy and has made such liberal terms that Italian credits on Moscow trade will be kept at 75 per cent; or, in other words, that only 25 per cent cash is required with orders.

Henry Ford has had business dealings with Russia, but his terms were for 75 per cent cash when he sold them $30,000,000 worth of tractors. His risk was not so great. In sales of American cotton to Russia spot cash was long the rule. On some goods Russia has demanded 100 per cent credits, but these terms have resulted in business that was infinitesimal.

Russia has great amounts of raw materials, such as oil, coal and minerals, for which a market is to be found and Italy is looked upon as a likely customer for preference because Mussolini has built up a great manufacturing nation which can supply what Russia wants in the way of tools and machinery. By the liberal terms which Mussolini is offering he hopes to make the transaction well worth while for Italy. That will be a question for the future to decide.

WHEAT FOR CORN

From the standpoint of production in the United States this year, the two chief grain crops have traveled opposite paths. Wheat yields, all varieties considered, are good, for drought conditions did not arrive until after the winter types were practically matured, and although the spring seeding will yield less than expected, the department of commerce announces that this will not seriously decrease the grand total. On the other hand, corn has so declined in condition, notably during July, that the fall harvest is forecast as the smallest since 1901.

At the beginning of August, the estimate for the wheat crop was for 821,000,000 bushels, which is about twelve million bushels under the five year average, but this discrepancy can be helped out by the largest carryover in a long period. Ordinarily the crop occupies a minor place in livestock operations, since wheat is primarily a breadstuff cereal, but in the next twelve months there may be a greatly expanded use of wheat as an animal food. According to the department of agriculture's monthly report, no corn growing area of consequence has escaped the adverse effects of dry weather and the corn harvest is placed at not more than 2,211,828,000 bushels, which is over four hundred million bushels short of last year's harvest. In addition to that there is a chance that the maximum reduction in the crop has not been reached unless saving rain come soon, according to the government agency.

Corn, unlike wheat, is a major American commodity of which the nation never has raised a big surplus over domestic needs. Exports in even bountiful seasons are usually less than one per cent. Normal feeding programmes founded upon corn will be impossible in many sections, but at the same time the demand for cereal rations for live stock is increased by the loss of pastures through drought. Solutions of the problem obviously can not be uniform in every district, yet the substitution of wheat for corn in animal feeding is an obvious and comprehensive way to relieve the situation.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Are there not points of likeness in all the manifestations of nature, whether in the material world, or in the exclusive world of man? In other words, do not human actions take on the color of their environment? As a concrete illustration of this, take the condition of our lawns as these lines are written in the early part of August. Rarely did mid-summer find them so fresh and vigorous. The lawn mower was demanded as imperatively as in May. Nature that is showing unusual vigor in her material world is likewise displaying it correspondingly in the human biceps making us equal to the demand put upon us. The self-regulating balance between supply and demand is always very close. When summer became very hot as well as dry, the force in our arms seemed to dry up as well, and this is accommodating because there is no grass on our lawns to be cut. In this way as in others, "he tempers the wind to the shorn lamb."

Is not the above realized by us in a great variety of ways? When nature is doing one of her great stunts, showing how much humidity she can hold in the air without actual precipitation, does not some of that thick sticky humidity seep through into our unfortunate brains, and we appear duller than usual? Now this, of course, is entirely unnecessary and quite humiliating to a race that has established some reputation as the "paragon of animals." It is entirely uncalled for for any practical purpose in life which already shows too much of the solid ivory. Whatever may be the explanation of this identity between man and his surroundings, it is clearly observable that when there is a parched condition without the dryness somehow gets inside of a man's head, so that the very effort to think is attended by a cracking like fire in chestnut kindlings. Now he moral to all this is: Get out into the field of new scenes and ideas and—soak up.

From the advertisement of a magazine article soon to appear, I read the following the other day: "A frail novice was at one end of a crosscut saw; the big, bury section boss was at the other end. The young novice was not making much headway, and the boss snapped out: "Pull the saw! Don't ride it!" The young fellow saw the point of the advice, made the most of it, and rose step by step until he became the chief executive of the New York Central railroad. There was much to learn in that sharp criticism: "Pull the saw! Don't ride it!" If a crosscut saw is sharp, well set and sufficiently heavy, its own weight will cut the log. It is not necessary to push the saw or bear down upon it. One has simply to pull. In this homely illustration is there not a lesson for us all? In performing the daily task, do we not throw away a lot of energy through unnecessary toil?" One difference between the professional and the amateur is that while the former uses just enough energy to do his work well, the latter threw his away.

One is fully justified in surmising whether the body of the departed soldier which tender hands and loving hearts lay away in his last resting place is the identical body that it is supposed to be. As conditions on the battle fields where the brave lads "lay their armor down" are such as to require haste, and as the system of placing markers on the graves is open to considerable criticism, there is likely to be some confusion as to who is who, for in this late day identification of the remains is all out of the question. But it matters not so long as it is somebody's brave son. This subject that was so alive at the time the World war closed is brought to the front again as we read of Gold Star Mothers making their sad pilgrimage to the old battle fields of France. A sad feature of this visitation looms up again in some of the experiences these mothers have.

There is a bit of psychology in owning real estate. The consciousness of ownership is always an incentive to improvement. The residential section of any city will compare very favorably with the tenement district. The average landlord will spend just enough money on his property to keep it up to a certain rentable figure. He is not imbued with the philosophy that "a stitch in time saves nine," but what he must do if he is to rent it. To the man who wons his property the idea is not to make it habitable but homelike. It must be more than barely comfortable, it must be beautiful. When a man buys a house he has rented for years it seems to be touched with magic. To use an expression more in vogue, it seems to have "experienced religion." At once the premises are touched with a new life. Instead of the thorn we have the fir tree, and where was once the briar we have now the myrtle tree.

The writer has heard it said that success in gardening does not depend on skill, patience and a knowledge of soils, but on a mean disposition. Of course you will say indignantly that this is a "pack of lies." Now I feel just the same as you do, or, at least, I did before it was proved to me. I said just as you are now saying: "Look at me, I am good natured; my disposition is sweet and heavenly, are not my cabbages rotund and my onions rank?" This statement however was made to me with full knowledge that my rows of corn, beans, carrots, beets and parsnips were straight and immaculate and weedless. Now the great enemies of the garden are fungi and insects. Good-natured men take these things as a part of the existing order, and go at it accordingly, but the mean man grits his teeth and slings the Paris green or pyrox to exterminate the beastly things that dare touch his garden. We of the heavenly makeup hack away at them to save the garden. Weeds dare not grow where there is a devilish disposition.

One cannot speak too frequently or strongly in regard to avoidable automobile accidents. Is there not at least authority enough in this state to cut the terrible number down? An end must be put to reckless driving! On fine days, especially Sundays every popular highway has a double procession of machines; in fact there are so many that passing the machine ahead of you is next to impossible, hence the pace of all must be taken from the slowest. Safety in these days is none too well protected by the most careful driving. Joy riders, whether intoxicated or merely careless, are increasingly a menace to the public. A collision today is likely to involve more than two machines and perhaps many lives are endangered. The day for light fines has passed. Permanent suspension of licenses of men driving when drunk would be nothing more than what they deserve.

Wednesday, August 27, will be the one hundred and tenth birthday of Prince Albert, the royal consort of Queen Victoria. His name is almost unknown to the present generation, and this is hardly surprising in view of his quiet life. He was a German and never popular in England because of his failure to master the English language, and being eclipsed by the remarkably popular manners of his oldest son, later King Edward the Seventh. But he was a power behind the throne. He was slow, heavy, shrewd, a man of good judgment and a wise counsellor to the queen. Intellectually Victoria was not a great woman, but an illustrious queen. Her moral intuitions were of greater value to the British empire than the intellectual greatness of some of her ministers. The country owes much to Prince Albert in keeping England, through his influence over the queen, from openly siding with the Confederacy. The noble Victoria hated slavery, and she listened to the wise advice of her consort. May all wives do the same who have husband worth listening to!

CAPT. GEORGE DENISON, WHOSE DESCENDANTS ORGANIZE TODAY, WAS NOTED INDIAN FIGHTER

Captain George Denison, whose descendants meet today at Pequotsepos manor, the family homestead in Mystic, to organize the George and Ann Borodell Denison society, was one of the earliest settlers of New London and subsequently of Stonington. He served under Cromwell in the parliamentary army during the English civil war which resulted in the dethronement and ultimately in the execution of King Charles I; and, returning to America, took a foremost part in the campaigns of extermination waged by the colonists against the Indians.

Captain Denison was born at Stortford, Hertfordshire, England, in 1618. At the age of 13, in company with his father William, his brothers Daniel and Edward and the Rev. John Eliot, he came to this country as passenger on the ship Lion. The Rev. John Eliot, who later won a permanent place in the country's history as apostle to the Indians, was tutor in the Denison family. William Denison, the father, was a merchant, and from the fact that he employed a tutor for his family it is inferred that he must have been a man of considerable means.

Settled First in Roxbury

The Denisons settled in Roxbury, Mass., a community from which the town of Woodstock, in Windham county, was later settled. At the age of 22 George married Bridget Thompson, daughter of "John Thompson, gentleman, of Preston, Northamptonshire, England."

After three years of wedded life she died, leaving two daughters, Sarah and Hannah, who lived to be matrons in Stonington. This was in 1643. Very shortly afterward, George Denison returned to England, enlisted under Cromwell, won distinction, was wounded at the battle of Naseby, was nursed back to health at the house of John Borodell of Cork, Ireland, who was then living in England; and upon his recovery married his nurse, Borodel's daughter Ann.

Moved to Eastern Connecticut

They returned to Roxbury, where a son John was born to them on July 14, 1646 and a daughter Ann on May 20, 1649. In 1651 he moved his family to New London; in 1654 to Stonington, where he had acquired a tract of some 500 acres lying east of Pequotsop brook. He soon became the dominant personality in the settlement. Possessing great executive ability, Captain Denison ably managed the public trusts committed to him as well as his own private affairs. On these stony acres he not only raised a numerous family—he had two children by his first wife and seven by his second—but accumulated what for those times was a large estate. In recognition of his services, his military services particularly, he received numerous land grants from the authorities, with the result that at the time of his death he owned several thousand acres in Stonington, Norwich, Windham and in Rhode Island.

He died Oct. 23, 1694, at the age of 76, and his wife Sept. 26, 1712, at 97. Both he and his wife were remarkable for magnificent personal appearance and for force of mind and character. All the traditions that have come down through the several branches of Ann Borodell Denison's descendants agree that she was also noteworthy for two other characteristics that were rare indeed in those rough times—for her ladylike manners and her skill in embroidery. Among the settlers she was commonly referred to as Lady Ann, though the claim that she had a legal right to the title is without authority.

Richard A. Wheeler, in his history of the First church of Stonington, says in part of Captain Denison:

Held Many Offices

"From 1671 to 1694 he represented Stonington for 15 sessions of the general court. He was appointed magistrate, selectman, and held almost every office in town.

"While Captain Denison was prominent and active in civil affairs, he was more distinguished in military matters. With the exception of Capt. John Mason he was the most conspicuous and daring soldier of New London county, a natural military leader, and though holding the rank of captain he often commanded expeditions against the Indians, and was always most successful when commander in chief.

"He participated in the Narragansett swamp fight in 1675 and performed prodigies of valor. As early as February following that event a series of forays were commenced against the Narragansett Indians. They were commanded by Captain Denison and Capt. James Avery. These partisan bands were composed of volunteers, regular soldiers, Pequots, Mohegans and Niantics. It was the third of these roving expeditions, begun in March and ended April 10, 1676, in which the celebrated Narragansett chieftain, Canonchet, was taken prisoner.

Commanded Ten Forays

"In June following Captain Denison commanded a company raised in New London county for Major Talcott's expedition against the Indians in Massachusetts. They went as far north as Northampton, and returned after having scoured the country far up the Connecticut river, but met with very few of the Indians. After a few days' rest the army went again in pursuit. This time they went first to the northwest of Providence, then south to Point Judith, then home through Westerly and Stonington to New London.

"After a short respite they started again, July 18, 1676, and made their way this time to Plymouth colony. They went to Taunton, from whence they returned homeward, but hearing that a large number of Indians were working their way westward making depredations as they went, they pursued and overtook them, and had a sharp and final struggle with them beyond the Housatonic, after which they returned and the men were disbanded.

"In all there were 10 of these expeditions, including the volunteer forays, under Denison and Avery. They inflicted speedy vengeance upon the Indians and broke their power forever. The remnants of the Indian tribes were gathered together and located wherever the English desired. In all these military expeditions Capt. Denison bore a conspicuous part and won for himself undying fame."

Like a Scottish Borderer

Miss Calkins, in her history of New London, says of him: 'Our early history presents no character of bolder or more active spirit than Capt. George Denison; he reminds us of the border men of Scotland." He has been described as "the Miles Standish of the settlement," though the characterisation is hardly fair, inasmuch as his military operations were conducted on a larger scale and were brought to more definitive conclusion.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sky Wall-Flowers

Mr. Editor;

Enough to make every luckless summer girl watch the night-sky to see how she does it, was Venus's 1930 social season. First, as her abject slave, she had Mercury twice in April; Jupiter in May; two at once in June, Castor and Pollux; and in July, Regulus.

And maybe she won't tell Spica, the virgin queen whom she visits August 30th, what she liked about each of those sky-lovers; Mercury and Jupiter, however, being the only two in the bunch free to call upon the queen.

How does Venus do it? Maybe because she gets plenty of beauty sleep; not one of the sky-boys being able to keep her out later than half-past-ten at night.

Stellarily yours,

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug 15—Quite likely the approach of another election day held no terrors for the Hon. Clarence Frederick Lea of Santa Rosa, California.

He came to congress first in the 65th as a democrat "having since been re-elected as nominee of both the democratic and republican parties," according to his own account of his career.

And that being the case, when he got ready to shut up shop in Washington and go home for the primaries, he did not bother about grinding out views on the tariff, veterans' legislation in mailable form for constituents.

No, sir. Lea did not bother with that. Instead he prepared a piece on a subject that has long interested him, a general revision of the American presidential election system.

For Representative Lea is agin' the electoral college method now in vogue. He dislikes presidential elections "by proxy." The college, he declares, is "pretty generally regarded by students ....as 'the one great failure' of the constitution."

A state's representation in the college equals in size its delegation in congress, that is, one elector for each senator and member of the house.

"A little state has the same number of senators as a big state," says Lea. "Therefore the little states have an advantage over the big states in proportion to population. The 32 little states have an advantage of 56 electoral votes over the ten big states in electing a president."

It is worse than that, as Lea sees it.

Since a bare majority of the popular vote in any state throws the electoral college delegation complete to the presidential candidate winning that majority, the minority voters get no recognition whatever, he contends.

"New York cast 2,100,000 votes for Smith and 2,200,000 for Hoover," Lea points out. "The whole 45 electoral votes of New York were counted for Hoover. Massachusetts cast 49 per cent of its vote for Hoover and 50 per cent for Smith. The entire 18 electoral votes of Massachusetts were cast for Smith."

Probably not because he expects anything to come of it but just because he likes to figure it out, Lea has long had pending a proposed constitutional change which would split the electoral votes for president in any state among rival candidates in proportion to their popular vote.

It is a novel and revolutionary plan. If you take it back over old elections there would have been some very great changes in American political history.

"But let us have fair rules for our greatest game," says Representative Lea.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Black Pussy Is Too Late

By Thornton Burgess

'Tis hard to hunt and wat and wait
And then discover you're too late.
—Black Pussy.

Black Pussy was out hunting. Black Pussy dearly loves to hunt. It isn't that she needs food. She doesn't. No cat was ever better fed than Black Pussy. She hunts for the sheer love of hunting. Every day she goes hunting. Sometimes she hunts mice; sometime she hunts birds; sometimes she hunts squirrels. This morning she was hunting chipmunks. Yes sir, she was hunting chipmunks. She knew that Striped Chipmunk and Mrs. Chipmunk had raised a family. That meant that there were several chipmunks living along the old stone wall.

"It ought not to be difficult to catch one of those young chipmunks," though Black Pussy. "They haven't had time to become as wise as their father and mother. I suppose they can move just as quickly, but an old hunter like me ought to be able to surprise one or two of them."

So Black Pussy stole along the top of the old stone wall. Every few steps she crouched and looked ahead; and all the time the tip of her tail was moving back and forth, back and forth. Once she thought she saw a chipmunk disappear between the stones of the old wall just ahead of her. She moved quickly to that place and there she crouched ready to spring should that chipmunk come out where it went in. But, though Black Pussy was very, very patient, it was all in vain.

Now, as she crouched there, Black Pussy noticed a little black lump on a stone of the old wall only a little distance from her. It looked like a lump of coal. That is, it was as black as a lump of coal. Black Pussy didn't pay any particular attention to it. She merely wondered where that black thing had come from and why she had never seen it before. Then she centered her attention on the place where she thought she had seen a chipmunk go in. Black Pussy's patience was wasted. No chipmunk reappeared. Finally Black Pussy got to her feet and began to move along the top of the old wall. She moved stealthily, as is the way of a cat, but she saw nothing to interest her especially. Just ahead of her was the little black lump on one of the stones of the old wall. It was right where Black Pussy had first noticed it. She paid no particular attention to it. She was within easy jumping distance of it when that little black lump suddenly came to life and something black disappeared down in the old wall. Just too late Black Pussy realized that something alive had fooled her; but what it was she didn't know.

Now, Impy the black chipmunk—for of course it was Imp—had seen Black Pussy all the time. He had sat there perfectly still, pretending to be a black stone or a piece of coal. All the time he was learning. He was studying Black Pussy. Striped Chipmunk had warned him about her. So he had known who she was as soon as he saw hed. Now he knew how she hunted.

"I've fooled her," chuckled Impy. "She was hunting for a chipmunk all right, but she didn't know this one when she saw it. I've learned one thing anyway."

"What is that?" asked his father, Striped Chipmunk

"What is that?" asked his father, Striped Chipmunk.

Impy chuckled again. "I've learned," said he, "that the most foolish thing a chipmunk can do, when he knows an enemy has seen him, is to put his head out of the same hole that he goes into. I dare say that Black Pussy is watching for me right now and, if I should poke my head out where I came in, she would catch me."

"Right!" said Striped Chipmunk approvingly. "Quite right, my son. You are learning fast. Now we'll go see what Black Pussy is doing."

YOUR HEALTH

Constipation

By Dr. John E Cannaday,
Charleston, W. Va.
From Gorgas Memorial Institute,
Washington, D. C.

In the normal life of man as an animal living out of doors and getting abundant exercise in the course of hunting, warfare, games, eating coarse food, constipation is probably relatively unknown. There are two main causes of intestinal stasis or constipation; sedentary occupation, probably coming first, secondly, concentrated diet.

With regard to counteracting constipation by diet and exercise, the following methods are found to be of practical value: Vigorous, active out-of-door exercise for several hours each day. Several types of exercise are probably better than depending on any one method—swimming, walking—preferably hill and mountain climbing, horseback riding, gardening.

As to diet, coarse food is absolutely necessary. Wheat bran or granular sugar, taken in quantities of not less than four heaping tablespoon fulls per day—many cases will require twice that amount, buttermilk—an abundance of fruit, berries of all sorts, kale and mustard, dandelion and other greens, sauer kraut, should all be eaten liberally and routinely. Rhubarb is of particular value and is a natural non-irritating laxative. Hard apples—fully ripe apples are apparently not very effective. Peaches are particularly laxative especially when eaten with the skins on likewise plums. Green corn on the cob, cabbage, broccoli and cauliflower in liberal amounts. With reference to apples for laxative purposes, it must not be expected that eating one or two apples a day will have much effect. Six or eight would probably be a minimum. Many people seem to have the impression that indoor physical exertion such as "setting up" exercises will suffice; this is not nearly so effective as out-of-door exercise, preferably taken sometime during daylight hours. It is well known of course that vigorous exercise should not be taken immediately after meals.

The perfectly normal individual probably has a bowel movement each meal. I have observed that when the normal fecal column has been established and the requisites of diet and exercise have been fulfilled, about three daily bowel evacuations becomes the usual routine, likewise the stools improve in character and become less offensive.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Flying Down to Rio.

"We made moving pictures of our own shadow on the clouds below, as we climbed high over Victoria and flew south for Rio. For you can go 'Rolling Down to Rio' now on big ferry boats of the sky, giant seaplanes that ply between the two Americas," writes Frederick Simpich, National Geographic Society correspondent with the party surveying air routes from Washington to Buenos Aires.

"Skimming low to see the country, we came to the vast plantations on the rich, green plains about Campos. Horses and cattle by thousands grazed there; many herds stampeded when we roared a few yards above them. Peons, cutting sugar cane and loading it on big ox carts, waved their machetes at us. Over muddy roads plodding ox-teams hauled the heavy cane carts to the smoking sugar mill, or 'central,' as it is known to all the world's cane workers. Field overseers in white suits sat about on sleek saddle horses.

"On our whole flight from Washington, no stretch of scenery has been more graphic and absorbing. It was like a 100-mile panel or mural of 'Country Life in Brazil,' with farm folk gardening, feeding pigs, chopping wood, milking, or loafing. Children were at play, one group with a goat harnessed to a little wagon; at every farmhouse chickens ran for cover, thinking us a big hawk.

"Then it rained. Water fell all about us. It shut out a world-famed view we had waited for—the flock of odd, queer-shaped mountain rocks about Rio. These are a curiosity. They look almost artificial, as though on the earth, yet not of it. You fancy that some big David or another planet used his sling to hurl these boulders through space at our world, with Rio as his bull's eye.

"When a hole of light showed ahead, Pilot Hawkins gave the big Nybra plane 'all the motors had,' and we fairly raced for that cloud break. And there was Rio, overcast, but visible, with its famous mountain, The Finger of God, reaching up and poking into low clouds.

"From the air you see Rio, not as one big city unit like Chicago: a big city, yes—with more than 1,500,000 but broken into kaleidoscopic parts that are tucked into valleys, set on points of land, spread in the graceful bends of beautiful blue bays, or clinging like Tibetan monasteries to steep, wooded hills. And boldly, split straight through the immense, opulent city, runs the famous Avenida Rio Branco. It is Rio's main artery now. Few other cities on earth would have equal municipal courage to let engineers do what Rio let them do. 'You need a long, fine wide avenue right through your crowded city,' the planners said. Rio answered 'O. K.' and they tore down hundreds of buildings, and now here is Rio Branco, a new Fifth avenue, a Champs Elysees. Still feeling its growing pains, you see workmen dynamiting rocky hills away to make building lots or extend boulevards, or washing away giant clay banks with hydraulic streams, as in Seattle boom days.

"Scenically, architecturally, Rio startles you with its theatrical character. From my hotel window the sky line looks like a string of fantastic palaces at some world fair. And the long waterfront is unique. No dirty docks, smelly warehouses, ramshackle wharf cafes and sailors' boarding houses. Instead, you ride from the dignified American embassy at one end of a glittering bay-front boulevard around to a race course at the other, with club buildings graceful as ancient temples in Egypt.

"Like a colossal firefly an illuminated aerial tram car crawls up its cable, carrying sightseers to view glittering Rio at night, from the peak of Sugar Loaf Mountain. High up along the top of an old Roman-like aqueduct, which brought city water in Portuguese days, a street car line now rumbles, and hordes of democratic Brazilians ride the street cars for the sheer pleasure of seeing their home town. Highways, smooth and hard, wind into surrounding hills, to give breath-taking views of the far-flung city and its majestic island-studded bay; atop one peak is risen a heroic stone figure of Christ, with arms outstretched over Rio.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

THE BIBLE

Every scripture inspired of God is also profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction which is in righteousness; that the man of God may be complete, furnished completely unto every good work, 2 Tim. III, 16, 17. The Bible has proved profitable for teaching in all ages. It gives us the loftiest teaching concerning the loftiest life and how to live that life. Here we find the highest ideal of life, a wonderful picture of the ideal life. A clear picture of what each life might be and should be. It unfolds to me the wonderful glories of the time life.

We must first get a vision from the pages of God and His plan for life. We must read slowly and prayerfully to get the vision pictured so beautifully by the master artist. We must gaze on His holiness until we are dazzled by its greatness. We must gaze on His Grace love and majesty until our souls overflow with love, and the glory of the creator We see the glory pictured in the lives of those who study this book until it becomes a part of themselves. We must follow the glory through Gethsemane, to Calvary, to Oliver to the throne; follow it slowly and reverently until we realize what it means in our life. How many of us are fashioning our lives by this book. Making it a part of our very being. Living ever in its glorious sunlight. None can feed on the sacred word without having their lives transformed as they get a vision of their Lord and Master. We can put our mind to a greater use than to study its pages and make them a part of our very life. That we may have a clear vision of what our life may be if filled with the word.

The Bible is truly the gateway of entrance to all that is best in this life and to the glorious life after this. It occupies the place of the sun in our inner life that that body has in relation to life on the physical side. Our lives are dark and hopeless without this divine light from the sacred pages as this world would be dark and life less without the sun. Christ is the true and only light that never wavers. So may we make Him the light of our lives.

Stories That Recall Others

Salesproof

A woman went to a hat shop to buy a hat.

The twentieth or thirtieth hat she tried on was very nice and the saleswoman said:

"Splendid! That hat makes you look ten years younger."

"I don't want it, then, of course," said the lady.

"Good gracious! But why not, madam?"

"Because when I took it off I'd look ten years older."

When Betsey visited the zoo, the first sight that greeted her eyes was the white peacock, strutting in snowy splendor, trailing a magnificent lacy tail. "Oh," she exclaimed breathlessly, "look, mother, there's the queen of all the chickens!"

Milo, Me., has a pair of Siamese maple trees. Two maples about seven feet apart and each seven inches in diemeter grow to a height of about twenty feet, where they join in a single trunk. As far as is known, this is a natural growth.

CORONER MCKAY HOLDS FORMAL INQUEST INTO DOUBLE MURDER

At the formal inquest into the double slaying at Mystic Saturday last of Mrs. Eva Roberts and Ole Ostberg by Stanley S. Bogue, 16 persons were under examination Friday by Coroner Edward G. McKay. The inquest was held at the Groton police station. Among those summoned to the hearing were Bogue, David Roberts, husband of the slain woman, and James Collins, who lodged with Roberts.

Roberts and Collins have been held in jail since the murder as material witnesses. Among others summoned to testify were State Trooper Arthur Whitmarsh who arrested the confessed murderer, Trooper Peter Busch, Dr. Benjamin, owner of the farm on which the double crime was committed; Raymond Jennings, son of Mrs. Roberts by a previous marriage; two of the woman's daughters, and others who reside in the vicinity of the murder house and were in a position to have knowledge of Bogue's relations with both of his victims.

Handcuffed to Troopers Busch and Whitmarsh, Bogue was taken Friday afternoon from jail, where he has been held since the murder without bonds, to the Groton police station for questioning. He seemed little concerned with the proceedings, while waiting to be questioned by the coroner and has yet to express any remorse over his terrible deed.

Prosecuting Attorney Harry Brogan of the Groton town court was sitting with Coroner McKay during the inquest, so that he might obtain a first hand recital of the evidence which he will be required to present in arraigning Bogue for preliminary trial on the murder charge. The coroner said Friday afternoon that he would complete the inquest by this (Saturday) forenoon at the latest and would be in a position to submit a finding early next week.

WILLIMANTIC CAMP MEETING OPENS TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC CAMPGROUNDS, Aug. 15—The Willimantic camp meet which opens its program at the old camp ground Saturday evening is now 70 years of age. At the first meeting held in 1860, there were about 50 tents on the ground which were increased to 70 the following year.

The first permanent building was erected there in 1864. After that the old cloth tents were gradually displaced by wooden structures until many years ago the last of these had disappeared.

The history of this camp meeting, if it were written, would doubtless prove very interesting reading. Through all the years that have passed since its opening, it has held a high place among the many camp meetings held throughout the country.

The program offered this year will rank with the best ever offered to a gathering of its kind.

The morning periods will be given to a summer school of religious instruction which will conform to the standards of the board of education of the Methodist Episcopal church and of the International Council of Religious Education. The "Dean" in charge of this work will be Rev. J. S. Pennepacker, Niantic. The following courses will be offered: New Testament, Dr. John R. Cheney, Middletown; The Teaching Work of the Church, Rev. R. J. Chrystie, Mystic; Kindergarten Materials and Methods, Miss Elizabeth Barnes, Boston; primary Materials and Methods, Miss Marenda Prentis, Boston; Junior Materials and Methods, Mrs. Roland J. Martin, Washington; Adolescent Materials and Methods, Rev. Kenneth Holmes, East Blackstone; Missionary Materials and Methods, Rev. Duncan Dodd, Windsor; Christian Life Problems, Rev. John Manly Shaw, Baltic; Mrs. J. M. Shaw, Registrar and Director of Music.

Rev W. F Anderson, Resident Bishop of the Boston Area, will be the preacher, Monday afternoon. Rev. George Hugh Birney, D. D. of Cleveland, Ohio, a preacher and evangelist of note will be present throughout the week speaking every week-day morning at 11 on a series of topics bearing on the Holy Spirit and preaching every evening (including both Sunday evenings) except Thursday and Saturday evenings.

Justin Lawrie, noted tenor, New York city, who has delighted the audiences here for the past two years will be the musical director and soloist again this year.

Other features will be mentioned from day to day.

Rev. Myron E. Genter, who as superintendent of the Norwich District is also the president of the camp meeting, has been very successful in his leadership of this annual gathering. This is his sixth year and in harmony with the time limit of six years which governs his term of office, it will be the last meeting under his superintendency.

A sense of sadness gathers around the camp meeting each year in the fact that some among the prominent leaders and supporters have finished their earthly course and will not be seen here again.

This year has been no exception and probably no man will be more greatly missed on these grounds than the late Rev. Frederic C. Baker. He had a cottage here for many years and had filled several important positions in the government of the Camp Meeting. At his death which took place in July, he was chairman of the Assessors, Chairman of the Boarding House Committee, a member of the Executive Committee, and Collector of Ground Rents.

Another who will be greatly missed is Mrs. Ellen Brownell of Hartford and formerly of Quarryville, who died during the winter. She has had a cottage here many years and has been very active in work among young people and a valued helper in many ways.

The Tri-County W. C. T. U. Gold Medal Contest will be held Saturday afternoon in the Tabernacle at 2 o'clock.

An attractive program will be presented in the Tabernacle, Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock, in which Miss Pauline Mayo, specialist in church, college, school and club programs, of New York city, will appear for several readings and Mr. Curtis M. Saulsbury, Connecticut Tenor Soloist of New Haven, will present an unusual program of Negro Spirituals, Gospel Songs, oratorios, etc.

Sunday (August 17) Rev. Dr. L. O. Hartman, the Editor of Zion's Herald, Boston, will be the preacher at the morning service at 10:30. At 3 p. m. the Rev. T. A. Moseley of Stafford Springs will preach. At 7:30 p. m., Rev. George Hugh Birney will give the first in his series of evening discourses his subject being God's Harp With a Trillion Strings.

The boarding house this year will be under the management of M. G. and L. H. Meyehardt, Willimantic.

Recreational activities will be in charge of J. Scott Pennepacker, Mrs. W. J. Stephens, and J. M. Shaw.

The camp meeting office will be located in the Epworth League House, next to the Tabernacle, with Mrs. W. J. Stephens in charge to assist with information as needed.

The book table, with a display of books furnished by a Methodist Book concern, will be in charge of the Rev. Clinton E. Bromley of Myricks, Mass.

HEBRON RECTOR KILLED BY HIT AND RUN DRIVER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 15—Rev. Theodore B. Martin, 73, rector emeritus of St. Peter's church at Hebron, died at St. Joseph's hospital about ten o'clock tonight from injuries inflicted by a hit and run driver in Hebron about an hour earlier. Rev. Mr. Martin had been calling at the home of Randall Tennant on the Amston road in Hebron. He had left the house but a very few minutes when he was found in the road opposite the Tennant house by Emil German of Hebron.

The injured man was rushed to St. Joseph's hospital by Mario Fracchia and Miss Clara Pendleton. An examination by Dr. J. Girouard revealed a badly lacerated scalp, crushed left hand, seven wounds in the thigh compound fracture of both legs, severing the tendons from the body and multiple bruises on the face and forehead.

The retired clergyman was conscious on arrival at the hospital. A search by state police and Deputy Sheriff Harvey S. Collins of Columbia was immediately instituted for the driver of the car.

One clue was a registration number 112,727, which was found to be for a 1925 Ford coupe owned by Joseph V. Biondi of Smith street. East Hampton. After checking the number with Lieut Edward P. Leahy of the local police state police left at once for East Hampton.

Rev. Mr. Martin commanded a host of friends throughout this section and in many cities in New England. He was a native of New York city where he graduated from the General Theological seminary. He held a pastorate in Worcester for some years and was rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church at Hebron for 21 years, retiring about a year ago when he was made rector-emeritus. He was known as a musician, having directed many choruses and composed several selections.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Josephine Martin; a daughter, Miss Marjorie of Dalton, Mass.; a son, Horace D. Martin, Melchotises, La., and a sister, Mrs. Irving G. Will of Herkimer, N. Y.

The Geography of Freakish Weather

What are the outstanding effects of unusual weather?

Ask ten persons that question and most of them will be found to emphasize personal discomfort and health effects, says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society. But behind the fact that a hot spell may cause millions to swelter, or that a local flood may force hundreds of motorists to make an annoying detour, there are many fundamental economic and social effects that flow from unusual weather, the bulletin points out.

"Droughts are probably the most obvious of the weather forces that affect economic conditions," continues the bulletin. "A sufficiently prolonged dry spell in the United States in Argentina, or in Canada or Australia during the crucial season, can not only start the price of grain soaring locally, but it can send world prices up. Similarly, generous showers that provide maximum growing conditions in the cotton fields of Texas, or dry, hot winds that sear and stunt billions of plants in a few days depress or raise the cotton quotations in Liverpool as quickly as the weather news can be flashed there. Extreme droughts, too, can cause millions of dollars' loss in destroyed crops and starved live stock.

"An unexpected freeze-up on the Great Lakes two weeks ahead of time may cause hundreds of thousands of dollars of loss in trapped boats and unmoved cargoes. A single extraordinary blizzard in a great city can throw a painful strain on the municipal treasury and can reduce unemployment over night.

"City budgets are continually feeling the heavy hand of weather vagaries. Wind storms which blow down shade trees may cost a municipality thousands of dollars for debris removal. Rain storms and floods wash up paving and clog sewer mains. Summer droughts and hot periods increase tremendously the use of water, necessitating extra pumping. Water shortages develop in many cities so that rationing becomes necessary, along with extra police activity to enforce the restrictions. Some American cities are fortunate enough to have unlimited supplies of water close at hand, and to be wholly independent of weather changes. Even the worst of known droughts could not reduce the supplies of St. Louis and New Orleans, taken from the Mississippi River; or those of Milwaukee, Cleveland, Buffalo and Chicago, taken from the Great Lakes. The question of limiting the amount of Lake Michigan water taken by Chicago hinges not on the city water supply, but on waters taken from the lake by the Chicago Drainage Canal.

"Cities which do not have a large supply of water close at hand, but which have made themselves independent of weather by artificially taking veritable mountain ranges into their watersheds, include New York City with its conduits to the Catskills; San Francisco, with its supply from the moutains above Yosemite Valley; and Los Angeles, which has reached out 250 miles to bring its water across deserts and mountains from the high Sierras.

"Corporations, too, feel the economic effects of abnormal weather. Railways in certain regions must operate expensive snow plows in winter and must bear the expense of replacing bridges and tracks washed out by spring floods. Telegraph and telephone companies may lose hundreds of miles of wire and thousands of dollars by a single ice storm. Droughts steal away the potential power of hydro-electric plants and entail the switching in of expensive coal-burning generating stations. In the western and southern oil fields abnormally dry weather may cause stoppage of drilling in scores of wells or may greatly increase the expense of continuing operations. Timber corporations lose heavily by the forest fires that sweep huge areas during dry spells.

"Abnormal weather conditions temporarily change the habits of millions of people. Extremely hot days and nights reduce the patronage of ordinary indoor amusement places and crowd those artificially cooled. Hundreds of thousands of people turn to outdoor pastimes that involve little activity, such as miniature golf courses and night baseball. Other hundreds of thousands within reach of beaches and swimming pools crowd to them, diverting large expenditures from city theatres, restaurants, grocery and delicatessen stores, to the lunch counters, amusement booths and novelty stores of the resorts."

NO TROUBLE AT ALL NOW

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Has Benefited This Woman

Millions today are eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—guaranteed to relieve both temporary and recurring constipation.

The cause of constipation is the lack of roughage in food. Add sufficient roughage and constipation disappears. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is nearly all roughage.

Here is a letter from Mrs. H. Gilbert, 107 E. Knight Ave., Collingswood, N. J., which will be interesting to many sufferers:

"I had a very serious operation in October and when I came from the hospital my main trouble was constipation. One day I said to the doctor, 'I am going to eat ALL-BRAN,' and since I started I have no trouble whatever. So you see I can't praise it enough and am always telling my friends what it did for me."

You will enjoy the nut-like flavor of this delicious, ready-to-eat cereal. It is rich in iron, and when eaten with milk or fruit juices, adds important vitamins to the diet.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is an essential in any reducing diet. It means every-day health to people all over the world. Your grocer has it in the red-and-green package. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

IDEALS CLASH WITH THERMOS SUNDAY IN SECOND GAME OF SERIES

The Thermos and the Ideals will be at it again on Sunday. Not satisfied with the 8 to 5 drubbing administered them last Sunday by the Ideals they are out for revenge. Manager Driscoll, co-pilot of the Thermos destinies along with Bill Hastedt, says that one victory doesn't mean a champion anymore than one swallow quenches a burning thirst. Mr. Driscoll claims that he will have a real club in the field for Sunday and that he will most positively even the series in this game. Which, of course, remains to be seen.

Tony Bernard of the Ideals is equally as emphatic in his avowal that the Ideals have shown their superiority over the Thermos on two occasions and that they can do it for the third time. Tony will use his regular lineup but will have Vachon, one of the leading pitchers of the Jewett City league as a member of his hurling staff. He says that he is undecided as to whether he will use Shaw, who beat the Bottlers last week, or the newcomer on the mound.

As for the pitching choice of the Thermos club Manager Driscoll says that it all depends on whether Nickerson pitches for the Riverview club today or not. If Nickerson pitches today Kotch will probably toe the rubber for the Bottlers.

If the Ideals win Sunday's contest Tony Bernard expects to hurl a challenge to any of the other City league teams, especially the Polish Citizens who are now topping the loop. He also is contemplating issuing a challenge to other clubs in the eastern part of the state, especially those of the various twilight leagues.

Sunday's game will be conducted under the able umpiring of Hank Morin and Tommy Sixcox without the aid of any arbitration board rules. There is some doubt as to whether Hank will be able to umpire or not as the chunky umpire assumed the role of player in an exhibition game last night and may not be fully recovered from the effects of trying to stop throws with his head. However, it may work just the other way, if you know what I mean.

SHARKEY SIGNED TO BOX CAMPOLO ON SEPT. 25TH

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—(AP)— The signing of Jack Sharkey, Boston heavyweight, and Victorio Campolo of Argentine, for a 15-round bout at the Yankee stadium, September 25, was announced today by the Madison Square Garden corporation.

The signing of Sharkey and Campolo came as a surprise to the boxing world as the management of the Boston sailor had been considering a September bout with Primo Carnera in Chicago. As a result Mique Malloy, Chicago promoter, will have to look elsewhere for an opponent for the man mountain of Europe.

The negotiations for Sharkey's services came to an end when both the Garden officials and the American heavyweight's manager found that Sharkey was under contract to fight once more for the Garden corporation. Campolo has been under contract to the Garden for nearly a year. No announcement of the financial terms under which the two heavyweights will fight was made public.

EIGHT AMATEUR BOUTS AT DANIELSON ON TUESDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Aug. 15.—Another of the series of summer boxing shows arranged by Louis Peloquin is to be given at the North street open air arena here next Tuesday evening. For this affair Mr. Peloquin has gathered a group of fighters who fight. Some of them are Connecticut boys, some are from Rhode Island, some from Massachusetts.

In every match care has been taken to get together well balanced pairs, a precaution that seemingly assures plenty of action.

Normand Lasch, a Danielson boy, will appear in the opening match against Young Smelzy of Jewett City, 104-pound class. Lasch has been in training for the past six months at the Peloquin gymnasium and has developed fast. Kid Brouillard of Danielson will be in there again, this time against Paul Jones, a Worcester 100-pounder.

Anselm Bernier, another Danielson boy, will meet Kid Bagger of Moosup, and Kid Tourney, the Webster boy who has yet to lose a fight in Danielson, will be facing tough opposition when he climbs into the ring with K. O. Marion of Jewett City, in the 115-pound class.

Buster Miller of Jewett City will have his work cut out for him when he faces Kid Laframboise of Canterbury, at 160 pounds. Both these boys are hard hitters.

Kid Frisco of Webster, winner of two previous bouts here, will have Mickey Tenzar of Jewett City for an opponent, this in the 170-pound class.

Other bouts on the card will be between Ray Landry of Danielson and Kid Plasse of Webster; Benny Salanski of Jewett City and Kid Casavant of Oxford; Willie Thibeault of Danielson and Kid Durant of Southbridge.

Russell Martin, hard hitting Webster boy, is matched for this card with Tony Marino of Millbury, but it is not certain as yet whether Marino will appear because of the fact that on Thursday next he is taking part in a tournament at Fitchburg, and may not wish to risk injury by appearing here two nights before. However, if Marino shows up here the bout will go on. In case of rain the bouts will be held next Wednesday evening.

IMPROMPTU GAME GIVES THE FANS A LAUGH

A good time was had by all at the Academy campus last night despite the fact that there was no regular City league game. The Cits and Ideals were booked to play but the Ideals failed to make an appearance being under the impression that the grounds were unfit to play on.

Rather than disappoint a gathering of nearly 500 followers, a pick-up team, called the Shannigans for want of a better title, played the Citizens and—well—they had a lot of fun. Inasmuch as the scorekeeper took an active part in the activities of the Shannigans there was no record kept of the official count, but, it is understood that it was close.

The line-up of the Shannigans was as follows: Matthews, c; Earl Brigham, p; Hank Morin, 1b; Mickey Breen, 2b; Gil Kampf, ss; Butsy Weisgraber, 3b; Al Bliven, (league president), lf; Abugal, cf; James Vincent Pedace, rf.

The feature of the game was the base running of Hank Morin and the umpiring of Bill Hastedt.

LOTT NOT TO TRY FOR DAVIS CUP TEAM IN 1921

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 15—(AP)—George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago, who has shared the Davis cup singles assignment with Bill Tilden against the French for the last two seasons, said today he would not try out for the team next year.

Lott plans to enter the advertising business at the conclusion of this season's play and feels that he would no longer be able to spare the time needed for international campaigning.

The Chicago star, now practising here for the Newport, R. I., invitation tournament next week, is ranked fourth among American players.

BENEFIT GAME FOR ECCLESTON TODAY

Fans and players alike will give Enos Eccleston his "break" this afternoon when they congregate at the state hospital grounds for the much advertised benefit game. A team of players from the Norwich City league, operating as the Masked Marvels will meet the Riverview nine in a regulation game and the entire proceeds of the affair will be contributed to Eccy.

Eccleston, one of the most popular ball players ever turned out in the city, it will be remembered, broke his leg during a baseball game at the hospital about a month ago. Since, he has been forced to lay in bed and get all of his baseball out of a newspaper and his living as best he can. In addition to playing with Riverview, Eccy worked behind the bat for the Thermos Bottlers in the Norwich City league.

Always ready to do its share for its injured the City league banded together a collection of its best boys and offered to meet the hospitalmen. Equally as ready to pitch in, the latter readily accepted and the game was arranged. All that remains now is have it played. To date Riverview has had pretty easy sailing but judging from the looks of the lineup that will turn out for the opposition this afternoon its work is cut out this time. Dan Driscoll and Bill Hastedt, Bottler pilots, who are heading the City league representation, have banded together the following array of ball tossers: Jimmy Murphy and Jab Burns, catchers; Johnny Greene, Lefty Lucier, Peter Finn and Eddie Nevins, pitchers; Couillard, first base; Hal Cummings, second base; Carlie Krauss, short stop; Nap Liberty, third base; Lloyd Jarvis, Gil Kampf and one of the idle pitchers in the outfield.

ENOS ECCLESTON

As an added attraction the Rotary Boys band, one of the best of its kind in the vicinity, will provide music before and during the game. The game will start at 3 o'clock (d.s.t.), and, as previously mentioned, everything goes to Eccleston.

STONEHAM INCREASES HIS HOLDINGS IN N. Y. GIANTS

NEW YORK, Aug. 15—(AP)—Charles A. Stoneham, president of the New York Giants, announced today that instead of preparing to dispose of his stock in the National league baseball club he has increased his holdings.

Following announcement yesterday that J. Henry McNally, New York contractor, had purchased the stock of William F. Kenny, amounting to 20 per cent, and by other purchases increased his holdings to approximately 30 per cent, stories persisted that McNally would seek to gain control.

In a joint statement today Stoneham and John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants, declared McNally could not have purchased the 20 per cent stock held by Kenny, as Stoneham had purchased from Francis McQuade, approximately 10 per cent of the Kenny stock.

Stoneham was understood to control 51 per cent of the club's stock and the latest purchase would give him 61 per cent. The total issue of stock is 12,500 shares.

The Stoneham-McGraw statement added that the purchase by McNally, if made, would in no way affect either the business management of the corporation or the management of the team.

The presence of Manager McGraw in New York, while his team is in the thick of the pennant fight in the west, has caused much speculation. Today's statement said that McGraw was in New York on personal business which had no relation to the purchase or sale of the ball club.

Leo J. Bondy, Stoneham's attorney and himself treasurer of the club, declared rumors that Stoneham's stock was for sale to be without foundation.

FAST GAME WHEN SHYMAS AND LEGION CLASH TODAY

The American Legion Srs. baseball team of Taftville will clash with the Shyma club at the Providence street grounds in the second game of their series. The game is bound to be a hummer. It is expected to be a repitition of the first game in thrills, which the Shymas won, 2 to 1. The Legionaires have strengthened with Perry of the Holy Name team of Jewett City and Murphy, to bolster their lineup. It may develop into a pitching battle between the two brothers, Pete Raymond of the Legion and Sammy Raymond of the Shymas.

The management of the Legion team has the following men slated to take the field and feel that they can even up the series; Murphy lf, Breen, one of the leading hitters of the N. F. A. team last year, 3b; Perry, considered the Babe Ruth of the town, 1b; Pit Martin, 2b, Sydlo c, Wolkowski cf, Paradis of Assumption college lf, Hack Pepin of N. F. A. and now with the Army and Navy club, ss; Liberty rf, Gaudette and Adams, substitutes.

Manager Phaneuf of the Shymas will use his regular lineup, which has only lost four games in 25, this season. Their lineup follows: Niewicz 3b, Bunk ss, Wilk 3b, Lemieux 2b, J. Raymond and Benoit and Dudek in the outfield, Burrelle or Borden c, S. Raymond, who has not been defeated this year, p. Faucher will be ready for relief mound work.

THINKS BEQUEST WILL NOT AFFECT AMATEUR STANDING

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 15—(AP)— Roscoe Maples, president of the California Tennis association, said today he is unable to see, after a casual study and without precedents for guidance, how former Senator James D. Phelan's $20,000 gift to Helen Wills Moody "could possibly affect her amateur tennis standing."

Although it was his understanding the will gave as the reason for the gift "that she brought the tennis championship to California," Mr. Maples said, "after all it was just a gift from one Californian to another, proud of honor done the state," and an act of friendship.

"Senator Phelan," Maples said, "did fine work on behalf of children's play grounds in San Francisco. He was interested in inspiring interest in tennis among the children. Mrs. Moody's fine example and help to this end always gratified him. I am not surprised that he has left her something in his will. It is characteristic of the man and couldn't be, it seems to me, construed as anything except an acknowlegment of his appreciation, a well-merited reward for unselfish service, and a friendly act of a personal nature."

Baltic vs. Fitchville

Sunday at Sayles field, Baltic, the strong Fitchville baseball club who defeated Colchester last Sunday, will play the Baltic Sacs. Fitchville have a win over Baltic when they played in Fitchville some weeks ago and the Sacs are out to even up. The Sacs have put in two hard practice games this week defeating the Firemen Monday in a twilight game 10 to 9, and losing to the Firemen Wednesday night 12 to 11. The feature of last Wednesday's game was Stefon for the Firemen, who came to bat with 3 men on and made a basehit and cleaned the bases and won the game.

DANNY TAYLOR'S BAT PUTS CUBS TWO GAMES AHEAD OF BROOKLYN

By WILLIAM WEEKES
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—(AP) — Young Danny Taylor's second double of the afternoon off old Adolfo Luque in the tenth inning of another dramatic battle, today hoisted the Cubs to a 4 to 3 victory over Brooklyn's desperate Robins.

The blow, a solid smash to right field for which Babe Herman made a brilliant but vain attempt, scored Woody English from second base and proved a staggering punch on the collective Brooklyn chin. It gave the National league champions three victories in the four game series, and was their fourteenth triumph out of 19 games this season, along with moving them two full precious games ahead of the Flatbush clan in the standing.

The contest had been a thrilling pitching battle between Luque and Charlie Root, one which kept an overflow throng of nearly 45,000 spectators in constant uproar.

After the first inning, and until the ninth when Brooklyn tied the score to send the game into extra innings, Root pitched almost perfect baseball, and any little slips by the Cub righthander were more than offset by a defense through which it would have been almost impossible to toss a handful of birdshot. Double plays jerked Root out of trouble of his own making when he walked two men in the fourth and spoiled another Robin drive in the sixth.

The prize catch of the game came in the Robins' half of the tenth and was produced by Kiki Cuyler on blistering Babe Herman's tremendous smash to right center. Cuyler raced from near the right field foul line clear into Hack Wilson's territory to snare the drive, which looked labelled for three bases.

The Cubs were smothered until the fifth when three doubles into the crowd squeezed out one run. Danny Taylor started the inning with his first double and raced home on a hit of the same proportions by Grimm. Grimm was caught at third on Farrell's grounder but Root punched another "crowd" double into left field. Ground rules, however, held Farrell at third and Blair was thrown out.

The National league champions tied the score in the sixth on a double by Cuyler and a single by this same Danny Taylor.

Root held Brooklyn until the ninth when Ike Boone, batting for Rube Bressler, doubled to center and a single by another pinch batsman, Harvey Hendrick, who appeared for Glenn Wright.

Taylor, who was sent out yesterday to play left field in place of Riggs Stephenson, failed to do much Thursday, but had a carnival today. His first double was turned into a run, and his single sent Cuyler in with the tieing run, while his last smash sounded taps for the Robins' hopes of gaining an even break in the series.

Babe Herman found Root nothing like the other Cub pitchers who worked in the series. Root fanned him the first two times he came up, and forced him to roll out to Blair on two other occasions. Root gave the Robins only eight hits in ten innings and fanned four men. Luque gave up only one hit in the first four innings, but was socked for eleven more in the next five and two-thirds sessions.

Brooklyn left Chicago to open a long series against Pittsburgh while Marse Joe McCarthy and his Cubs prepared to play a five-game set with the Phillies. Two games will be played tomorrow with Bud Teachout and Bob Osborn the likely Chicago pitching choices.

CARDS MAKE IT THREE IN FOUR FROM BRAVES

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 15—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals made it three out of four over the Boston Braves by taking the fourth game here this afternoon 8 to 4, as Jesse Haines worked well on the mound for the Cardinals.

Chick Hafey hit his 22nd home run and George Watkins playing first base in the absence of Jim Bottomley with an injured hand, also drove for the circuit.

The Red Birds drove their former team mate, Fred Frankhouse, out of the box in the fourth inning but not before he had permitted enough scores to take the blame for the loss.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 15—(AP)—Pittsburgh and Philadelphia divided a double bill here today, the Quakers annexing the first game, 7 to 5, and the Pirates taking the second in ten innings, 3 to 2.

Freddie Brickell, former Pirate, who made three hits—one a triple—and scored three runs, was the big factor in the Phillies' victory.

Comorosky's triple in the tenth inning of the second fray put the game in the bag for the home team.

TERRY LEADS GIANTS TO SHUT OUT OVER REDS

CINCINNATI, Aug. 15—(AP)—With Bill Terry, league leading batsman, again showing the way, the New York Giants won the second game of the series from the Reds today by a 5 to 0 score. The victory enabled the Giants to gain a game on the second-place Brooklyn Robins and remain in a position of contendership for the pennant.

Terry figured in four of the five Giant runs with three hits in five times at bat while Carl Hubbell allowed the Reds only four hits altogether. In the fourth inning, Terry inserted a double between two singles and brought the Giants their first two runs. He drove a home run over the distant left field wall in the sixth to make it 3-0, and his single in the eighth aided in the scoring of the fourth Giant tally.

Hubbell scattered the four Cincinnati hits through four innings and let only one man reached third. The Giants made 12 hits off Red Lucas.

STRIBLING ARRIVES READY TO BOX ANY OPPONENT

NEW YORK, Aug. 15—(AP)—The S. S. Aquitania docked today bringing Young Stribling, Macon, Ga., heavyweight home from his two round knockout of Phil Scott in London.

Stribling said he was ready to fight any man in the world and felt that he could punch with the best of the heavyweights since his sensational one round knockout of Otto Von Porat in Chicago and his defeat of Scott. He much prefers, however, that his next bout be with Jack Sharkey, who was signed today to meet Victorio Campolo at the Yankee Stadium September 25.

He ranks Sharkey as the best of the heavyweight contenders with Primo Carnera next and Max Schmeling fourth.

Stribling prefers to make his next American appearance in Chicago, if possible, because Nate Lewis, matchmaker, gave him a chance against Von Porat—a knockout which brought the youthful Georgian back to the top as championship timber.

HELEN WILLS MOODY IS BEQUEATHED $20,000

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 15—(AP)— Californians who achieved fame in art, literature and athletics were rewarded and charitable institutions aided by the $10,000,000 will of former Senator James D. Phelan filed for probate here today.

Helen Wills Moody, world's woman tennis champion was bequeathed $20,000 in appreciation of her "winning the tennis championship for California." She also was given a portrait of herself painted by the Polish artist, Sigal two years ago.

The bequest immediately raised the question of whether Mrs. Moody's amateur standing would be endangered if she accepted the money. Mrs. Moody declined to comment because she had received no legal notification.

SARAZEN LEADS FIELD IN ST. PAUL OPEN

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 15—(AP)— Gene Sarazen, a great money player with his eyes focused on another bag of gold, led a spectacular assault on par over the Keller county course today and snatched a one shot margin in the struggle for the $10,000 St. Paul open golf championship.

The stocky New York Italian professional, whose big clubs carried away the largest cash prize in golf's history at Agua Caliente, Mexico, last winter, whizzed around the championship course today with a brilliant 67, five lusty strokes under par, which not only netted him his scant advantage, but gave him a new competitive record for the course.

One stroke behind him at the end of the quarter way juncture of the 72 hole medal struggle were Johnny Farrell, of New York, like Sarazen, a former national open champion, and Otto Hackbarth, the veteran professional from Cincinnati, who made his first appearance in championship play in three years.

Three other well known shot makers scored 69's to land among the leaders. They were Johnny Goodman, the Omaha youth who upset Bobby Jones in the national amateur at Pebble Beach last year; Tony Manero, of White Plains, N. Y., and "Lighthouse Harry" Cooper, of Chicago.

ASHLAND CLASHES WITH COLORED GIANTS SUNDAY

On Sunday at Ashland park, Jewett City, the Ashland A. A. plays the Colored Giants of Waterbury.

The Colored Giants have compiled an enviable record this season, having beaten some of the fastest teams in the state. Watching the antics of Taylor the catcher is worth the price of admission. The following lineup will reveal to the fans some players well known to them. Bastic will probably pitch for the visitors with Taylor catching. The local battery will consist of Gaudette pitching with Sekula catching.

The average cost a mile for running a six-cylinder car in Germany is estimated at 5.3 cents.

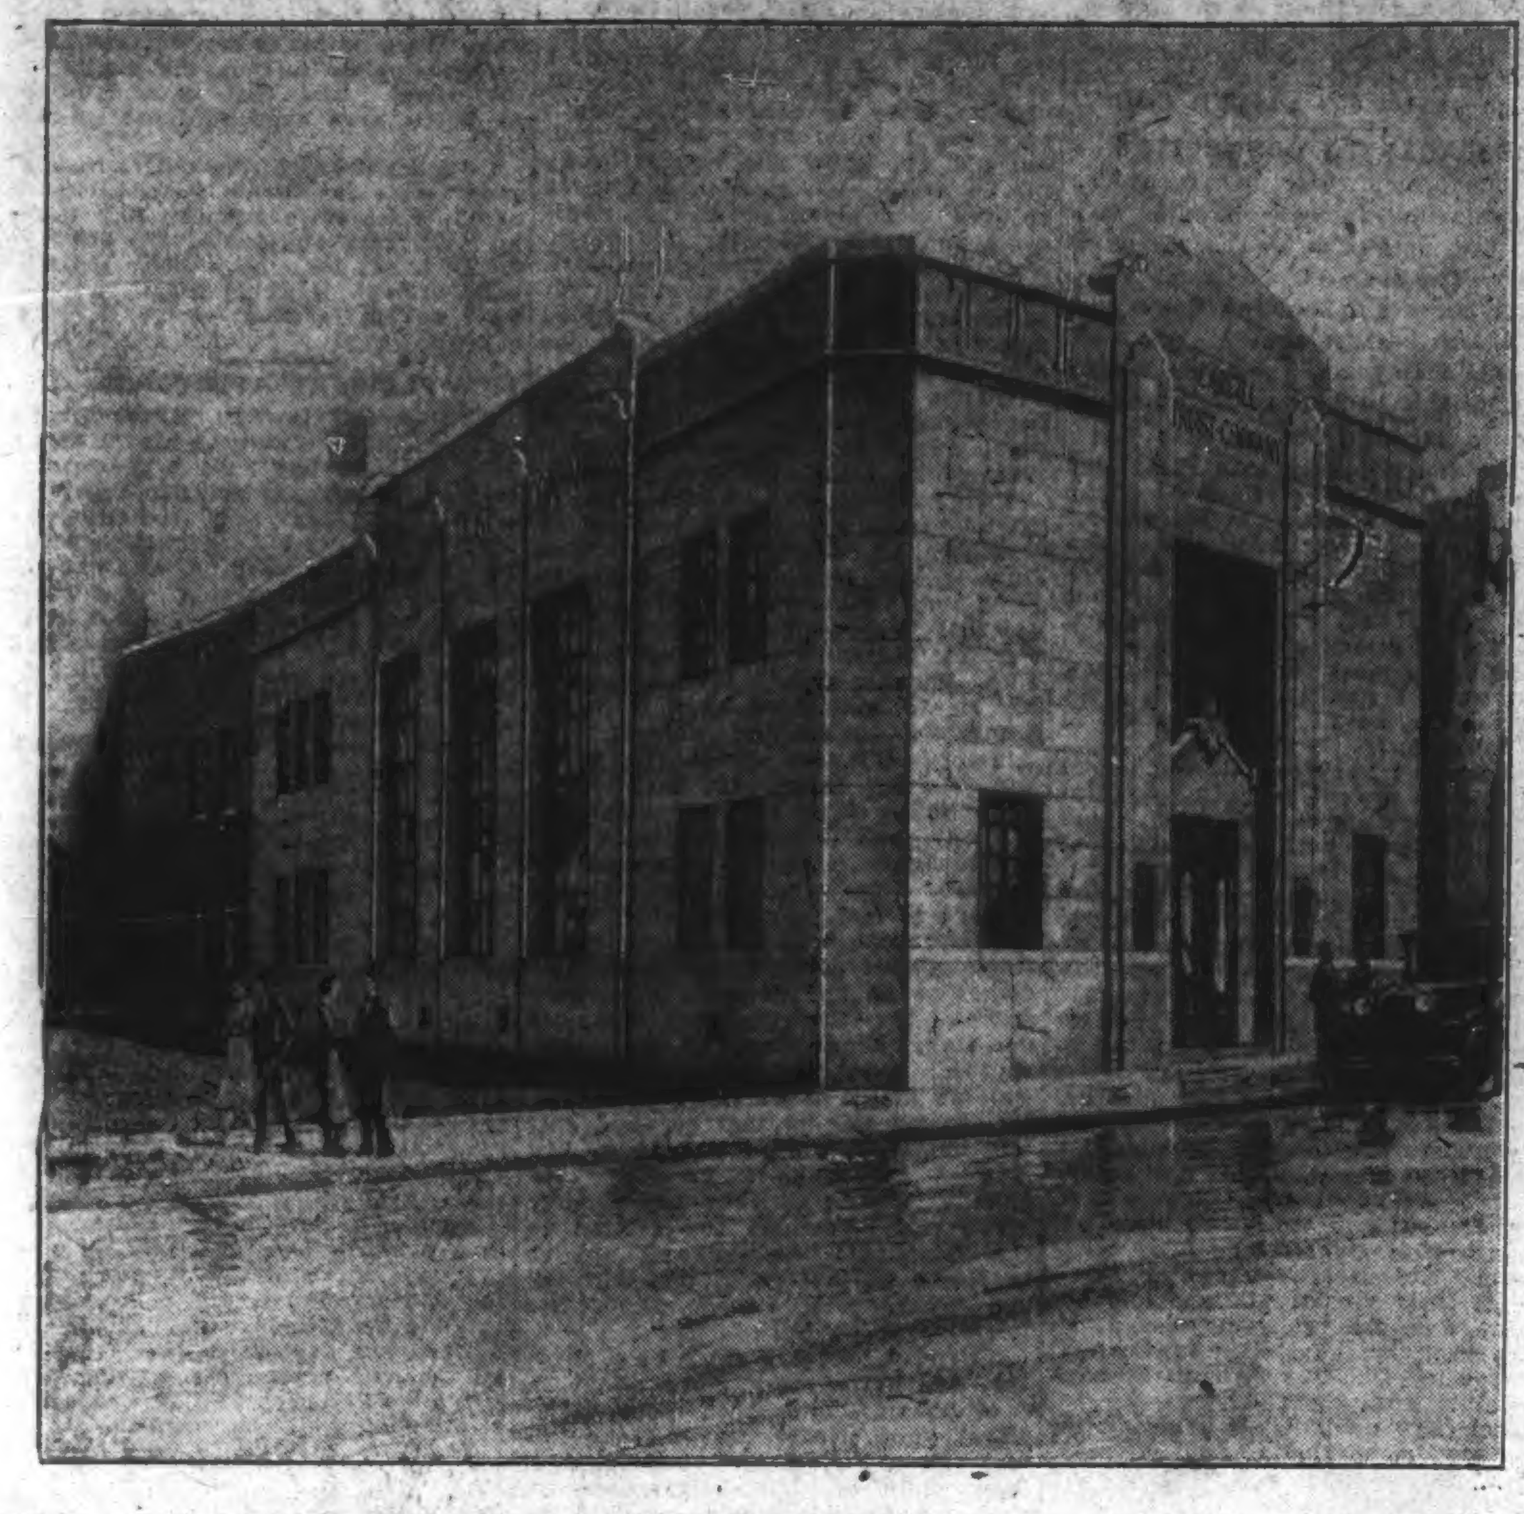
New Home of Cargill Trust Co., Putnam's Newest Banking Institution

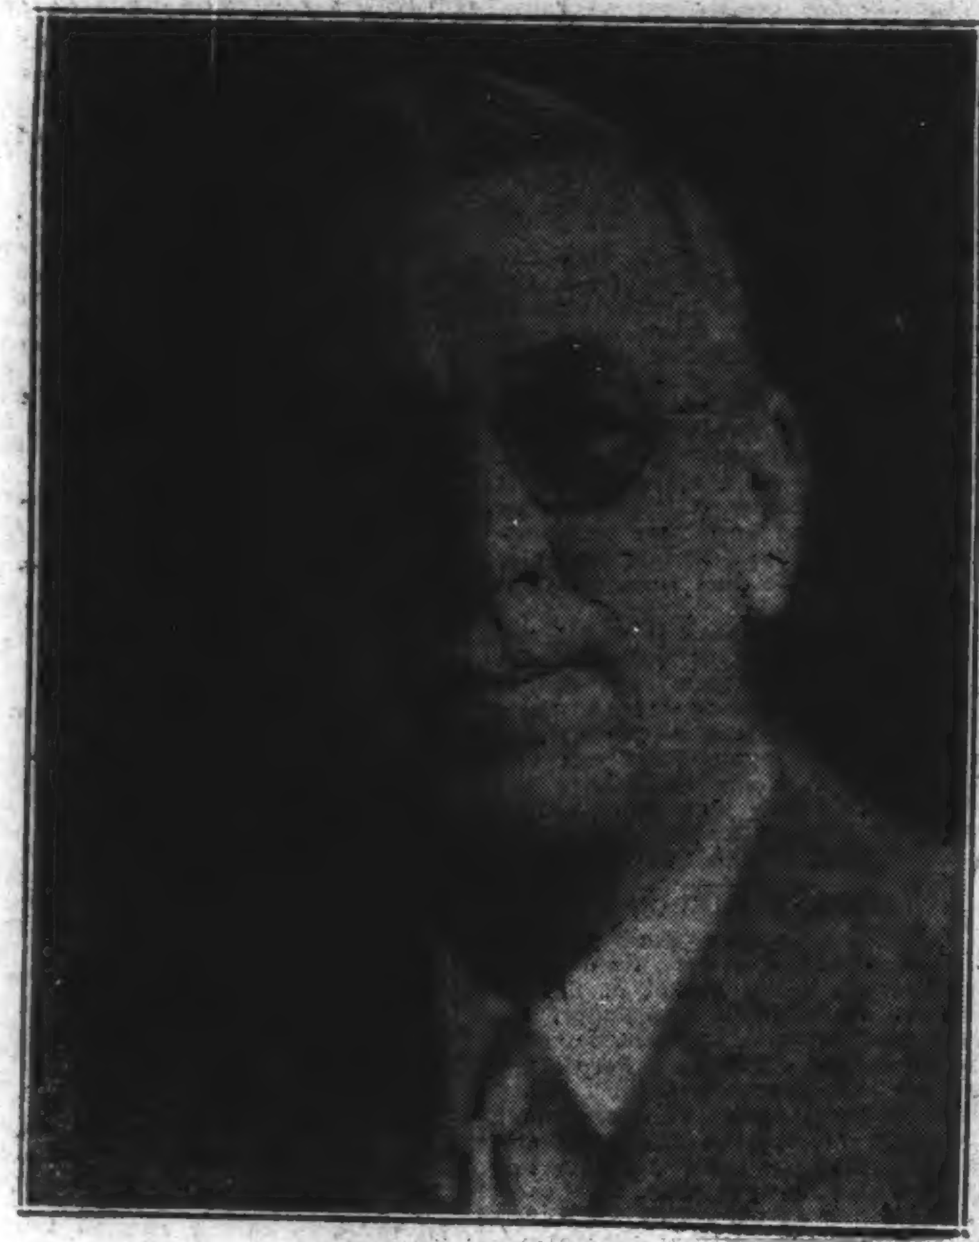


CARGILL TRUST CO. NEW BANKING HOME TO BE OPENED ON NEXT WEDNESDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Aug. 15—The new and beautiful home of the Cargill Trust company, will be formally opened for a formal public inspection next Wednesday afternoon, August 20, between the hours of 3 p. m. and 9 p. m. in the evening. On Thursday morning, August 21, business will be transacted for the first time within the city's newest and most modern banking house.

The new home of the Cargill Trust company, is a building symbolical of the ever increasing growth and stability of eastern Windham county's youngest banking institution. The modern structure, one of the finest of its kind anywhere in New England, is representative of the strength the company has attained since it started business in the modest quarters on Union street in November 1924. Today its resources are more than $1,-154,000.



BYRON D. BUGBEE
President of Cargill Trust Co

History of Bank Building

An interesting bit of history for Putnam is behind the construction of the imposing building which today is the most imposing on either side of the city's Main street.

The possession of a new bank had always been the thought of the officials of the company since the corporation came into existence in 1924, but the sudden increase in business experienced in the first years of the bank's life made it evident, and later imperative, that more commodious and convenient quarters should be acquired. As the matter could not long be deferred, the erection of a new banking house seemed to be the only satisfactory solution to the problem. This disposition of the matter confronting the directors was reached after many lengthy and deliberate conferences. At a meeting of the board, which took place early in 1928, a building committee was appointed for the purpose of formulating tentative plans for the proposed new bank.

Chief among the problems before the committee in the early months of their work, was the selection of a site, central and convenient to the patrons of the concern. This matter was disposed of when the announcement was made that the O'Leary block and property adjoining had been acquired by the committee after weeks of negotiations with the owners.

Several architects were consulted on the matter of plans. After months of careful deliberation it was decided to build the proposed home along lines of modernistic architecture. A. Stanley Miller, a New York architect, submitted plans and specifications which met with the approval of the committee, headed by President Byron D. Bugbee. They were at length accepted and in May 1929, the building programme was launched when the work of razing the antiquated wooden structure on the Main street site was begun.

ELIAS WENTWORTH
Superintendent of Construction

Work Is Begun

With this done, Pirretti Brothers of Centerbrook, a well known contracting firm, began work on the foundation. Weeks of constant and diligent work was required at the beginning of the great task, since extensive and difficult rock excavation was encountered. The many obstructions found in the cellar hole of the block greatly slowed up the progress of the work. The cellar, which is hued out of a solid rock ledge, was finally finished and work on the structure was soon underway.

Before starting, the men to whom the building had been entrusted resolved they would have a block that would resist the onslaughts of the elements for all time, so with this the contractors were advised to sacrifice time, for quality and durability and the time clause was struck out of the contract.

Interior Attractive

These few days in advance of the opening date, workmen are busy completing the final details and arranging interior decorations. The new building is located on Main street between the Congregational church property and the court house block. The location is one suited to the conveniences of all concerned. The modernistic design, the modern type of architecture, is employed inside and out. In construction the building is fire proof. Materials entering into it include Westerly granite, bronze, marble, brick and steel. In various places woodwork lends a pleasing effect. Where wood was necessitated, only American walnut and figured gum wood were used. Floors in the directors room on the west mezzanine floor are of quartered oak, artistically laid so as to conform with the modernistic design carried ou in the entire structure.

The building is constructed on a cellar hole having a 37 foot frontage on Main street and a depth of 100 feet, giving it a rectangular effect. A base course of red Westerly granite is three feet high. Above this, is gray Westerly granite. Layers of polished Westerly granite complete the exterior trim. On the south side above the three high windows are the carved words in letters of gold leaf, "Cargill Trust Company." The only outside decoration aside from the granite, are the bronzed tablets on either side of the front doors which read, "Cargill Trust Company, General Banking, Safe Deposit Vaults."

Behind the coupon booths is the men's lavatory and entrance to the basement. The finishings in the lavatory are of marble and walnut.

On the north side of the lobby, behind the tellers counters, is the present posting room. This room is conveniently appointed, with reference to the book vaults, located behind the securities vault.

Mezzanine floors are over the west and east ends of the lobby. The west floor is made up of two rooms, the directors room and a lavatory. The directors room is laid out in terms on which the building was constructed. A quartered oak floor embraces the modernistic idea of decoration as does the brown grain leather upholstered furniture. In the south end of the room is the directors table. Chairs for the various members of the board are placed in rows in front of the table.

The east mezzanine floor contains a large room which will be at some future time utilized as a posting room. Book vaults have been provided, so the room may be used as soon as the demand materializes. A ladies' room, finished in tile and marble, occupies the remainder of floor space. All stairways are of iron and concrete.

The basement, which is large and airy, is hewed out of solid rock ledge. Its floor is of concrete and its walls of brick. The boiler room is located in the rear of the basement. In it is the heating plant, consisting of an oil burning furnace and a hot water heating system. An incinerator for the burning of waste paper is installed in this room. In other portions of the basement are storage spaces, and the shell of a vault, which will be completed when the need for additional vault space arises.

J. DYER POTTER
Treasurer

The decorative scheme is modernistic. The walls in the lobby are scrolled in texture plaster of buff with tints of white.

The lighting system is the last word in electrical wiring. All wires entering the building are encased in conduit pipes, a safeguard against fire from short circuit. The fixtures, like the rest of the structure, are modernistic. Suspended from the center of the ceiling in the lobby is a large tapering bronze fixture, which will supply illumination for the entire room. All lighting outlets are arranged to give an indirect lighting effect. A beautifully designed electrically operated clock is on the wall of the east mezzanine floor.

The telephone system is one of the most flexible private branch exchanges devised by the Bell system. Cables run to various telephones and all operations for passing and receiving intercommunicating or outside telephone calls can be handled from any phone in the building.

Words cannot adequately describe the beauty and usefulness of the innumerable features of the new building. One cannot help being impressed with the detailed appointments when shown through the trust company's new home next Wednesday. It is indeed the work of far-sighted men and will everlastingly be a tribute to their ability. The building will be new for many years to come. The modernistic design seen inside and out is in keeping with the new ideas in public building architecture, now being advanced by all prominent designers and builders.

Much of the credit for the new building goes to Byron D. Bugbee, prominent Putnam business man and president of the bank who gave freely of his time to the planning and overseeing of construction. Mr. Bugbee and other officials of the bank are justly proud of Putnam's latest structural addition, which takes its place among the finest of its kind anywhere in the country.

One enters the bank through bronze doors, into a vestibule, the walls of which are lined with sheets of marble. The floor is of Italian travertine, a volcanic composition. This material is also the floor covering in the main banking room. It is an expensive product but in addition to its beauty, it has the feature of not becoming slippery when wet.

The vestibule leads into the lobby, where the unusual beauty of the interior of the structure is seen at once. The lobby is L-shaped and is 40 feet by 37 and is 22 feet in height. An abundance of light is obtained from the six windows on either sides, which extend from the top to a point a few feet from the floor. The frames are steel and are painted a bronze color. A beautiful modernistic texture of cloth is used in the draperies that cover the windows.

Tellers desks extending along the lobby in an L-shape separate the business department from the lobby. A new feature incorporated into the new bank, are the tellers counters, which are not enclosed with wire screening as seen in most banks. The counters are spaced at intervals by bronze wickets. On the opposite of the desk is ample working space for each teller. As the opening at each tellers desk is several inches above his working space, the patron is afforded absolute privacy from other depositors awaiting to be accommodated. The counters are of marble and American walnut, which is carried out in panels on the outside.

President's Room

On the north side of the vestibule is the president's and conference room. Furniture here consist of modernistic desks and chairs, upholstered in grain leather. The same effect is seen in the secretary's and treasurer's office which is contained in a bronze enclosure, adjoining the president's office.

On the south side of the vestibule is a daintily decorate dladies room, having all the conveniences of milady's boudoir. All doors in the building are hinged on sag-resisting rings.

Modern Vault

From the alley in the lobby, one is conducted into the security room where the vaults are housed. The vault is one of the finest in any bank in the east, its specifications being such that the bank is afforded a Class A rating against fire and burglary. The vault built of a net work of steel and concrete and lined to a depth of 22 inches, insures absolute security. It is covered with a steel door 16 inches thick and weighing 11 tons. The door is secured with a time governed lock. Inside the vault are about 400 safe deposit boxes, euipped with the double locking system. In the innermost compartment is the bank securities section which is separated from the safe deposit department by a heavy barred steel door. A feature of the vault is the ventillating system, which prevents possible suffocation to anyone locked inside. It is additionally protected with an electrical vault alarm system.

The customer reaches the coupon room through an alley on the right of the vault. Here booths finished in American walnut and equipped with writing facilities are available. They are so constructed to furnish complete privacy.

SERVICE FOR OTHERS OPENS THE DOOR TO HAPPINESS

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY
NOT CHANGED BUT GLORIFIED

Not changed but glorified! O beauteous language
For those who weep,
Mourning the loss of some dear face departed,
Fallen asleep.
Hushed into silence, never more to comfort the hearts of men
Gone like the sunshine of another country, beyond our ken.

Oh, dearest dead, we saw thy white soul shining
Behind the face,
Bright with the beauty and celestial glory
Of an immortal grace.
What wonder that we stumble, faint and weeping
And sick with fears,
Since thou has left us all alone with sorrow
And blind with tears?

Can it be possible no words shall welcome
Our coming feet?
How will it look, that face that we have cherished
When next we meet?
Will it be changed, so glorified and saintly
That we shall know it not?
Will there be nothing that will say "I love thee
And I have not forgot"?

Oh, faithless heart, the same loved face transfigured
Shall meet thee there,
Less sad, less wistful in immortal beauty
Divinely fair.
The mortal veil washed pure with many weepings
Is rent away
And the great soul that sat within its prison
Hath found the day.

In the clear morning of the other country
In Paradise
With that same face that we have loved and cherished
He shall arise.
Let us be patient, we who mourn with weeping
Some vanished face,
The Lord hath taken but to add more beauty
And a diviner grace.

And we shall find once more beyond earth's sorrows
Beyond these skies
In that fair city of the "sure foundations"
Those heavenly eyes
With the same welcome shining through their sweetness
That met us here,
Eyes from whose beauty God has banished sadness
And wiped away the tear.

Think of us, dearest one, while o'er life's waters
We seek the land,
Missing thy voice, thy touch and the true helping
Of thy strong hand.
Till through the storm and tempest safely anchored.
Just on the other side
We find thy dear face looking thru the shadows
Not changed but glorified.

THE OLD ROAD

Give me the old road still,
I am tired of the garish city street,
Where wealth and fashion and folly meet.

Give me the old road still,
I have traveled far the world's broad ways
Since the golden dawn of my morning days.
Give me the old road still!

Give me the old road still,
With its zigzag fence and its chestnut trees,
And its springtime mud to the horse's knees—
Give me the old road still!

Give me the old road still,
It is dusty and narrow—a country lane—
Yet it winds me back to my youth again—
Give me the old road still!

Give me the old road still,
It has no secrets of fortune's lore—
But, oh, it passes my mother's door—
Give me the old road still!

PERENNIALS IN RICH VARIETY

Dear Social Corner Members: The woes of gardening does not mean the whoas of gardening by a long shot! Not much! For if one is to have a garden that is worth calling a garden at all there is no such things as whoa in it at all. One must keep plugging along all the time.

The rains helped out a great deal, of course, but they came too late to save some things and those some things must be trimmed back if they are perennials and pulled up if they are annuals, and disposed of it the garden is to look trim and neat. A new crop of weeds is springing up in the moist soil and these must be coped with also. And then there is the everlasting round of matching, moving, tieing up and down and around that never seems to end.

Today the oriental poppies went into a new bed. They won't sleep very long, however, for soon their green heads will come popping up and they will be ready for another year. I don't know any other flower that is dormant at this time of year, do you? Oriental poppies are rather temperamental and you have to sneak up on them and move them when they are asleep or they get fussy and just refuse to grow. I had several seedlings with good-sized roots that came from a paper of seed planted last year. There were supposed to be several colors and I hope there really are. Sister Rhody and I have just one shade of red.

I spent a lot of time preparing the seed bed for my perennials for next year—a rich mixture of loam, muck and rotted leaves and then on top of that an inch of fine sharp sand. I got it ready just before the rain came and put eight pails of water on it and then the shower finished the job of wetting it down and it was in fine shape for planting. Do you want a list of the things I put in? How many of them do you suppose will grow? Here they are: Betsy Bobbett's pyrethrum, lupines, hardy peas, foxglove, sweet william, globe thistle, hardy phlox, pansy, blue salvia, anchusa, hardy pinks, hollyhocks, canterbury bells, hybrid sweet Williams, primula, delphinium, campanula carpatica, radiant hollyhocks, butterfly delphiniums, and oriental poppies. Twenty kinds! A few things I saved the seed of, but I bought most of the seed. I think it pays to buy good, fresh seed, don't you? I covered it with a cloth covered frame so that it would be shaded till at least some of the seeds peeped up I'll have some work transplanting them later.

SOCIAL CORNER EVENTS.

Tuesday, Aug. 19—Club No. 6 picnic at We Us and Jellow Jacket's at North Stonington, with Clubs Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 invited.

Pedestrian: Haven't you read that there is a new delphinium? A red one? Bright red. But it isn't hardy here although they find it easy to raise in California. I like the blue bachelor's buttons best too and I always order them but there are other colors mixed in sometimes.

My gladioli were later than Sister Rhody's but they are coming along finely now. I have several lovely ones in bloom. The mulch worked fine and I am sorry now that I didn't put some on all the beds for there is a difference in them.

PERNICKETY

SUSANNA IN SWEDEN

Dear Social Corner: We have just made the trip on steamer Wilhelm from Galeborg to Stockholm through Gato Kanal. It is one of the most beautiful routes for tourists in Sweden. The steamer goes through low land for a while, with houses built some ways back, with land coming to the canal, level with the water, flowers, gardens and fields, well kept. We are very near the shore, only that we are higher; we could pick the flowers as we go along. Soon we reach the locks, seventy-five (75) of them in all, sometimes eight (8) one right after another. When we enter a lock the water must be the same level as the one just left. The vessel enters the sluice, two gates close down behind it and sluices in lower part of gate in front open and the water rushes through with enormous force, until it raises to the level of that which the ship is in. The front lock is now opened and steamer goes through, having been raised (10) ten feet. The vessel is raised gradually 91 meters above sea level, the height of Lake Viks. As we near Stockholm its reversed and we go down once more into the Baltic sea. We go through a number of lakes, Lake Vener, largest in Sweden and third largest in the world. Lake Viken is full of rock islands and very hard to navigate. We sometimes go like a snake, and some places you can not see land at all. The locks are manipulated by one man from the maneuvering house at southern lock gate. He opens and closes the gates that weigh (300) three hundred tons and rest on bearings weighing (62) sixty-two tons. By signalling he directs the traffic in the canal and knows where every vessel is by looking at his chart. The canal belongs to the states. It connects the ocean with the Baltic sea. There are many wooden bridges, some divide and go up in the air each side, some roll back on iron wheels, a man to turn a wheel with iron handle, some time around with a wheel on the middle of bridge. One man works it. The bridge is half on shore. When open just gives room to let vessels go through. There are villages and towns along the way, with old castles and abbeys, and ruins. Ramerder Castle, where once lived the famous Giant Ramerder. You can go ashore (as the steamer goes through a number of locks sometimes takes 2 hours) reach it at last lock, walk about for some time, and see the place. Husky church built in the twelfth century and rebuilt in 1818, is very beautiful. Ruins of Stregbury Castle; it is not known when it was built but King Borgen Magmisson held court there in the beginning of the 14th century. It was also the home of Gustamus 1st and at that time was thoroughly repaired. There are beautiful homes. The land is level and forests of tall pine trees, very unlike the mountainous country of Norway. We passed the monument of Count Von Pladen whose energy and iron will alone made it possible to build the canal. He died at 63 and was buried at his request on the shore of the canal. At Lake Viken are the Archipelago lighthouses. They are small houses built on high rock islands, and take care of themselves. The lighting apparatus is so fine that it is of interest. The light is a petroleum flame. The light is intensified by a lense. The heat of the flame drives a mechanism that causes a rotary plate to revolve around it and the flame is hidden at regular intervals. Inside are frames of colored glass, red and green, so lights are red, green and white, depending how you stand in relation to light. The colors are very distinct. The white is "clear course." You do not notice them by daylight but they are very bright at night.

My letter is not very interesting I'm afraid, but I can not tell you how lovely it was at sunset and sunrise, the gulls that fly constantly, and the bright colored houses and green fields.

SUSANNA.

A LOG CABIN VACATION

Dear Sisters: Rain interferred with my plans today so instead of doing what I had intended, I will write you a little more about my Maine vacation,—the first I ever spent in a log cabin. It was a cabin-de-luxe however, with hot and cold water, porcelain sinks, tubs and city conveniences. The cabin was made of spruce logs peeled, notched at the corners and laid horizontally. Instead of sods, clay or plaster, oakum was used between the logs. This made a much cleaner looking job. The partitions inside of the cabin were all made of smaller logs placed upright and similarly caulked.

The large living room has windows on three sides, and two outside doors which open onto piazzas, one on the north and one on the south of the cabin. At one side of the living room is a huge stone chimney and fireplace which we used nearly every morning or evening. Comfortable chairs and couch, beautiful hand drawn rugs on the floor and hand blocked printed linen in old fashioned designs at the windows made the room charming.

A victrola and radio furnished entertainment and a telephone obligingly connected us with the outside world. A deer skin and other trophys adorn the wall. Old fashioned guns hang over the mantel and polished brass candlesticks stand on its shelf. On either side of the big fireplace are "toad-stools," made from spruce logs about ten inches in diameter, cut to the height of a chair. A two-inch section sawed from a larger log and nailed to the top of each makes giant toad-stools of them. They are easy to move and just the thing to sit on when toasting marshmallows over the coals. There was plenty of reading matter, including books on birds and flowers which I found useful.

Guest room, kitchen and living-room were on the first floor, one end of the latter being used as a dining room at mealtime. The long refectory table with its rustic base and polished two-inch pulank top was equally good whether used as a dining or a library table.

Upstairs were two bedrooms and a bathroom. What more could any one want who pines for "a lodge in some vast wilderness?"

Under the back porch roof, paper wasps were building a nest. Before I arrived they had completed a section about the size of my finger. It was a little larger at the top and tapered toward the bottom. It was hung from a rafter and looked like a piece of smooth, cream-colored wood with a hole in the lower end. Then the wasps began to put on the first paper covering. This paper is made from the scrapings from weather-beaten wood. Two layers were finished and a third begun while I was there. I did not see any cells but think they were inside the cream colored section. It was interesting to watch the wasps at their work, but not so puzzling as were the actions of some eave swallows under the other porch.

Six young birds in the nest were being fed by four old birds. We pulled out the oakum from between the logs so we could see into the nest. When nearly grown we saw one of the fledglings sitting on the porch railing ready tofly. An hour later only three were reported in the nest. The next morning we counted heads and there were five in the nest. Every time we counted there seemed to be a different number there. It got to be a regular game. "Guess how many swallows are there now." Then one morning they were all gone. "Gone for good, this time," we said, but the next morning three black heads all in a row were looking down at us when we looked up at the nest. That day they went for good. I supposed that young birds after leaving their nest never went back. Perhaps these were exceptions to the rule. What do you Social Corner bird lovers know about it?

I saw many flowers which I have never seen here. Fireweed and devil's paint brush were abundant, as were the graceful Canada lilies and the Canada thistle. We arranged masses of blue vetch in a copper bow. It made a stunning decoration for the table. The dainty wood sorrel and fragrant twin flower were also new to me. But the things I loved best of all were the bunch berries. The sides of the road were thick with them,—each plant nestling close to the ground was like a butter hole bouquet on the bosom of Mother Earth, with it's six green leaves arranged symmetrically around a bunch of scarlet berries. They looked Christmasy as did the evergreen trees growing above them.

Shall I tell you about the toads I saw? If I do I know someone will say, "She's a nature fakir, all right," but what I am about to relate is true. Six of us went down to the lake one day. Soon after starting we saw tiny toads hopping about in the road. They were brown in color and about half an inch long. I caught one in my hand. Nearer the lake they were more abundant, there being literally thousands of them by the sides of the road. In places they were like honey bees swarming being two and three deep. As we approached there was wild excitment among them. Hop-hop, such a helter-skelter scrambling I never saw before. One could not walk without stepping on some of them. Where did they come from? Where were they going? Have any of you Cornerites ever seen any such sight? If so I would be glad to know about it.

Before I close I want to say to American Loyalty—that I think the "chenille looking blossoms" may be Princess Feather. If it is, it may become a pest if the seeds are allowed to selfsow. Mine did.

Pernickety—You have my sympathy. I came back from Maine to find my little garden more or less of a wreck on account of hot weather and lack of water.

And now, goodbye.

THE FRIENDLY VOICE.

FACTS ABOUT CHEESE

Dear Social Corner Members and Editor: It is quite a space since I wrote my last letter. It is no use to make excuses for some have one cause, and some something entirely different. I find no time like the present, if you have work that has to be done, get right on your job in the morning and do it. What you do in the morning you are sure of. It is a beautiful morning this morning and today is the day for Foxglove's picnic. I suppose so many are going through the air like an airplane getting ready to take the trip to Southington. The weather man has ordered a grand day for them. Hope no bad luck shows up before then. Was glad to see Auntie No. 1 was improving, am glad she is not going to try to have the annual picnic this year, for it is taxing her nerves too much. As we get older we must take care of ourselves if we want to enjoy this world.

I was so surprised to read Joan's death in the paper. She was almost the first Corner Sister that I got acquainted with, and she always enjoyed playing the piano for their marching. I knew she was not well and was thinking of sending her a card, and soon I saw her death in the paper. She was so apt in so many ways, it was such a disadvantage for her, in not being able to hear.

Some of the sisters have referred to the shaker bonnets we used to wear. I remember them very well. I wore one to school, it was No. 11 and had a green chambray cape and a bow on top of the same material; also I have heard my aunt speak of the Tippecanoe sun bonnets they used to wear. That was in the days when John Tyler was president. She said you would often hear the rhyme Tippecanoe and Tyler too.

I was much interested in the article that Auntie Jane wrote quite a few weeks ago, about cheese, telling how it was made, and it was just the same way my mother used to make it too. Many a night after we were through with our work, we would go to the garden and gather sage leaves and corn leaves, and put that with the cheese curd and make sage cheese. There are different kinds of cheese. Cheese is a delicacy, and yet it is a staple food. It is meat for the French people, and is used in place of potatoes to the Dutch. It is a breakfast and lunch food for the Swiss people. It is the oldest prepared food in the world, with the exception of butter. There is a story told of the origin of cheese. A traveler in Asia sat down one evening to refresh himself with a drink of milk, which he carried in a sack made of a sheep's stomach, and when he tipped the bottle to his lips, instead of good milk, a sickish substance flowed down his gullet. He cut open the sack and found at the bottom the first cheese that had been formed by the action of the milk of the rennet in the not completely dried sheep's stomach, and that is the origin of the first cheese. But today we have over 500 different kinds of cheese, all made of milk, but treated differently. Most kinds of cheese are better to have a little age to them. The pot cheese is better the day it is made.

I will try and write more some other time. My letter is extensive on cheese. I have no inclination to be a professor on making cheese. I have many and many made, also know what a cheese press is. Best wishes to all the sick and shutins, hope they will all be on hand at our meetings in September.

COMFORT.

It isn't difficult to convince some married men that it is good to be alone.

A VISIT TO STORRS

Dear Editor and Members: Well the showers did some good any way. They resurrected Milky Way's cucumbers when she was mourning that she wouldn't get another one. I guess they were thankfully received by every one. It was most too bad that Sunday wasn't a good day. It would be just awful if I had to stay home. As it was we went down "to the point" in the afternoon and the sun came out just lovely. Pyrethrum and her sister went with us and we looked for oysters and mussels on the rocks until we had cut our hands in several places and decided it wasn't worth while. The tide was out so I couldn't practice for the swimming marathon I am encouraged though. I can do most three yards without swallowing the ocean. The boys brought down some corn when they came back from doing chores and we cooked it and ate it by the fire. It was most dark when we came home and Pyrethrum's husband was on the point of coming to look us up. As he had to get his own dinner and supper he probably thought he was in danger of having to get his own breakfast. Pyrethrum had left plenty cooked but that isn't like having it placed before him on the table. Believe me I'm steering clear of him lately.

Mr. M.—Was that fifty cents meant for a person or a car?

Last Thursday Milky Way and I with our various husbands went to Storrs where Fram and Home Week was being held. We got started about nine o'clock (and for a wonder the men didn't have to wait for us women) and every-thing went lovely until we came to that road under construction out of Willimantic. We would have probably known about it if we had read our papers properly but never-the-less we ate our peck of dirt and good measure before we reached the college where the new road is going to end.

Milky Way and I separated from the men, after planning to meet in the dining hall at noon, and went immediately to the Community house where a lecture was just finishing about nutrition. Following that Miss Eddy gave a very interesting talk and demonstration on home lighting and illustrated it with slides showing the right and wrong way to light a room. Miss Eddy comes from the General Electric company. From there we went to the dining hall and thanks to Miss Russell we had a ride over thereby saving a long wait in line. For lunch we had chicken a la mode, green corn, peas, tomatoes, potatoes, ice cream, pudding, iced tea or milk, and rolls.

After lunch we went through the green houses and looked at the flower gardens then back to the armory where Miss Ella Gardner gave a talk on the selection of plays and a demonstration as to how a poem or story could be acted in pantomime with very little preparation. From there we went into the armory where the honorary recognition exercises were held and then to the Beech building where Miss Eddy had a class in lamp shade making. I will tell you in my next letter how she makes shades so I will skip that for now.

From there to the cattle show where we met "our men" and then started for home. We came back another way to eliminate the construction part and I enjoyed it very much as it was all new to me. Down by the Franklin Grange hall we stopped and ate a lunch (that we had packed before starting in the morning) and then on for home. A very nice day all around even to the rain that came late in the evening that we needed so badly.

Tonight, the Grange members are going on a moonlight sail on the Elizabeth Ann out of Stonington. As good a Granger as I try to be they couldn't convince me that I should go on board that boat after my Block Island experience. I'll take my sails on dry land; thank you. And besides I want to go to Washington County Pomona tomorrow at Hope Valley.

True Blue:—Thanks for the recipe, it was delicious pudding.

Pernickety:—Don't stop writing of your "Paradise." It is very interesting to know how you combat "discouragments."

A Friendly Voice:—I see there are black and white kitties in Maine as well as Connecticut. I haven't had any since but I know a woman who has a whole family of them under her sewing room and they never bother.

Was sorry of the passing on of Joan and Perserverance.

Pleasant vacations. See you at the club and picnic if noting happens.

A DAY'S OUTING

Dear Social Corner: The kitchen clock was striking nine when I locked the door Thursday morning, and it was just 5 o'clock when I returned from a day's outing. I had travelled about 120 miles but the trip meant far more to me than just mileage. It meant enjoying new scenes in the company of my sisters and family and also studying the flower gardens at Storrs. As we rode along we kept our eyes open for beautiful scenery, houses that we should like to live in, note-worthy gardens and striking wild flowers.

Upon our arrival at the college grounds we ate our lunch and then while the men were visiting the barns, the rest of us made a tour of the greenhouses and gardens. We made notes of what we found interesting and regretted that not all of the plants were labeled. I learned the name of a plant that I had been growing for two years, and saw a number of new kinds that I want to try raising. I do not care for browallia elata, but the variety called speciosa major has larger blooms of the most brilliant ultramarine blue and is worth having. This was growing in the greenhouse but it may be grown outside.

I was interested in the annual poinsettia because I had been reading about it and had never seen any before. This belongs to the same family as snow on the mountain, another interesting annual. There was a bed of torenia with its odd blue blossoms. One thing that I must have in my garden is pentstmon in white or rose. As there were about 70 kinds of annuals it would take too long to mention all of them. But I do not want to leave out the zinnias and marigolds. These were in full bloom and their gaudy colors are fine where a bold effect is desired. For a soft effect I should recommend either annual phlox or lockspur.

Then I made a list of the combinations of plants used in the show beds. The yellow cannas and pale blue salvia looked especially interesting. Somehow the beds of petunias were not as pleasing as I have found them at other visits. The tall growing sorts in mixed colors do not look so well in formal beds as do the dwarf ones in separate colors.

After leaving the college we rode through Stafford Springs to Southbridge and then on to Putnam. The scenery was picturesque in places and we saw many charming houses. Most of the window boxes looked thrifty but the other gardens were dry and dusty like those at home. We saw several patches of purple iron weed, a wild flower that is not common in our section. Along the streams and ponds we noticed a lot of that pinkish lavender flower called tick trefoil.

Upon our arrival home I got out my favorite garden catalogue and added to the notes that I scribbled beside the descriptions. Later I wrote a record of my observations in my garden notebook. Then tired from the long day, I was lulled to sleep by the sound of the much needed rain. And thus ended a perfect day.

SISTER RODY.

MESSAGES TO CORNERITES

Social Corner: Well, what a nice little rain fell in two showers. We could use more of it as the ground is so dry. The man of the house stays to wet our vegetables and flowers.

Well, in a short time we go back to the Buckingham. I did not realize the time was so near until True Rose spoke to me of it.

Sister Rody—I went in a store and priced and looked at those beautiful gazing globes. I could not see $35 for the globe and pedestal. I would look for some boy to throw a stone and break it, as its just to me a looking glass bottle and easily broken; but they are so pretty and with the head of the house most three months home from work I just can't risk a globe and a stone, so I'll do my gazing in my flower bed.

Foxglove—I have been through your home town a few years ago. Hope everybody who goes will enjoy your everybody who went enjoyed your picnic. Our car is busy all the time so can't use it for picnic, etc. Son drives one thousand miles a week, 52 weeks in the year. Am in hope of an emergency coupe for his work this winter, then I'll take in a picnic.

Libby—I asked after your mother the past week and a missprint of Lily was used. I had a lovely letter from Mawb. Oh how we will miss her moving away.

Poor Joan she too will be missed.

Red Rose and daughter are enjoying two weeks at Lake Sunapee, N. H. She expects to see Mawb when out on auto trips sightseeing.

Quid Nic—Heard daughter A—— was at their cousins and she told her who I was. Do you remember J. M. away back in the sixties in Bozrah? Did you tell Dad Shaw about the trick the mule did, did you?

Black Eye Susie—Had a nice letter from our friend Dad Shaw.

Aunt Rosa—You look lovely and cool on the new porch. I think often of Gang since she passed on.

Woodside—Several years ago I had an A1 waiter in hotel room at my house. He told me that (before the war this was) that $7 and $10 per week was their wages meal furnished in the hotel and room out-side, their laundry to pay for which left little. The house expected their tips to make up for small weekly wage. I know of people who never tip. I feel guilty not to, therefore always leave something in silver under my plate. The rule I believe is 10 per cent of your bill, or if $1, 10c isn't bending one's pocket book. I wouldn't give if I couldn't with a clear conscience. I would rather tip the porter than go our mussed from the train. This is my idea given in reply to your question.

I see our S. C. editor has been having his vacation. I trust very much he enjoyed it; he surely earns it.

My best wishes to those in sorrow, sickness and any trouble, for a return of happiness.

CALLA LILY.

HOLDING HER PLACE

Social Corner Editor and Sisters: Just a few lines to let you all know how I am getting along and to keep my space in the Social Corner page. We have been having some hot weather, although the thunder shower this morning has cleared the air and now it is lovely, a nice breeze and the sun shining. I have put in a very busy summer so far. I have been to the shore, have been to picnics and church fairs, supper and have been to visit in my old home town. It was so hot could not think of making many calls, only upon those in its neighborhood. Had a pleasant time. I also saw pictures of Byrd. It was a very hot day and it did seem so natural that it is and snow might melt, "but it did not seem to."

Another pleasant visit was with Aunty No. 1 for a few minutes. She was out on the back porch and looked fine. It seems so good to know she is improving all the time. I met with Uncle's niece that man visiting there, when I was with Aunty No. 1, two years ago. I also had the great pleasure of spending a few days with Sweet William and her family.

Nellie Bly: I hope to see the new home some time.

Johan's family have my sympathy When I put the wood box in Social Corner she was one of the first to write and ask for a place on it.

Hope all sick one's are improving.

SISTER READY.

TWO HELPFUL HINTS

Dear Social Corner Friends: Had not expected to write so soon again, but as I received a prize check, I must thank the editor for that, so will write a few lines for the page. I was much interested in the letters by Forget-me-never and Susanna. I have English friends who have told me about the Horse guards and Royal guards, which reminds me of something which one friend told me. She was trying to find some special place and had asked persons whom she met on the street and as it happened they were strangers in the city as she was and could not tell her. So she spied a guard standing like a statue and over to him she hurried and asked him to direct her to "the place." He didn't move his eyes, just stared straight ahead and out of the corner of his mouth mumbled some words in a low tone which she could not understand. So she repeated her question in a louder tone and he flushed to the ears and mumbled again. She gave it up then, but the next person she met could direct her to the place she wanted to see. So "she was on her way" much to her sorrow she learned later, that she had made a great mistake in speaking to the guard and that he was not allowed to speak, when on duty.

Now I will pass along something which will interest the sisters who have flower beds—read it in a farm paper which is published in Montreal, Canada.

"Do not throw away a sprinkler top can, such as talcum powder comes in, that is if it has a removable top. Keep it as a seed sower for very fine seeds. They shake out so easily. Larger seeds can be sown from cans with larger holes in top."

And here is another hint which I am trying out. As I do not have stoves in my home, that means that every bit of paper, string, etc., must go in the waste basket. I found that when I had torn letters in tiny bits, sometimes when the men emptied ashcans the tiny scraps would fly around the yard when there was a bit of wind. So now, I keep the large envelopes which some of the shops use for small articles—also small paper bags and I keep one hanging under the window sill in the kitchen, and when I tear a letter in bits just drop them into bag or envelope and when it is nearly full turn over top and drop into waste basket. Since doing this there are no more scraps of letters flying around the yard. And I think I have written enough for this time so will "ring off."

AUNT SUSIE.

MESSAGES TO MEMBERS.

Dear Social Corner Members: My, but doesn't it seem great to have some cool clear air once more and the bit of rain did so much good. I do hope we get some more soon. I was so sorry to read of the death of Joan. I knew she was not well but did not know she was seriously ill. So many will miss her. She so enjoyed the meetings and was always so willing to play for them. Club 6 has lost a member too, Mrs. Sarah Spink whose pen name was Perseverance. She never attended many of the meetings, but when she did, always recited for us.

Golden Glow: I too am wondering where you are now. I saw a place advertised and wondered if it was yours from the description.

Foxglove: How I would like to attend your picnic but, it will not be possible. I hope some one from Club 6 will be able to attend, you have been to see us several times. I see that Prairie Chicken has planned a picnic for Club 6 on Tuesday, the 19th. I know this meant a lot for her to do, she is so busy with her homework inside and out. It certainly is very nice of Wheeler Wenz and Yellow Jacket to have it at their house. It is a lovely place for a picnic and I think all who can should make a special effort to attend for those who are planning for it want to feel repaid for their trouble. Everyone wants to bring something good for the dinner and their dishes so as not to make any more trouble for the hostesses than is necessary. Shall hope to see many visitors from the other clubs as well as many of our own members. By several joining together and getting someone to take a load or two it does not make it expensive for anyone. Prairie Chicken has already given the directions for getting to the home of Wheeler and anyone in North Stonington village will tell you where Mrs. George D. Coates lives.

Milksham: I enjoyed your letter about your trip. I save all the letters about trips and imagine I'll take some of them. Everyone has day dreams you know even if we know they won't come true.

Sumac: Some callers you had, there seems to be a good many of them around this year.

Sister Rhody: Glad you wrote about the pressure cooker. I have sometimes thought of getting one. I think my letter is getting too long.

MY WINDOW VINE

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: My first glance the coming day is toward the sweet, little lonely vine, that twines along my window frame. It nods a silent welcome, smiles, beckons me to its side and assures me of its friendliness. I stroke its shining leaves, and it flutters and confidentially whispers "I will be of comfort. I will not break your heart with maudlin criticism, I will neither desert nor deceive you."

In the evening as I sit by its side, it is my sole companion and solace, and its rustling leaves bring a song of peace. When the further darkness falls, I hear it singing to itself and murmuring, "I am so happy, so happy."

When the thunder clouds and the rain beat its tiny frame, which droops and shivers for the moment, it arises from under the darkness and thrusts out its trembling, dripping leaves to meet the coming sunshine.

I have watched this little vine day by day, climbing its way from the door stone; from floor to floor until it reached my window frame, and has crept over the roof beyond my vision.

In this great city of wanton vandalism, it knows but the silent walls of its support; it meets not the hand of human destruction or despotism that would tear its heart and fling it into the street below. It lives its little life in peace and happiness until nature has spent itself and it crumbles and fades into the dust from which it came.

Were it able to speak it would say "do not be troubled or unhappy, the same unchangeable law of nature which lifted me to your side and leads me to my infinite rest, ultimately will lead you to the same quiet rest and forever." This is my bond with the darling, little lonely vine which twines above my window frame.

SENDS OLD RECIPE

Dear Social Corner: Such a nice surprise today! A letter from Pernickety with a big basket of Shirley Forglove seeds. Enough to supply the whole neighborhood, too, which I shall proceed to do. Thanks, Pernickety. You are surely generous.

True Blue—I shall be very much pleased to receive the lilies and also glad to return the favor if I have any plants that you would like.

Am sending an old recipe for watermelon sweet pickle that some may like to try:

Watermelon sweet pickle—4 lbs of the prepared rind, 2 lbs. sugar, 1 pt. vinegar, 1-2 cup each of stick cinnamon, cassia buds and whole allspice, and 1-4 cup whole cloves.

I boil the prepared rind in salted water until tender, drain, and add to the already made sweet pickle. Let boil for a few minutes and seal in glass jars.

Pedestrian: Perhaps that recipe was the one you wanted. I quite agree with you in preferring the blue bachelor's buttons, but one of the prettiest things in my garden now, is the pink larkspur (annual). Also have it in white, blue, purple and a deeper pink, but the rose pink is by far the prettiest.

American Loyalty—Have you learned the name of your flower? I remember seeing a plant of that description years ago in a friend's garden. It was a cockscomb and I think she called it Prince's Feather.

Royanco—The Chinese forget-me-nots do seem to belong to the "stickley-prickley" family, but they are such a lovely bit of heaven's own blue that we can forgive them. Mine last for a long time, though. Cannot see why yours fade so quickly.

Would like to have attended Foxglove's picnic today but was not able to go. Have ben to two picnics this sumer which sets a record for me.

THAT BARREL OF POTATOES.

Dear Corner Sisters: Sumac and several others have asked about my barrel of potatoes, so I shall tell you the outcome of it.

The vines had dried and the plants in general indicated that harvest time was drawing near. I just couldn't resist dumping the barrel right away to see what was what. Well I found it as my Alaskan friend predicted. There were potatoes, any quantity of them, but they were small. Perhaps if I would have waited three or four weeks longer, they might have grown larger. Nevertheless, I am convinced the stunt "can" be worked, and worked successfully if everything is done just right and the soil is of proper kind. The potatoes we planted in the field aren't large either. So I am inclined to think our soil is not quite rich enough. I have made up my mind to try the barrel again next year, and to use leaf mold entirely instead of garden soil. I shall also be more particular about the sort of seed I shall use. There is this to say, there wasn't a single potato bug on the plants in the barrel. And that is something, for there were bugs on those in the field.

I wonder if any of the sisters have a good recipe for Rhode Island Johnny cake? Ever since my men folk were in Providence and tasted the Johnny cakes there, they have been singing their praises. I would greatly appreciate having a good recipe for the cakes.

FLOWERS AT STORRS

Dear Social Corner. Sister Rhody told you that we went to Storrs, didn't she? And we had such a lot of fun looking at all the flowers together! We like to think that sometime we may have flowers as beautiful. Maybe we will if we keep on, who knows?

We spent most of our time there among the annuals—the glads weren't open enough to be really interesting and neither of us are very much interested in dahlias though they had some gorgeous ones opening.

I had a piece of paper and a pencil and I listed most of the annuals—such a lot of them. We were agreeably surprised to find that we knew the names of most of them and it was a very simple matter to read the labels and learn the names of those that were strange to us.

The showiest flowers were the zinnias and marigolds. We had never seen the quilled zinnias before so we spent an extra minute or two looking at them. There were several two-toned ones that were very pretty indeed. And the little dwarf marigolds were masses of bright colored blooms. I have some here at home but they do not bloom as freely—perhaps because of the lack of water.

Nigella, or love in a mist, or devil in a bush, or love in a puff, or what ever you want to call it was one of the oddest annuals and a plant with thistle-like foliage and poppy-like flowers was another. I have looked in all the catalogues since I came home and I haven't been able to find a description of it in any of them.

The beds in front of the horticultural building are always lovely. We liked the ones of heliotrope bordered with variegated geraniums the best though the large beds of blue salvias, dwarf marigolds, yellow cannas and flowering tobacco was also very pretty. I imagine that that would be at its best in the early morning when the flowering tobacco was fully open.

We looked at one bed and thought it to be snapdragons and then Sister Rhody looked more closely and discovered that it was penstemon. The blooms had not been open long and but few plants carried flowers but the effect was good. I found a short description in one of my seed catalogues which says that it may be treated as a perennial in warm localities. Of course it is too cold to try to winter it here but if the seeds are sown early it ought to bloom well as an annual for us.

We were rather disappointed in our browallia this year because the blooms are so small and we were pleased to find growing at Storrs a kind with much larger brighter blooms.

Wish I could tell you about all the flowers in detail but it is getting late and maybe you don't want to hear all about them anyway! But in just a few minutes we gained enough information and enthusiasm to keep us pepped up for another year. So, wasn't that trip worthwhile?

BUREAU KITCHEN CABINET

Dear Social Corner Members: Just as I was getting up ambition to write about the New London County Farm Bureau kitchen tour some good sister beat me to it. I am glad some of the Social Corner members are interested also in farm bureau work. I went on the tour, taking some of the members of my group. I joined the tour at the first stop in Groton, at the home of the "lady who has so many lovely old dishes" who is a particular friend of mine, a Social Corner member, and a member of my farm bureau class. The "Kitchen Campaign" has met with an enthusiastic reception by the women and each one is trying to scheme and plan to make her kitchen just a bit more attractive and efficient.

In my own case I had no kitchen cabinet and no room for any if I possessed one, so I finally hit upon the scheme of remodelling an old bureau, which was in fairly good condition and which would not take up half the space of a cabinet. My husband who is not a professional carpenter by any means, but fairly handy with hammer and saw, did the remodelling.

First he removed the two tiny drawers, one on each side of the top of the bureau, then carefully took off the top, cut down the bureau to the second drawer and replaced the top. Of course we had removed the four drawers. This lowered the top surface so that I can stand erect and place my hands flat on the top surface without stooping. This bureau is on stout casters so that I can move it anywhere just by a slight push. He then cut the three remaining drawer supports through the center, bracing those on the right and placing shelves on the supports in place of the drawers. The left half has all braces removed making a large space for flour and sugar cans. The shelves at the right will hold all cooking tins and dishes, the upper one being used for my tray of spices, salt, etc. The top surface is used as a cooking surface. As I have a nice molding board I decided to retain it, so I have put an eye in one end which hangs the board when not in use on a hook on the back of the bureau. This bureau is rolled to the left of the gas stove so that I can prepare foods and put them in the oven without moving. When my cooking is done I can roll my bureau with its soiled dishes to the sink where I wash and replace them in the bureau for next time, without moving from the sink. The bureau is then pushed back to the wall out of the way. A window shade serves as a cover for the shelves.

The bureau is enameled white with green trim to match the stove. Total cost of renovating said bureau was 65c for enamel.

While I am writing about helps I would like to mention a tool which my husband brought me from the twenty-five cent store. It has three curved prongs on a pole about a yard long, it is like a miniature potato digger and is splendid to reach under rose bushes to stir up the soil around the

NOT CHANGED BUT GLORIFIED

Not changed but glorified! O beauteous language
For those who weep,
Mourning the loss of some dear face departed,
Fallen asleep,
Hushed into silence, never more to comfort the hearts of men
Gone like the sunshine of another country, beyond our ken.

Oh, dearest dead, we saw thy white soul shining
Behind the face,
Bright with the beauty and celestial glory
Of an immortal grace.
What wonder that we stumble, faint and weeping
And sick with fears,
Since thou has left us all alone with sorrow
And blind with tears?

Can it be possible no words shall welcome
Our coming feet?
How will it look, that face that we have cherished
When next we meet?
Will it be changed, so glorified and saintly
That we shall know it not?
Will there be nothing that will say "I love thee
And I have not forgot"?

Oh, faithless heart, the same loved face transfigured
Shall meet thee there,
Less sad, less wistful in immortal beauty
Divinely fair.
The mortal veil washed pure with many weepings
Is rent away
And the great soul that sat within its prison
Hath found the day.

In the clear morning of the other country
In Paradise
With that same face that we have loved and cherished
He shall arise.
Let us be patient, we who mourn with weeping
Some vanished face,
The Lord hath taken but to add more beauty
And a diviner grace.

And we shall find once more beyond earth's sorrows
Beyond these skies
In that fair city of the "sure foundations"
Those heavenly eyes
With the same welcome shining through their sweetness
That met us here,
Eyes from whose beauty God has banished sadness
And wiped away the tear.

Think of us, dearest one, while o'er life's waters
We seek the land,
Missing thy voice, thy touch and the true helping
Of thy strong hand.
Till through the storm and tempest safely anchored.
Just on the other side
We find thy dear face looking thru the shadows
Not changed but glorified.

THE OLD ROAD

Give me the old road still,
I am tired of the garish city street,
Where wealth and fashion and folly meet.

Give me the old road still,
I have traveled far the world's broad ways
Since the golden dawn of my morning days.
Give me the old road still!

Give me the old road still,
With its zigzag fence and its chestnut trees,
And its springtime mud to the horse's knees—
Give me the old road still!

Give me the old road still,
It is dusty and narrow—a country lane—
Yet it winds me back to my youth again—
Give me the old road still!

Give me the old road still,
It has no secrets of fortune's lore—
But, oh, it passes my mother's door—
Give me the old road still!

PERENNIALS IN RICH VARIETY

Dear Social Corner Members: The woes of gardening does not mean the whoas of gardening by a long shot! Not much! For if one is to have a garden that is worth calling a garden at all there is no such things as whoa in it at all. One must keep plugging along all the time.

The rains helped out a great deal, of course, but they came too late to save some things and those some things must be trimmed back if they are perennials and pulled up if they are annuals, and disposed of it the garden is to look trim and neat. A new crop of weeds is springing up in the moist soil and these must be coped with also. And then there is the everlasting round of matching, moving, tieing up and down and around that never seems to end.

Today the oriental poppies went into a new bed. They won't sleep very long, however, for soon their green heads will come popping up and they will be ready for another year. I don't know any other flower that is dormant at this time of year, do you? Oriental poppies are rather temperamental and you have to sneak up on them and move them when they are asleep or they get fussy and just refuse to grow. I had several seedlings with good-sized roots that came from a paper of seed planted last year. There were supposed to be several colors and I hope there really are. Sister Rhody and I have just one shade of red.

I spent a lot of time preparing the seed bed for my perennials for next year—a rich mixture of loam, muck and rotted leaves and then on top of that an inch of fine sharp sand. I got it ready just before the rain came and put eight pails of water on it and then the shower finished the job of wetting it down and it was in fine shape for planting. Do you want a list of the things I put in? How many of them do you suppose will grow? Here they are: Betsy Bobbett's pyrethrum, lupines, hardy peas, foxglove, sweet william, globe thistle, hardy phlox, pansy, blue salvia, anchusa, hardy pinks, hollyhocks, canterbury bells, hybrid sweet Williams, primula, delphinium, campanula carpatica, radiant hollyhocks, butterfly delphiniums, and oriental poppies. Twenty kinds! A few things I saved the seed of, but I bought most of the seed. I think it pays to buy good, fresh seed, don't you? I covered it with a cloth covered frame so that it would be shaded till at least some of the seeds peeped up I'll have some work transplanting them later.

Pedestrian: Haven't you read that there is a new delphinium? A red one? Bright red. But it isn't hardy here although they find it easy to raise in California. I like the blue bachelor's buttons best too and I always order them but there are other colors mixed in sometimes.

My gladioli were later than Sister Rhody's but they are coming along finely now. I have several lovely ones in bloom. The mulch worked fine and I am sorry now that I didn't put some on all the beds for there is a difference in them.

SUSANNA IN SWEDEN

Dear Social Corner: We have just made the trip on steamer Wilhelm from Galeborg to Stockholm through Gato Kanal. It is one of the most beautiful routes for tourists in Sweden. The steamer goes through low land for a while, with houses built some ways back, with land coming to the canal, level with the water, flowers, gardens and fields, well kept. We are very near the shore, only that we are higher; we could pick the flowers as we go along. Soon we reach the locks, seventy-five (75) of them in all, sometimes eight (8) one right after another. When we enter a lock the water must be the same level as the one just left. The vessel enters the sluice, two gates close down behind it and sluices in lower part of gate in front open and the water rushes through with enormous force, until it raises to the level of that which the ship is in. The front lock is now opened and steamer goes through, having been raised (10) ten feet. The vessel is raised gradually 91 meters above sea level, the height of Lake Viks. As we near Stockholm its reversed and we go down once more into the Baltic sea. We go through a number of lakes, Lake Vener, largest in Sweden and third largest in the world. Lake Viken is full of rock islands and very hard to navigate. We sometimes go like a snake, and some places you can not see land at all. The locks are manipulated by one man from the maneuvering house at southern lock gate. He opens and closes the gates that weigh (300) three hundred tons and rest on bearings weighing (62) sixty-two tons. By signalling he directs the traffic in the canal and knows where every vessel is by looking at his chart. The canal belongs to the states. It connects the ocean with the Baltic sea. There are many wooden bridges, some divide and go up in the air each side, some roll back on iron wheels, a man to turn a wheel with iron handle, some time around with a wheel on the middle of bridge. One man works it. The bridge is half on shore. When open just gives room to let vessels go through. There are villages and towns along the way, with old castles and abbeys, and ruins. Ramerder Castle, where once lived the famous Giant Ramerder. You can go ashore (as the steamer goes through a number of locks sometimes takes 2 hours) reach it at last lock, walk about for some time, and see the place. Husky church built in the twelfth century and rebuilt in 1818, is very beautiful. Ruins of Stregbury Castle; it is not known when it was built but King Borgen Magmisson held court there in the beginning of the 14th century. It was also the home of Gustamus 1st and at that time was thoroughly repaired. There are beautiful homes. The land is level and forests of tall pine trees, very unlike the mountainous country of Norway. We passed the monument of Count Von Pladen whose energy and iron will alone made it possible to build the canal. He died at 68 and was buried at his request on the shore of the canal. At Lake Viken are the Archipelago lighthouses. They are small houses built on high rock islands, and take care of themselves. The lighting apparatus is so fine that it is of interest. The light is a petroleum flame. The light is intensified by a lense. The heat of the flame drives a mechanism that causes a rotary plate to revolve around it and the flame is hidden at regular intervals. Inside are frames of colored glass, red and green, so lights are red, green and white, depending how you stand in relation to light. The colors are very distinct. The white is "clear course." You do not notice them by daylight but they are very bright at night.

My letter is not very interesting I'm afraid, but I can not tell you how lovely it was at sunset and sunrise, the gulls that fly constantly, and the bright colored houses and green fields.

SUSANNA.

A LOG CABIN VACATION

Dear Sisters: Rain interferred with my plans today so instead of doing what I had intended, I will write you a little more about my Maine vacation,—the first I ever spent in a log cabin. It was a cabin-de-luxe however, with hot and cold water, porcelain sinks, tubs and city conveniences. The cabin was made of spruce logs peeled, notched at the corners and laid horizontally. Instead of sods, clay or plaster, oakum was used between the logs. This made a much cleaner looking job. The partitions inside of the cabin were all made of smaller logs placed upright and similarly caulked.

The large living room has windows on three sides, and two outside doors which open onto piazzas, one on the north and one on the south of the cabin. At one side of the living room is a huge stone chimney and fireplace which we used nearly every morning or evening. Comfortable chairs and couch, beautiful hand drawn rugs on the floor and hand blocked printed linen in old fashioned designs at the windows made the room charming.

A victrola and radio furnished entertainment and a telephone obligingly connected us with the outside world. A deer skin and other trophys adorn the wall. Old fashioned guns hang over the mantel and polished brass candlesticks stand on its shelf. On either side of the big fireplace are "toad-stools," made from spruce logs about ten inches in diameter, cut to the height of a chair. A two-inch section sawed from a larger log and nailed to the top of each makes giant toad-stools" of them. They are easy to move and just the thing to sit on when toasting marshmallows over the coals. There was plenty of reading matter, including books on birds and flowers which I found useful.

Guest room, kitchen and living-room were on the first floor, one end of the latter being used as a dining room at mealtime. The long refectory table with its rustic base and polished two-inch pulank top was equally good whether used as a dining or a library table.

Upstairs were two bedrooms and a bathroom. What more could any one want who pines for "a lodge in some vast wilderness?"

Under the back porch roof, paper wasps were building a nest. Before I arrived they had completed a section about the size of my finger. It was a little larger at the top and tapered toward the bottom. It was hung from a rafter and looked like a piece of smooth, cream-colored wood with a hole in the lower end. Then the wasps began to put on the first paper covering. This paper is made from the scrapings from weather-beaten wood. Two layers were finished and a third begun while I was there. I did not see any cells but think they were inside the cream colored section. It was interesting to watch the wasps at their work, but not so puzzling as were the actions of some eave swallows under the other porch.

Six young birds in the nest were being fed by four old birds. We pulled out the oakum from between the logs so we could see into the nest. When nearly grown we saw one of the fledglings sitting on the porch railing ready tofly. An hour later only three were reported in the nest. The next morning we counted heads and there were five in the nest. Every time we counted there seemed to be a different number there. It got to be a regular game. "Guess how many swallows are there now." Then one morning they were all gone. 'Gone for good, this time," we said, but the next morning three black heads all in a row were looking down at us when we looked up at the nest. That day they went for good. I supposed that young birds after leaving their nest never went back. Perhaps these were exceptions to the rule. What do you Social Corner bird lovers know about it?

I saw many flowers which I have never seen here. Fireweed and devil's paint brush were abundant, as were the graceful Canada lilies and the Canada thistle. We arranged masses of blue vetch in a copper bow. It made a stunning decoration for the table. The dainty wood sorrel and fragrant twin flower were also new to me. But the things I loved best of all were the bunch berries. The sides of the road were thick with them,—each plant nestling close to the ground was like a butter hole bouquet on the bosom of Mother Earth, with it's six green leaves arranged symmetrically around a bunch of scarlet berries. They looked Christmasy as did the evergreen trees growing above them.

Shall I tell you about the toads I saw? If I do I know someone will say, "She's a nature fakir, all right," but what I am about to relate is true. Six of us went down to the lake one day. Soon after starting we saw tiny toads hopping about in the road. They were brown in color and about half an inch long. I caught one in my hand. Nearer the lake they were more abundant, there being literally thousands of them by the sides of the road. In places they were like honey bees swarming being two and three deep. As we approached there was wild excitment among them. Hop-hop, such a helter-skelter scrambling I never saw before. One could not walk without stepping on some of them. Where did they come from? Where were they going? Have any of you Cornerites ever seen any such sight? If so I would be glad to know about it.

Before I close I want to say to American Loyalty—that I think the "chenille looking blossoms" may be Princess Feather. If it is, it may become a pest if the seeds are allowed to selfsow. Mine did.

Pernickety—You have my sympathy. I came back from Maine to find my little garden more or less of a wreck on account of hot weather and lack of water.

And now, goodbye.

THE FRIENDLY VOICE.

FACTS ABOUT CHEESE

Dear Social Corner Members and Editor: It is quite a space since I wrote my last letter. It is no use to make excuses for some have one cause, and some something entirely different. I find no time like the present, if you have work that has to be done, get right on your job in the morning and do it. What you do in the morning you are sure of. It is a beautiful morning this morning and today is the day for Foxglove's picnic. I suppose so many are going through the air like an airplane getting ready to take the trip to Southington. The weather man has ordered a grand day for them, Hope no bad luck shows up before then. Was glad to see Auntie No. 1 was improving, am glad she is not going to try to have the annual picnic this year, for it is taxing her nerves too much. As we get older we must take care of ourselves if we want to enjoy this world.

I was so surprised to read Joan's death in the paper. She was almost the first Corner Sister that I got acquainted with, and she always enjoyed playing the piano for their marching. I knew she was not well and was thinking of sending her a card, and soon I saw her death in the paper. She was so apt in so many ways, it was such a disadvantage for her, in not being able to hear.

Some of the sisters have referred to the shaker bonnets we used to wear. I remember them very well. I wore one to school, it was No. 11 and had a green chambray cape and a bow on top of the same material; also I have heard my aunt speak of the Tippecanoe sun bonnets they used to wear. That was in the days when John Tyler was president. She said you would often hear the rhyme Tippecanoe and Tyler too.

I was much interested in the article that Auntie Jane wrote quite a few weeks ago, about cheese, telling how it was made, and it was just the same way my mother used to make it too. Many a night after we were through with our work, we would go to the garden and gather sage leaves and corn leaves, and put that with the cheese curd and make sage cheese. There are different kinds of cheese. Cheese is a delicacy, and yet it is a staple food. It is meat for the French people, and is used in place of potatoes to the Dutch. It is a breakfast and lunch food for the Swiss people. It is the oldest prepared food in the world, with the exception of butter. There is a story told of the origin of cheese. A traveler in Asia sat down one evening to refresh himself with a drink of milk, which he carried in a sack made of a sheep's stomach, and when he tipped the bottle to his lips, instead of good milk, a sickish substance flowed down his gullet. He cut open the sack and found at the bottom the first cheese that had been formed by the action of the milk of the rennet in the not completely dried sheep's stomach, and that is the origin of the first cheese. But today we have over 500 different kinds of cheese, all made of milk, but treated differently. Most kinds of cheese are better to have a little age to them. The pot cheese is better the day it is made.

I will try and write more some other time. My letter is extensive on cheese. I have no inclination to be a professor on making cheese. I have many and many made. also know what a cheese press is. Best wishes to all the sick and shutins, hope they will all be on hand at our meetings in September.

COMFORT.

It isn't difficult to convince some married men that it is good to be alone.

A VISIT TO STORRS

Dear Editor and Members: Well the showers did some good any way. They resurrected Milky Way's cucumbers when she was mourning that she wouldn't get another one. I guess they were thankfully received by every one. It was most too bad that Sunday wasn't a good day. It would be just awful if I had to stay home As it was we went down "to the point" in the afternoon and the sun came out just lovely. Pyrethrum and her sister went with us and we looked for oysters and mussels on the rocks until we had cut our hands in several places and decided it wasn't worth while. The tide was out so I couldn't practice for the swimming marathon I am encouraged though. I can do most three yards without swallowing the ocean. The boys brought down some corn when they came back from doing chores and we cooked it and ate it by the fire. It was most dark when we came home and Pyrethrum's husband was on the point of coming to look us up. As he had to get his own dinner and supper he probably thought he was in danger of having to get his own breakfast. Pyrethrum had left plenty cooked but that isn't like having it placed before him on the table. Believe me I'm steering clear of him lately.

Mr. M.—Was that fifty cents meant for a person or a car?

Last Thursday Milky Way and I with our various husbands went to Storrs where Fram and Home Week was being held. We got started about nine o'clock (and for a wonder the men didn't have to wait for us women) and every-thing went lovely until we came to that road under construction out of Willimantic. We would have probably known about it if we had read our papers properly but never-the-less we ate our peck of dirt and good measure before we reached the college where the new road is going to end.

Milky Way and I separated from the men, after planning to meet in the dining hall at noon, and went immediately to the Community house where a lecture was just finishing about nutrition. Following that Miss Eddy gave a very interesting talk and demonstration on home lighting and illustrated it with slides showing the right and wrong way to light a room Miss Eddy comes from the General Electric company. From there we went to the dining hall and thanks to Miss Russell we had a ride over thereby saving a long wait in line For lunch we had chicken a la mode, green corn, peas, tomatoes, potatoes, ice cream, pudding, iced tea or milk, and rolls.

After lunch we went through the green houses and looked at the flower gardens then back to the armory where Miss Ella Gardner gave a talk on the selection of plays and a demonstration as to how a poem or story could be acted in pantomime with very little preparation. From there we went into the armory where the honorary recognition exercises were held and then to the Beech building where Miss Eddy had a class in lamp shade making. I will tell you in my next letter how she makes shades so I will skip that for now.

From there to the cattle show where we met "our men" and then started for home. We came back another way to eliminate the construction part and I enjoyed it very much as it was all new to me. Down by the Franklin Grange hall we stopped and ate a lunch (that we had packed before starting in the morning) and then on for home. A very nice day all around even to the rain that came late in the evening that we needed so badly.

Tonight, the Grange members are going on a moonlight sail on the Elizabeth Ann out of Stonington. As good a Granger as I try to be they couldn't convince me that I should go on board that boat after my Block Island experience. I'll take my sails on dry land, thank you. And besides I want to go to Washington County Pomona tomorrow at Hope Valley.

True Blue:—Thanks for the recipe, it was delicious pudding.

Pernickety:—Don't stop writing of your "Paradise." It is very interesting to know how you combat "discouragments."

A Friendly Voice:—I see there are black and white kitties in Maine as well as Connecticut. I haven't had any since but I know a woman who has a whole family of them under her sewing room and they never bother.

Was sorry of the passing on of Joan and Perserverance.

Pleasant vacations. See you at the club and picnic if noting happens.

A DAY'S OUTING

Dear Social Corner: The kitchen clock was striking nine when I locked the door Thursday morning, and it was just 5 o'clock when I returned from a day's outing. I had travelled about 120 miles but the trip meant far more to me than just mileage. It meant enjoying new scenes in the company of my sisters and family and also studying the flower gardens at Storrs. As we rode along we kept our eyes open for beautiful scenery, houses that we should like to live in, note-worthy gardens and striking wild flowers.

Upon our arrival at the college grounds we ate our lunch and then while the men were visiting the barns, the rest of us made a tour of the greenhouses and gardens. We made notes of what we found interesting and regretted that not all of the plants were labeled. I learned the name of a plant that I had been growing for two years, and saw a number of new kinds that I want to try raising. I do not care for browallia elata, but the variety called speciosa major has larger blooms of the most brilliant ultramarine blue and is worth having. This was growing in the greenhouse but it may be grown outside.

I was interested in the annual poinsettia because I had been reading about it and had never seen any before. This belongs to the same family as snow on the mountain, another interesting annual. There was a bed of torenia with its odd blue blossoms. One thing that I must have in my garden is pentstmon in white or rose. As there were about 70 kinds of annuals it would take too long to mention all of them. But I do not want to leave out the zinnias and marigolds. These were in full bloom and their gaudy colors are fine where a bold effect is desired. For a soft effect I should recommend either annual phlox or lockspur.

Then I made a list of the combinations of plants used in the show beds. The yellow cannas and pale blue salvia looked especially interesting. Somehow the beds of petunias were not as pleasing as I have found them at other visits. The tall growing sorts in mixed colors do not look so well in formal beds as do the dwarf ones in separate colors.

After leaving the college we rode through Stafford Springs to Southbridge and then on to Putnam. The scenery was picturesque in places and we saw many charming houses. Most of the window boxes looked thrifty but the other gardens were dry and dusty like those at home. We saw several patches of purple iron weed, a wild flower that is not common in our section. Along the streams and ponds we noticed a lot of that pinkish lavender flower called tick trefoil.

Upon our arrival home I got out my favorite garden catalogue and added to the notes that I scribbled beside the descriptions. Later I wrote a record of my observations in my garden notebook. Then tired from the long day, I was lulled to sleep by the sound of the much needed rain. And thus ended a perfect day.

SISTER RODY.

MESSAGES TO CORNERITES

Social Corner: Well, what a nice little rain fell in two showers. We could use more of it as the ground is so dry. The man of the house stays to wet our vegetables and flowers.

Well, in a short time we go back to the Buckingham. I did not realize the time was so near until True Rose spoke to me of it.

Sister Rody—I went in a store and priced and looked at those beautiful gazing globes. I could get set $35 for the globe and pedestal. I would look for some boy to throw a stone and break it, as its just to me a looking glass bottle and easily broken; but they are so pretty and with the head of the house most three months home from work I just can't risk a globe and a stone, so I'll do my gazing in my flower bed.

Foxglove—I have been through your home town a few years ago. Hope everybody who goes will enjoy your everybody who went enjoyed your picnic. Our car is busy all the time so can't use it for picnic, etc. Son drives one thousand miles a week, 52 weeks in the year. Am in hope of an emergency coupe for his work this winter, then I'll take in a picnic.

Libby—I asked after your mother the past week and a missprint of Lily was used. I had a lovely letter from Mawb. Oh how we will miss her moving away.

Poor Joan she too will be missed.

Red Rose and daughter are enjoying two weeks at Lake Sunapee, N. H. She expects to see Mawb when out on auto trips sightseeing.

Quid Nic—Heard daughter A—— was at their cousins and she told her who I was. Do you remember J. M. away back in the sixties in Bozrah? Did you tell Dad Shaw about the trick the mule did. did you?

Black Eye Susie—Had a nice letter from our friend Dad Shaw.

Aunt Rosa—You look lovely and cool on the new porch. I think often of Gang since she passed on.

Woodside—Several years ago I had an A1 waiter in hotel room at my house. He told me that (before the war this was) that $7 and $10 per week was their wages meal furnished in the hotel and room out-side, their laundry to pay for which left little. The house expected their tips to make up for small weekly wage. I know of people who never tip. I feel guilty not to, therefore always leave something in silver under my plate. The rule I believe is 10 per cent of your bill, or if $1, 10c isn't bending one's pocket book. I wouldn't give if I couldn't with a clear conscience. I would rather tip the porter than go our mussed from the train. This is my idea given in reply to your question.

I see our S. C. editor has been having his vacation. I trust very much he enjoyed it, he surely earns it.

My best wishes to those in sorrow, sickness and any trouble, for a return of happiness.

CALLA LILY.

HOLDING HER PLACE

Social Corner Editor and Sisters: Just a few lines to let you all know how I am getting along and to keep my space in the Social Corner page. We have been having some hot weather, although the thunder shower this morning has cleared the air and now it is lovely, a nice breeze and the sun shining. I have put in a very busy summer so far, I have been to the shore, have been to picnics and church fairs, supper and have been to visit in my old home town. It was so hot could not think of making many calls, only upon those in its neighborhood. Had a pleasant time. I also saw pictures of Byrd. It was a very hot day and it did seem so natural that it is and snow might melt, "but it did not seem to."

Another pleasant visit was with Aunty No. 1 for a few minutes. She was out on the back porch and looked fine. It seems so good to know she is improving all the time. I met with Uncle's niece that man visiting there. when I was with Aunty No. 1, two years ago. I also had the great pleasure of spending a few days with Sweet William and her family.

Nellie Bly: I hope to see the new home some time.

Johan's family have my sympathy When I put the wood box in Social Corner she was one of the first to write and ask for a place on it.

Hope all sick one's are improving.

SISTER READY.

TWO HELPFUL HINTS

Dear Social Corner Friends: Had not expected to write so soon again, but as I received a prize check, I must thank the editor for that, so will write a few lines for the page. I was much interested in the letters by Forget-me-never and Susanna. I have English friends who have told me about the Horse guards and Royal guards, which reminds me of something which one friend told me. She was trying to find some special place and had asked persons whom she met on the street and as it happened they were strangers in the city as she was and could not tell her. So she spied a guard standing like a statue and over to him she hurried and asked him to direct her to "the place." He didn't move his eyes, just stared straight ahead and out of the corner of his mouth mumbled some words in a low tone which she could not understand. So she repeated her question in a louder tone and he flushed to the ears and mumbled again. She gave it up then, but the next person she met could direct her to the place she wanted to see. So "she was on her way" much to her sorrow she learned later, that she had made a great mistake in speaking to the guard and that he was not allowed to speak, when on duty.

Now I will pass along something which will interest the sisters who have flower beds—read it in a farm paper which is published in Montreal, Canada.

"Do not throw away a sprinkler top can, such as talcum powder comes in, that is if it has a removable top. Keep it as a seed sower for very fine seeds. They shake out so easily. Larger seeds can be sown from cans with larger holes in top."

And here is another hint which I am trying out. As I do not have stoves in my home, that means that every bit of paper, string, etc., must go in the waste basket. I found that when I had torn letters in tiny bits, sometimes when the men emptied ashcans the tiny scraps would fly around the yard when there was a bit of wind. So now, I keep the large envelopes which some of the shops use for small articles—also small paper bags and I keep one hanging under the window sill in the kitchen, and when I tear a letter in bits just drop them into bag or envelope and when it is nearly full turn over top and drop into waste basket. Since doing this there are no more scraps of letters flying around the yard. And I think I have written enough for this time so will "ring off."

AUNT SUSIE.

MESSAGES TO MEMBERS.

Dear Social Corner Members: My, but doesn't it seem great to have some cool clear air once more and the bit of rain did so much good. I do hope we get some more soon. I was so sorry to read of the death of Joan. I knew she was not well but did not know she was seriously ill. So many will miss her. She so enjoyed the meetings and was always so willing to play for them. Club 6 has lost a member too, Mrs. Sarah Spink whose pen name was Perseverance. She never attended many of the meetings, but when she did, always recited for us.

Golden Glow: I too am wondering where you are now. I saw, a place advertised and wondered if it was yours from the description.

Foxglove: How I would like to attend your picnic but, it will not be possible. I hope some one from Club 6 will be able to attend, you have been to see us several times. I see that Prairie Chicken has planned a picnic for Club 6 on Tuesday, the 19th. I know this meant a lot for her to do, she is so busy with her homework inside and out. It certainly is very nice of Wheeler Wenr and Yellow Jacket to have it at their house. It is a lovely place for a picnic and I think all who can should make a special effort to attend for those who are planning for it want to feel repaid for their trouble. Everyone wants to bring something good for the dinner and their dishes so as not to make any more trouble for the hostesses than is necessary. Shall hope to see many visitors from the other clubs as well as many of our own members. By several joining together and getting someone to take a load or two it does not make it expensive for anyone. Prairie Chicken has already given the directions for getting to the home of Wheeler and anyone in North Stonington village will tell you where Mrs. George D. Coates lives.

Milksham: I enjoyed your letter about your trip. I save all the letters about trips and imagine I'll take some of them. Everyone has day dreams you know even if we know they won't come true.

Sumac: Some callers you had, there seems to be a good many of them around this year.

Sister Rhody: Glad you wrote about the pressure cooker. I have sometimes thought of getting one. I think my letter is getting too long.

MY WINDOW VINE

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: My first glance the coming day is toward the sweet, little lonely vine, that twines along my window frame. It nods a silent welcome, smiles, beckons me to its side and assures me of its friendliness. I stroke its shining leaves, and it flutters and confidentially whispers "I will be of comfort. I will not break your heart with maudlin criticism, I will neither desert nor deceive you."

In the evening as I sit by its side, it is my sole companion and solace, and its rustling leaves bring a song of peace. When the further darkness falls, I hear it singing to itself and murmuring, "I am so happy, so happy."

When the thunder clouds and the rain beat its tiny frame, which droops and shivers for the moment, it arises from under the darkness and thrusts out its trembling, dripping leaves to meet the coming sunshine.

I have watched this little vine day by day, climbing its way from the door stone; from floor to floor until it reached my window frame, and has crept over the roof beyond my vision.

In this great city of wanton vandalism, it knows but the silent walls of its support; it meets not the hand of human destruction or despotism that would tear its heart and fling it into the street below. It lives its little life in peace and happiness until nature has spent itself and it crumbles and fades into the dust from which it came.

Were it able to speak it would say "do not be troubled or unhappy, the same unchangeable law of nature which lifted me to your side and leads me to my infinite rest, ultimately will lead you to the same quiet rest and forever." This is my bond with the darling, little lonely vine which twines above my window frame.

THE LITTLE SPINSTER.

SENDS OLD RECIPE

Dear Social Corner: Such a nice surprise today! A letter from Pernickety with a big basket of Shirley Forglove seeds. Enough to supply the whole neighborhood, too, which I shall proceed to do. Thanks. Pernickety. You are surely generous.

True Blue—I shall be very much pleased to receive the lilies, and also glad to return the favor if I have any plants that you would like.

Am sending an old recipe for watermelon sweet pickle that some may like to try:

Watermelon sweet pickle—4 lbs of the prepared rind, 2 lbs. sugar, 1 pt. vinegar, 1-2 cup each of stick cinnamon, cassia buds and whole allspice, and 1-4 cup whole cloves.

I boil the prepared rind in salted water until tender, drain, and add to the already made sweet pickle. Let boil for a few minutes and seal in glass jars.

Pedestrian: Perhaps that recipe was the one you wanted. I quite agree with you in preferring the blue bachelor's buttons, but one of the prettiest things in my garden now, is the pink larkspur (annual). Also have it in white, blue, purple and a deeper pink, but the rose pink is by far the prettiest.

American Loyalty—Have you learned the name of your flower? I remember seeing a plant of that description years ago in a friend's garden. It was a cockscomb and I think she called it Prince's Feather.

Royanco—The Chinese ofrget-me-nots do seem to belong to the "stickley-prickley" family, but they are such a lovely bit of heaven's own blue that we can forgive them. Mine last for a long time, though. Cannot see why yours fade so quickly.

Would like to have attended Foxglove's picnic today but was not able to go. Have ben to two picnics this sumer which sets a record for me.

BETSY BOBBET.

THAT BARREL OF POTATOES.

Dear Corner Sisters: Sumac and several others have asked about my barrel of potatoes, so I shall tell you the outcome of it.

The vines had dried and the plants in general indicated that harvest time was drawing near. I just couldn't resist dumping the barrel right away to see what was what. Well I found it as my Alaskan friend predicted. There were potatoes, any quantity of them, but they were small. Perhaps if I would have waited three or four weeks longer, they might have grown larger. Nevertheless, I am convinced the stunt "can" be worked, and worked successfully if everything is done just right and the soil if of proper kind. The potatoes we planted in the field aren't large either. So I am inclined to think our soil is not quite rich enough. I have made up my mind to try the barrel again next year, and to use leaf mold entirely instead of garden soil. I shall also be more particular about the sort of seed I shall use. There is this to say, there wasn't a single potato bug on the plants in the barrel. And that is something, for there were bugs on those in the field.

I wonder if any of the sisters have a good recipe for Rhode Island Johnny cake? Ever since my men folk were in Providence and tasted the Johnny cakes there, they have been singing tehir praises. I would greatly appreciate having a good recipe for the cakes.

FLOWERS AT STORRS

Dear Social Corner. Sister Rhody told you that we went to Storrs, didn't she? And we had such a lot of fun looking at all the flowers together! We like to think that sometime we may have flowers as beautiful. Maybe we will if we keep on, who knows?

We spent most of our time there among the annuals—the glads weren't open enough to be really interesting and neither of us are very much interested in dahlias though they had some gorgeous ones opening.

I had a piece of paper and a pencil and I listed most of the annuals—such a lot of them. We were agreeably surprised to find that we knew the names of most of them and it was a very simple matter to read the labels and learn the names of those that were strange to us.

The showiest flowers were the zinnias and marigolds. We had never seen the quilled zinnias before so we spent an extra minute or two looking at them. There were several two-toned ones that were very pretty indeed. And the little dwarf marigolds were masses of bright colored blooms. I have some here at home but they do not bloom as freely—perhaps because of the lack of water.

Nigella, or love in a mist, or devil in a bush, or love in a puff, or whatever you want to call it was one of the oddest annuals and a plant with thistle-like foliage and poppy-like flowers was another. I have looked in all the catalogues since I came home and I haven't been able to find a description of it in any of them.

The beds in front of the horticultural building are always lovely. We liked the ones of heliotrope bordered with variegated geraniums the best though the large beds of blue salvias, dwarf marigolds, yellow cannas and flowering tobacco was also very pretty. I imagine that that would be at its best in the early morning when the flowering tobacco was fully open.

We looked at one bed and thought it to be snapdragons and then Sister Rhody looked more closely and discovered that it was penstemon. The blooms had not been open long and but few plants carried flowers but the effect was good. I found a short description in one of my seed catalogues which says that it may be treated as a perennial in warm localities. Of course it is too cold to try to winter it here but if the seeds are sown early it ought to bloom well as an annual for us.

We were rather disappointed in our browallia this year because the blooms are so small and we were pleased to find growing at Storrs a kind with much larger brighter blooms.

Wish I could tell you about all the flowers in detail but it is getting late and maybe you don't want to hear all about them anyway! But in just a few minutes we gained enough information and enthusiasm to keep us pepped up for another year. So, wasn't that trip worthwhile?

BUREAU KITCHEN CABINET

Dear Social Corner Members: Just as I was getting up ambition to write about the New London County Farm Bureau kitchen tour some good sister beat me to it. I am glad some of the Social Corner members are interested also in farm bureau work. I went on the tour, taking some of the members of my group. I joined the tour at the first stop in Groton, at the home of the "lady who has so many lovely old dishes" who is a particular friend of mine, a Social Corner member, and a member of my farm bureau class. The "Kitchen Campaign" has met with an enthusiastic reception by the women and each one is trying to scheme and plan to make her kitchen just a bit more attractive and efficient.

In my own case I had no kitchen cabinet and no room for any if I possessed one, so I finally hit upon the scheme of remodelling an old bureau, which was in fairly good condition and which would not take up half the space of a cabinet. My husband who is not a professional carpenter by any means, but fairly handy with hammer and saw, did the remodelling.

First he removed the two tiny drawers, one on each side of the top of the bureau, then carefully took off the top, cut down the bureau to the second drawer and replaced the top. Of course we had removed the four drawers. This lowered the top surface so that I can stand erect and place my hands flat on the top surface without stooping. This bureau is on stout casters so that I can move it anywhere just by a slight push. He then cut the three remaining drawer supports through the center, bracing those on the right and placing shelves on the supports in place of the drawers. The left half has all braces removed making a large space for flour and sugar cans. The shelves at the right will hold all cooking tins and dishes, the upper one being used for my tray of spices, salt, etc. The top surface is used as a cooking surface. As I have a nice molding board I decided to retain it, so I have put an eye in one end which hangs the board when not in use on a hook on the back of the bureau. This bureau is rolled to the left of the gas stove so that I can prepare foods and put them in the oven without moving. When my cooking is done I can roll my bureau with its soiled dishes to the sink where I wash and replace them in the bureau for next time, without moving from the sink. The bureau is then pushed back to the wall out of the way. A window shade serves as a cover for the shelves.

The bureau is enameled white with green trim to match the stove. Total cost of renovating said bureau was 65c for enamel.

While I am writing about helps I would like to mention a tool which my husband brought me from the twenty-five cent store. It has three curved prongs on a pole about a yard long, it is like a miniature potato digger and is splendid to reach under rose bushes to stir up the soil around the roots, saves many a scratched arm. Pernickety, Aries and others who have gardens would find this a useful tool. I have enjoyed the garden letters immensely but I have often thought this dry summer of the saying "Blessed be nothing" as I have watched seedlings I had carefully tended shrivel up and die in the scorching heat. The hose didn't seem to do much good except to my electric bill, and did lower my well dangerously.

Was glad to see letters from Iola, The Friendly Voice and Susanna again. It almost seems like taking your vacation with them to read their pleasant letters.

I'm afraid I'm rather out of season but I still remain.

WINTER ROBIN.

AT FOXGLOVE'S PICNIC

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: Yesterday, Wednesday, Aug. 13th, was an ideal day, and Lowthorpe and I started at 8:15 a. m. for Southington for a picnic held at the home of Foxglove, a grand hostess. We had about a 68 mile drive to get to our destination, but it was more than enjoyable. Went by way of Colchester to get to Middletown, and when we got to Meriden, and got out of my car I asked a man the way to Southington. He told me he was a stranger in Meriden and said I had better ask some one else, but he says if you kep on the road you are going it will take you to Southington as I came down here that way yesterday. After leaving Meriden a few miles away I was held up by state officers who asked me if I had any corn in my car. I told them I had not. One of the men wanted to know if I had a key for the back of my car. I informed him it was not locked, so he lifted the lid. My veterinary cases, etc., were on display. I carry a rubber hose in my car that I use in my business. (No questions were asked). I told them I was a veterinarian. They smiled and said we have to ask. (I thought to myself of course you do. I do as I am a state officer myself for the Connecticut Humane society.)

Our next stop was Southington Center where I got out and inquired of a young man if he knew where West Center street was. He said he didn't know, but he soon came to his senses and thought the street ont which proved right. We had not got up to the house when Lowthorpe says—

"I smell something good cooking."

We followed the driveway to the kitchen of Foxglove's home. At the dinner table I saw this attractive dish that smelled so good coming up the hill. It was something called By-Gosh, or Goo-Losh. But the Goo-Losh was mighty good By-Gosh. As well as the rest of our tempting dinner. We had a musical entertainment after dinner, consisting of solos and vocal duets and after giving the hostess a rising vote of thanks we left for our homes at 4 p. m. This is one of the happy days Lowthorpe and I will ever remember. We had over 40 at this event and I am glad the Cornerites went so far from their homes to cheer up Foxglove, who is most cheerful.

MEADOW LARK.

PICNICS AND THEN SOME

Dear Social Corner Editor and Friends:—Not having written to the Corner for several months, I am tempted to send a few lines, at what I might call the end of "A Perfect Day", Wednesday, August 13th. Meadow Lark and I have just returned from a delightful outing at Southington, where a company of Social Corner members and friends (about forty in all) were hospitably entertained at the home of Foxglove, on West Center street. Although the trip was quite some distance from our home town, yet the drive was most enjoyable and the weather ideal for an outdoor picnic. Leaving early that morning, to be exact, at 8:15 we went by way of Colchester, Marlboro, Portland, Middletown, Meriden to Southington, where, while we partook of a bountiful dinner we could overlook Southington mountain. The agreeable hostess and her willing helpers among them, Whirlwind and Jennie all that I knew, though there were several others who assisted Foxglove in serving baked beans, delicious chop-suey, with cabbage relish, sliced tomatoes, rolls, salads, several kinds of tempting cake, peaches, pears and permit me to say about the finest coffee I ever drank, and punch and soft drinks if anyone wished them. Foxglove's very pretty and attractive home was thrown open to all and the hospitality of said home comforts was much appreciated by all who availed themselves of the privileges bestowed upon them. Included in this sociable company of Cornerites were five gentlemen who made the gathering all the more pleasant with their presence. Meadow Lark led in singing the Doxology justprior to the dinner.

Following the dinner, upon hearing a beautiful soprano voice and thinking, it came over the radio, Meadow Lark ventured to enter the living room and there found a most attractive young miss, playing the piano and singing to the pleasure of a room full of people. This spectacle invited intrusion on the part of Meadow Lark who joined in with his splendid tenor voice which blended very finely with the voice of this perfect stranger to him. After unceremoniously introducing himself, this very fine singer and and he sang several beautiful duets, with the young lady stranger playing the accompaniments.

While I have mentioned how perfect the day was the beautiful dinner, hospitable hostess etc., let me state how very magnificient the scenery was all along the route to and from Southington. Picturesque lakes and mountains, gorgeous scenery with very heavy foliage, flowers, good roads and pleasant company added much to the occasion. Speaking of the company, Meadow Lark and myself have had the pleasure of meeting some very fine people in the various outings we have attended the past ten years or more. Now I would likewise mention the other picnics we have thus far attended this summer, where we also have had a tempting dinner and many of the same agreeable people present also. Take for instance the picnic at Bay State's situated on the picturesque Thames River, early in the season. Such a fine clam chowder as she made for her guests, and with all the other good things, that surely was a day ing to be remembered as when some were returning to their homes they experienced one of the worst tempests known around this part of the globe. Terrible lightning, very loud thunder, hail stones as large as marbles and pouring rain which came down in sheets for more than one half hour. This was the experience Meadow Lark and I had, which we will never forget. However, for those who did not go in bathing after the dinner it was surely a restful treat on the banks of that river which borders her home. The next picnic we attended was at Canterbury Bells'. Here, too a nice dinner was served followed during the afternoon by an entertaining programme of songs and recitations. Many present took pleasure in viewing the large assortment of flowers at Canterbury Bells' home, where among those present were several of our good Franklin and Willimantic members. Now, last but not least, the picnic at Alfara's home Wednesday, July 30th. Such a dinner as was put before the gathering of 75 that day, (certainly fit for a king). Those present, surely did justice to the repast set before them when noon arrived. Seated under a very large tent, this is the menu set before us: Mashed potato, chicken pie, summer squash, cucumbers, salads, olives, rolls, baked beans, string beans, green corn, cakes, pies, cheese, coffee, home-made root beer and fruit. Think I have mentioned all, and trust I have done justice to each and all of the very cordial hostesses and their hard working helpers in making such outings so very enjoyable for all who attend.

It has been to the pleasure of Meadow Lark and I, to have some of our good friends not far distant, attend these four gatherings. Hope they will continue and in the near future trust they will join the Corner. Their presence is most welcome and they have made a most favorable impression. The auto guests they frequently bring with them, Althea and Lonesome Pine, it is always a pleasure to meet, as well as the good sisters Olga and Bachelor-Maid, and others.

True Blue: I truly sanction your nice expression of Joan. I have known her for more than thirty-five years and she was always the same.

Debby: Whenever you meet Meadow Lark, do not fail to shake hands with him. I am sure he appreciates your cordiality when he extends you his hand.

Prairie Chicken: Trust all will be quite favorable to attend your picnic Tuesday the 19th. That is our intentions now, weather and all permitting.

AN AMATEUR SLEUTH ALMOST PROVES TO HIMSELF THAT THE GIRL HE LOVES IS A THIEF

HENRI, the chief designer of Racourt Freres, walked the floor and moaned and held his aching head and in between moans and gestures he called upon heaven with flaming French adjectives that nothing, not a single infinitesimal, minute thing, was too horrible, too bad for this, the most depraved, the lowest, the most utterly unmentionable of all human vultures. Henri was having a tantrum, and next to a creative spasm Henri's tantrums ranked first.

Brice Atterbury Racourt, the pleasant-faced, quiet young man who only three weeks back had stepped into his deceased uncle's shoes and business, sat at his huge mahogany desk and toyed with a pencil and listened a great deal and spoke very little. Brice was thinking that this was a funny sort of dramatic scene to indulge in, all because of a few clothes.

"Shut up, Henri," advised Janey Sturgis, the foreign buyer of the firm; "all that wailing and gnashing of teeth doesn't get us anywhere; what we've got to do is hunt this—this—boulevard buccaneer to earth and stop his plundering our exclusive styles!"

"But yes, Mme. Jeanne, but certainly—and how shall we do that?" beamed Henri; "already we have listed that gown as an exclusive model, and it is positive that it would sell for $400—and now—?" and by Henri's eloquent shrug one gathered that $7.98 wouldn't surprise him a bit as the selling price of the desecrated model. "Four of them I counted with my own eyes at the St. Regis tea dance, and probably a dozen more scattered all over town!"

"And I'll bet," murmured Janey wisely, "that every last one of 'em was sold as an absolutely original, exclusive model!'

"For that I tear my hair!" wailed Henri anew, "and to think that I should live to see the day when a creation of mine should be brought out by the gross!" and there were real tears of regret glistening on the fat round face of the emotional, grieved Henri as he contemplated his ruin.

"Some one," observed Brice quietly, "must have either lost her card or else brought an untrustworthy companion along to our Friday afternoon showing." "I tell you," repeated Madame Louise patiently, "I know every single person who sat through that opening, and not one of them was even remotely connected with anything like dressmaking or drawing."

"Then how," demanded Brice coolly, "did a copy of that dress get out if it has only been exhibited once and you can vouch for every person who saw it that once?" and every one was silent, thinking the matter over for the hundredth time.

As the silence deepened and each one wrestled silently with the knotty problem, Brice brought to bear the New England shrewdness that was a heritage from his beautiful, clever Yankee mother, and said quietly: "We're not getting anywhere like this. I have a plan that may or may not work out, and I hope you'll all cooperate with me by giving me your luncheon addresses and the names of any other places you visit during luncheon hour." And the only person whom he failed to ask that question, "You draw or sketch?" was Henri; it was most obvious that the creator of Racourt Freres gowns not only drew and sketched, but did everything else that was remotely associated with creating gowns.

THAT noon Brice Racourt dined at the same little cafe down the avenue that was regularly frequented by Henri; and he even sat at the same table that Henri sat at, and in a way Brice was rewarded. For it was at the little secluded table that Henri frequented so regularly that Brice met the girl.

Just when Brice stopped thinking about the girl's softly curling ash-blond hair or wondering about her great, velvety brown eyes or wishing that she wouldn't tantalize him so with her soft, sweet smile, he never knew. His French blood took account of her modish clothes: noted with approval the smart, woolly brown suit and the cream-colored silk crepe blouse, the coffee-colored long gloves and the hat that fitted her lovely head like a tight little helmet; and he would have been less than human had he not noticed her long, slim feet, shod in the ruddiest of warm brown suede, with an odd, intriguing buckle that was Colonial in appearance but in reality was the last gasp from Paris. But it was his Yankee blood that warned him shrewdly when she asked him if he was not Mr. Racourt, of Racourt Freres. Although he smiled at her warmly and introduced himself, his brain was saying: "Watch your step, Brice; this may be the thief you're looking for" He was actually murmuring that he was just leaving and couldn't he drive her to her destination?

He could and did, and after dropping her at the docks where the fast liner from Paris was due in an hour, Brice drove slowly back uptown, his thoughts in a chaos.

She was so beautiful and so cultured and so sweet and innocent-looking—why, she couldn't stoop to such a trick—as stealing a designer's model and selling it to some cheap imitator! And yet—how did she know his name? and was it coincidence that she happened to be sitting at Henri's table or was it part of her systematic business of looting Henri's mind of all its brilliant ideas before they were even hatched? Perhaps she sat here and watched him absently sketching some idea roughly on scratch paper before he got down to the business of translating it to actual drafting sheet. Or perhaps she talked with him, drawing him out and luring him to talk over his plans so she could steal them for her own again!

Well, time alone would tell. Only it was a beastly shame that the only girl he'd ever cared two pins about knowing better should be under such a ghastly cloud of suspicion! Perhaps he wouldn't mind it so much if he'd ever been much of a hand for girls.

Meanwhile, he was learning everything he could about Pamela Lane. Where she lived and with whom; what her occupation was and whom she played around with. Everything that he learned only increased his adoration for her, even as it intensified the pall of suspicion that hung over her fair young head. It seemed that the Lane house was a big old place in the west end of the fashionable just-off-the-park district and although the place was obviously run down and neglected, it still held remnants of its past glory, despite the insistent march of poverty. There was a discreet sign at the lower basement window, and it told the passing world that rooms could be hired for bachelor-girl light housekeeping. Then there was her mother, or whoever the feminine relative was. She had made a brave and pitiful effort to find happiness despite persistent slaps from an unkind fate. For the Racourts might have overlooked divorce and remarriage, but no Atterbury ever had thought so lightly. So, accordingly, Brice frowned over the fact that Pamela Lane's mother had been married three times—widowed once and divorced twice. Perhaps it was his father's tolerant racial generosity that caused Brice to decide that, after all, a girl was not responsible for her mother's actions, but just the same he was cautious and reserved; heaps of girls were just like their mothers!

Then the little matter of what she did for a living. It seemed that she was a magazine worker of some sort. Brice assumed that she wrote, as it was learned that she derived her income through checks that came from various magazines, always through the mail. Probably he decided bitterly, they were style notes or else fashion chatter.

He discovered her at a fashionable night club once, and it might have been a natural jealousy that caused him to criticize her escort, but it did seem to Brice that the man was neither young nor nice, for his face was flushed with drink and he essayed a gayety that was conspicious even in a night club. It was with difficulty that Brice restrained himself from offering to take her home; every outraged nerve cried out to rescue her from her offensive partner of the evening, but something held him back.

SHE saw him as he got up to leave and, motioning him to her table, she spoke a few words and then whispered: "Please—would it trouble you greatly to get me a cab and see me to it? I'm afraid my escort is forgetting himself—and me as well!" And with racing pulse Brice held her cloak and followed her to the door, watching to see if her escort would return and start a scene before they could escape. He could not recall afterward what they talked of during the ride homeward. He knew that he was dismayed at the sudden arrival at her home and surprised that he wanted to prolong the ride indefinitely.

At luncheon—for he always found her at the same table every afternoon—they talked general topics. He was discovering things that pointed to her unquestionable guilt and, just as always, he was trying to find excuses for her.

There was the occasion when they got into an argument about a hat that a fellow diner wore, Brice stated that it was a draped felt brim, but Pamela just as heatedly argued that the draped effect was acquired by cutting off the brim and its replacement. "Do you angle. "Like this," she explained, digging out a notebook and sketching rapidly with deft, sure strokes that somehow seemed to slash clear across Brice's heart as she illustrated the three stages of construction, the hat in its original shape, the slashed-off brim and its replacement. 'Do you see?" she smiled, her warm brown eyes sparkling with interest as she leaned across the table to point out the various steps.

"I see," he answered slowly, but she did not see the bleak look that crept into his eyes as he realized that here was a real artist, capable of creating any sort of model—and of catching down on paper, in a few deft strokes, any other's creation!

AT LAST he had formulated a plan whereby he could catch her red-handed at the game. He'd show her a design that nobody else knew about, and then he'd wait and see if she'd copy it and send it to whomever it was who took her pilfered designs and made them up into salable stuff.

"Still far away in the clouds?" she smiled shyly as they ate in silence for several moments.

"You'll have to forgive me," he apologized contritely. "I'm in a sort of business jam and I keep sneaking back to it all the time, hoping to think the tangle out."

Reluctant to end the lovely dream, eager to delay the final proving of her guilt, Brice made another engagement with her, this time to dance and attend the theatre, with a late supper afterward. He excused himself this action on the grounds that perhaps, after all, his suspicions were all wrong and that she was just a perfectly nice young girl in impoverished circumstances, carrying on the best way she knew how. So he enjoyed the excellent play with her and danced away the fleeting night hours, giddy with the sheer joy of holding her in his arms, even in the restricted decorum of dancing in an exclusive supper club.

Somehow, Pamela had grown to loathe the little tin god of business that hounded Brice so constantly. It seemed to draw him away from her; to erect a cold wall between them. As if he were coldly disapproving of her, when of course he wasn't. Not when he could relax and forget business for a while and be such an enchanting companion as he was tonight. It was the business that was to blame for it all—just nonsense that she had fancied he disapproved of her on such occasions.

That night, as Brice stood looking down at Pamela, he almost lost all his new-found courage; almost forgot that he was not yet sure about her, but was about to make sure: almost forgot everything but her sweetness and the soft light shining in her wide brown eyes.

But the Pilgrim forefathers of his mother's ancestral strain had their indisputable hold on his spirit, and Brice stepped back just as he had been about to place his arms about Pamela, and, instead, he took her hand in his big gloved fist and, looking down at her gravely, he said: "It may be a long time before we have another such evening as this; and as wonderful as it is to have luncheon together as we do, it's been more than wonderful to share these occasional evenings together."

"That," she smiled up at him, "is because man likes to play better than work and, therefore, he remembers his play hours, while his business contacts are forgotten."

"I suspect you of being a philosopher," he said lightly.

"One has to in my walk of life," she retorted easily.

"Shall we see each other tomorrow?" he asked, reluctant to leave her without the joy of looking forward to another meeting and wondering a bit vaguely just what she had meant by her last remark.

"Oh, yes; I always lunch at 1. Will you be free then?" she asked wistfully, aware that some shadow had stepped in when he had been about to make a much more ardent statement.

"I shall make it my business to be free then," he assured her, "but let's be extravagant and walk over to the St. Regis. Shall we? I believe they have an excellent orchestra there for luncheon."

"Oh!" she gasped delightedly. "You do think of the most gorgeous things! I shall dig out all my hoarded finery and spend hours on preparation."

It was settled and Brice walked briskly down the street to the avenue, thence to his club, thinking dismally all the way. He was a cheat and every kind of a vile, loathsome animal to plan a gala luncheon at a smart hotel with a girl he knew himself to be love with, just so he could lay a trap and catch her in some sin that was, for all he knew, her only means of a livelihood. For Brice was going to show Pam the new designs for the mythical gown, the better to see if she would steal the idea and have it in the market as quickly as the other designs had been.

THE following morning, Brice's first action to begin the business day was to consult with a cartoonist friend of his who was working on a big downtown daily but who had formerly made his living as a sketcher of fashions and styles in the French capital. After stating his errand, Brice lounged about the friend's littered studio, while the smiling young man made rapid streaky lines on a big sheet of white paper. He handed Brice three sketches, each so artistically perfect and modish that the owner of Racourt Freres gasped and stuttered: "Heavens, Lyle! You should waste your time on this custard-pie humor when you can create such marvelous designs as these."

"My custard-pie humor, as you term it," laughed Lyle good-humoredly, "nets me more in a week than you clear in a month with your dinky, little dressmaking establishment. And besides, I like my funny fellers, and I'll bet you just about hate your business at times."

"Yes, Lyle," agreed Brice soberly. "I guess you're right; there's a lot of unhappiness in all trades," and, thanking him, Brice strode down the hall.

All that morning Brice thought of Pamela, and hoped and prayed that he would find actual proof that he was all wrong; yet, even as he hoped and prayed, he knew that he must be sure beyond doubt or there could never be any happiness for him.

Brice greeted her at their rendezvous, and his face was shorn of his stern, sober "business" look. "I brought you some violets," he told her, handing her a shiny white square box, and he lifted the lid and held the box while she lifted them out and sniffed their dewy, exquisite fragrance.

"Thank you," she whispered shyly, "they are wonderful—and you were wonderful, too, to be so thoughtful!"

"They reminded me of you—I don't know why," he said boyishly as he led her toward the dining room. There were too many people around for Pam to make any reply to this, and she couldn't have, anyhow, for her heart was pounding somewhere up near her throat, and she felt choked and too ridiculously happy to think sanely. Then the headwaiter was bowing before Brice and ushering them to a table in a secluded corner of the room, and after that things were just a blur, with the sunshine of Brice's smiling eyes before her to make her realize that it wasn't a dream but was all reality.

When they were through eating, after listening to the music for a while, Brice said suddenly, "See here," and he pulled out a small piece of paper with a dress sketched in the middle, "this is a new design they're going to run through tomorrow, and somehow it doesn't seem just right to me—but Henri wants to run it through for the main offering at next week's opening. They sell for something like $350, these exclusive models," and he handed her the sheet, and Pam studied the sweeping lines of the sketched gown and almost gasped at the daring, startling beauty of the dress. It would be well worth the price he had so casually suggested, provided the right material were used. And of course Henri would!

"Why—why, I never saw anything so gorgeous in all my life!" she gasped, "and I can't see what it is that displeases you," and she drew forth the inevitable pencil and paper and, studying the lines, sketched the back of the dress and, narrowing her eyes, studied it intently, murmuring finally, "You simply couldn't change a line of it—without ruining it altogether! It's just perfect as it is. I wish——" she ended wistfully.

"Yes—what?" he prompted, smiling slightly, but nevertheless still holding his face in the much-dreaded "business" expression.

"Just," she said shyly, "that I were rich enough to come and just look at that creation when it's all made up!"

"Perhaps," he said, "you'll see it all made up—we'll see!"

FOR four days after that Pam did not see Brice, nor did he call or make any effort to meet her casually. He was fighting a battle with himself, and he could not trust himself to see her without weakening. So with almost superhuman effort he remained away from her until his thoughts centered on the dress design again, and it occurred to him that there should be models—"copies"—out by now if she had grabbed the idea. Accordingly he went to Janey and, showing the design, told her that he had baited the one whom he had reason to suspect as the thief and advised her to go through the shops in search of that particular design. That night Janey reported no success or, rather, that she had not seen a model of the dress anywhere.

Walking on air, Brice was about to decide that he had been wrong all the time and that Pam must be innocent, after all, when Janey observed:

"Perhaps she suspected a plant—or maybe it didn't appeal to them. Why not try again?" and, dismally aware that she was right and too utterly discouraged even to wonder how Janey had guessed the thief to be a "she," Brice dug out the other designs and calling Pam on the telephone, he made an engagement for luncheon, this time at the same little cafe.

The two designs were spread on the table and they talked eagerly of them and Pam asked enthusiastically about the other design, too. He made an evasion and was busy watching her every move and gesture. So busy, in fact, that he did not notice what was going on about him. Nothing could possibly interest him like this crisis in his own life.

At noon the next day when Brice had crossed the Rubicon and back again several times in his own mind, Janey flashed into his office and, planking down the pictured designs on his desk, she cried:

"They're all over town! I counted three, and goodness knows how many others are on the way!" and Brice, muttering something unintelligible, grasped his hat and walked unsteadily out of the office into the gay, sun-splashed street, his thoughts in a chaotic, mad whirl and his heart sick within him at what he finally knew to be true.

THEN he saw where his footsteps had carried him and he even blinked his eyes, unable to believe what he saw, as well. Directly ahead of him, and walking blithely along through the swinging doors and down the aisle to the table they always reserved, was Pam.

Half turning, she saw him coming toward her and her whole face lit up with pleasure over meeting him. She cried breathlessly: "Why, Brice! I didn't expect you soon! Usually I wait ten or fifteen minutes before you get around!"

But Brice could only look at her out of tortured, unsmiling eyes as he tried to keep his lips from twitching with the very soul sickness that rocked him.

"Why," he grated harshly, "did you do it, Pam? Why did you do this to me? Why, I trusted you."

"Brice!" she gasped in terror, "you're ill! Why, Brice, whatever can be the matter? What are you talking about? What have I done?" and her big brown eyes, staring at him in stricken, mute appeal, were greatly troubled.

"Don't play the part any longer, Pam. I know now why you pretended to be friends with me. I've seen them all."

"Brice," she whispered at last, "if I didn't love you I could never sit here—after this—and ask you to explain Surely you must know that."

"Yes, I suppose so," he answered wearily, "and I know, too, that you took those designs I showed you—copied them and gave them to our rivals to make up by the dozen and sell for $50 apiece. And after I'd trusted you with them, too."

"Why, Brice, you must be ill or insane!" she gasped. "Don't you see that I came here today to meet you? Do you think I'd have the face to come and meet you if I'd done something as dishonorable as that?"

"I—I don't know what to think. I'm going mad! I've got to get away and think this all out. You were the only one who saw them, you see."

Brice got up in blind haste and brushed against a waiter so clumsily that the man stumbled backward and dropped his menu cards to the floor.

When Brice halted to mumble an apology he saw that the cards were not menu cards; or at least, on one side they were not. For on one side of the cards was sketched the two stolen dresses

Slowly, carefully, Brice knelt and picked up the cards and then raised his eyes to confront the annoyed, nervous waiter. "So you," he muttered thickly, "were the thief, eh? And I nearly wrecked my whole life, not dreaming that that was how it was done."

"I used to be a designer," whined the waiter, "then I got fired and tried sketching styles and that, too, let me out, so I took this job—and—and——"

"Get out," snarled Brice furiously, and sank down into his chair and dropped his face in his hands, unable to speak.

"Please," whispered Pam, touching his softly curling hair gently, "I understand. I can see how you were placed. I don't blame you for thinking that of me. I—I don't see how you could think otherwise. Let's just forget it all and be glad, happy that he won't be able to steal any more of your designer's ideas."

Brice looked up, his face transformed and his fingers found her hands and gripped them hard as he spoke, musingly: "Henri sat here, always—and that waiter must have copied whatever Henri sketched and then sent it right to the makers."

"Let's not talk business any more," pleaded Pam.

A while later as they walked down the avenue Brice thought about rings and they strolled into a jewelry shop and spent a gorgeous, heady, bewildering hour selecting just the right ring.

"Pirate," he teased her, when they finally emerged to the street, "Stealing a person's heart right in broad daylight."

"Pirate yourself," she mocked. "How about my heart and affections?"

"Boulevard buccaneers," he muttered softly.

She is a lovelier, more ravishing and appealing Joan than ever, and she has a cast the like of which is rarely seen in one single picture. Her supporting force includes Anita Page, Dorothy Sebastian, Robert Montgomery, Raymond Hackett, John Miljan, Hedda Hopper and others. They are all good and they aid in making the film Joan's snappiest and best.

The story concerns the romances of three girls who work in the same department store. And what girls they are: Joan Crawford (Jerry), Anita Page (Connie) and Dorothy Sebastian (Franky). There they are, Jerry, Connie and Franky, three pretty salesgirls with an eye out for other things besides customers and cash registers.

Not only do they work in the same store, but they share living quarters together. This gives them a chance to talk over the events of the day, to complain about the hum-drum nature of life in general, to compare notes about boy friends and men whom they would like to have as boy friends. They are thoroughly fed up with their existence. The business of getting up by alarm clock and eating nothing but canned foods, rushing to work, and dragging wearily home, has got on their nerves.

So they decide to throw all their maidenly caution to the winds. That is, two of them do, and when two wealthy and impetuous young men come along and offer them a life of luxury, they accept. One of them gets a wedding ring, and the others gets a—promise. The third however although thoroughly fed up herself with the life of a department store clerk decided to wait around awhile before she casts caution to the winds.

The result is an astounding one. This is not a picture to teach a lesson or point a moral, although you can take a lesson or learn a moral from it, if you wish. It is a gorgeous laughable romance.

AVERAGE GAIN MADE IN 90 STOCKS 4.3 POINTS AS BEARS BID UP FAVORITES

In a rush to protect profits the bears bid up their trading favorites 3 to 12 points and more during a tumultuous last half hour that was reminiscent of other days. Sales in the final 50 minutes were nearly 850,000 shares, or about 250,000 more than for the two forenoon hours.

The professional character of the movement was apparent. With the exception of the break in the drought news was scarce, and the market plodded wearily along until about 1:30 o'clock without paying much attention to the weather. Bullish feelers in the tobacco stocks spread to the volatile chemicals and soon trading became a scramble to buy the limited floating supplies of many important shares.

The average gain made by 90 stocks was 4.3 points, slightly larger than Monday's loss, part of which had already been recovered. The utilities harboring an extensive short interest, rallied 5.2 and the industrials, 4.7. Covering in the rails was not so insistent and the group's advance was just above a point.

U. S. Steel made a spectacular climb of 7 3-8 points and American Telephone soared 5 3-8.

There were rallies of 5 to 8 net, in Allied Chemical, Air Reduction, American Tobacco, Auburn Auto, Eastman Kodak, Vanadium and Westinghouse Electric. Sears Roebuck, Standard of New Jersey, Bethlehem Steel, Atchison, Rock Island, Southern Railway, Radio, Consolidated Gas, North American and many others gained 3 to 5 points.

Foreign exchanges tended lower, although sterling and the French franc were firm.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 16—(AP)—Authoritative reports of big damage suffered by the corn crop since the government's latest estimate gave corn values a lively whirl upward today. A leading unofficial expert announced the 11 principal corn growing states showed a loss of 174,000,000 bushels over and above the August 1 government forecast. Trade, both in corn and wheat, greatly increased activity and strength as a result with corn futures deliveries jumping almost 3c a bushel from an early low level today, and number two cash corn, the ordinary contract grade, soaring 3c above $1,000.

Closing quotations on corn were nervous, 2 3-8a3 1-2c higher than yesterday's finish. Wheat unsettled 1 3-8-a1 5-8c up, oats 1a1 1-4c advanced, and provisions showing 15a25c gain.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—(AP)— The more popular trading shares rallied briskly in today's curb market as shorts hurried to cover, in sympathy with the flight of the bears on the big board.

The less active shares, however, were irregular, with several breaking to new lows. The curb market has become so dull of late that there is practically no market in about half the issues admitted to trading. Total transactions were 525,700 shares.

Deere shot up nearly 8 points, Electric Bond and Share nearly 5, and American Super Power and United Light "A," 1 and 2. American Gas gained 1 1-2 in a moderate turnover.

Ford, Ltd., was active but closed up only 1-8. Aluminum company rallied 3 1-2. Warner Brothers rights were admitted to trading and ranged from 1 1-2 to 1 1-8, closing at 1 3-8.

Investment trusts moved narrowly. Prince and Whitely and Goldman Sachs were firm.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.— (AP) —A strong demand for investment issues carried the bond market into new high ground today for the second time this week.

Trading in railroad issues, which has at times been the only bright spot in an otherwise dull market, was brisk, and buyers were forced to offer good premiums over the previous figure to complete their purchases. Many issues which have been dormant for weeks at a time, appeared in the trading, with gains of one or two points.

The averages showed an advance also by industrials and utilities, and the market for 30 bonds stood at 100.9, a gain of 0.2 of a point for the day. There was an outbreak of spirited bidding during the final hour for carrier obligations. The list closed irregularly higher with the volume of sales slightly below yesterday.

A large inquiry developed for a wide list of carrier obligations. Such standard issues as Pennsylvania debenture 4 1-2s, St. Louis, San Francisco 4 1-2s and Rock Island 4s, legal for savings banks, were firm and active. Atchison obligations were in demand and the general 4s advanced 1-2 point to a new peak. New highs also were reached by Chesapeake and Ohio refunding 4 1-2s, Chicago Union Station 4 1-2s, Lehigh Valley 4 1-2s and general 4s, Missouri, Kansas and Texas 4s, Soo Line 6 1-2s, New York Central debenture 4s, Warren 3 1-2s which soared 2 3-4 points, and Pennsylvania, Ohio and Detroit 4 1-2s.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Hart & Cooley Company
New Britain

The Hart & Cooley company was the first company to successfully manufacture warm air heating registers of wrought steel in place of cast iron.

The company was incorporated by special charter granted by the legislature of Connecticut under date of April 24, 1901 and started business with a paid capital of $100,000; 1,000 share of the par value of $100 each.

On June 16, 1919 the company was reorganized under the general laws of the state of Connecticut and the name changed to The Hart & Cooley Company, Inc. At that time the par value of the shares was changed to $25. Since its organization in 1901 the company has from time to time increased its capital stock both by paid in capital and by stock dividends, the present capital being $1,000,000 consisting of 40,000 shares of stock of the par value of $25.

The Hart & Cooley company has developed many other successful lines and its policy has been to form separate manufacturing units for these different lines. Today, therefore, the Hart & Cooley Company, Inc., is not a manufacturing organization but is a holding company. It has a controlling interest in the Fafnir Bearing company which was organized in 1911 to carry on the ball bearing business which The Hart & Cooley company had started. It also owns the entire capital stock of The Hart & Hutchinson company which was organized in 1912 and which manufactures lockers, toilet partitions, radiator enclosures and fin type radiators. The Hart & Cooley Manufacturing company is the subsidiary which is carrying on the manufacture and sale of the register line.

In 1928 this company purchased the Wm. Highton company of Nashua, N. H., which was an old and established register and grille concern. Through this purchase it secured a foundry and added to its line of wrought steel registers and grilles a line of cast iron registers and cast grilles. The latter are very much in demand in large public buildings. In order to be near the heart of the register market, the manufacture of registers has been moved from New Britain to Holland, Michigan. The main offices and plant of the Hart & Hutchinson company remain in New Britain and the plant of the Wm. Highton & Sons company in Nashua is operated as a division of Hart & Cooley Manufacturing company.

The Hart & Cooley name is well known by architects and heating contractors throughout the United States.

The present officers are: Howard S. Hart, chairman of the board; Norman P. Cooley, president and treasurer; William H. Hart, secretary; Reuben C. Twichell, assistant treasurer.

WESTERLY

CORP. SMITH HOME AFTER STAY IN FOREIGN SERVICE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, Aug. 15.—Corp. Clayton W. Smith, attached to the aviation branch of the U. S. Marines, arrived at his Westerly home on Thursday after a three years' absence to enjoy a 20-day furlough with relatives and friends. He came from Santiago where he has been since last December and previous to which time he has been stationed at Guam, in the Philippines, and before that at the China station. While in Westerly he visited his brother, Albert B. Smith, Jr., of Tower street. On his return to duty he will be stationed at Quantico, Alexandria, Va., to see further service with the "Soldiers of the Sea."

Jenkins Orphan brass band of Charleston, South Carolina, traveling in a bus van, arrived in Westerly on Thursday on its anual tour of the north. Some dozen or fifteen members, composed generally of small colored children, rendered popular and classic music with variations and they journeyed about the streets in the business section of Westerly and Pawcatuck.

NEW INDUSTRY MAY LOCATE IN WESTERLY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, Aug. 15.—There is a possibility that the Argus mills of Lebanon, Pa., of which Arthur Austin, a former Westerly boy, is the superintendent, may move their knitting plant to Westerly. If the industry will move here to occupy the White Rock mill property, now owned by the Knight Finance corporation, it will have the co-operation of the Westerly chamber of commerce. At the last chamber meeting Charles P. Eccleston, of the trades and manufacturing committee, announced that the sum of $1,500 was available to help the concern move here. The amount was made possible by several unnamed Westerly men who stood ready to contribute to assist in bringing needed industries to the town. It is also understood that the Westerly chamber of commerce stood ready to assist in the negotiations looking to the purchase of the White Rock mill property by the Argus company.

Judge Oliver H. Williams was on the bench at the Friday session of third district court, when court matters were disposed of as follows:

Writ of trespass and ejectment — Peter C. Olebreck vs. Frank and Della Labreck. Judgment returned for the plaintiff for possession and costs.

John O. Mills, Inc., vs. Angelo Pucci. Continued one week.

John O. Mills, Inc., vs. Anthony S. Catalino. Continued one week.

Byron Champlin vs. Medusa Portland Cement Co. Continued one week.

Westerly hospital vs. Ernest Panciera et al. Continued two weeks.

Dr. John Champlin, Jr., vs. Antonio Panciera. Continued two weeks, after Attorney Dunn announced that they were in process of settlement.

Michael D. G. Papalia vs. Peter Costantio. Continued one week.

General Roofing Co., Inc., vs. Angelo Manfredi. Continued two weeks.

Lucy D. Talbot vs. Michael Vacca. Continued one week.

W. F. Schleen vs. Louis Leone, by agreement of Attorneys Gallagher and Roche, restored to docket and continued to Aug. 22nd for trial.

Criminal docket—Town of Westerly, Thomas E. Brown, chief of police, complainant, vs. Anthony Lorello. Continued one month.

Trial calendar— State, Thomas E. Brown, vs. Henry Brewer, 16, of Weekapaug. Prosecutor Ferguson, on the defendant's plea of nolo, informed the court that the accused, charged with operating an auto on Franklin and Granite streets, on Aug. 13th, was apprehended by Motorcycle Officer George L. Madison. At 5:45 p. m., the officer clocked the auto at over 50 miles per hour, from Red Brook filling station to Franklin street and at 40 miles from Franklin to Cross streets. The father of the young man appeared before Judge Williams to say that the officer must have exaggerated and that the auto was of New Jersey ownership and that he had taken out a driver's license in Rhode Island while he had his son rather than undergo the rigors of a Rhode Island examination, take out a license in Connecticut after he had driven his first 300 miles here. The son said that he did not know the speed but thought it not as high as at high speed "the car rattles all over" and the father added "the car is not built for speed." Asked by Judge Williams if it was desired to have the plea changed after the father had stated that the most of both of their driving was done in Connecticut the reply was received that "I prefer to put myself in your hands, entirely." Stating his appreciation of the confidence, Judge Williams declared that he believed that they both realized their law infraction and finding the accused guilty imposed a fine of $25 and costs.

In the case of Charles E. Chappell vs. Frank H. Brown, both of Ashaway, Attorney Ferguson said that rather than go to the trouble to have papers transmitted to the second district court, after Judge Williams disqualified himself a week ago the defendant would submit to a decision for the plaintiff to recover in the sum of $10 and costs.

J. A. Cristen, of Mystic, apprehended by R. I. State Trooper Sherwood S. Healey on Aug. 8th, on the Nooseneck Hill road, in the town of Richmond, while driving at a rate of speed greater than reasonable entered a plea of nolo. The officer said he clocked the defendant at between 55 and 60 miles between the Ten Rod road and Wyoming. On being found guilty he was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and costs.

Trial of the civil suit of Michael D. G. Papalia vs. the Atlantic Beach casino, Helen P. Ballou, was started when Attorney Dunn, for the plaintiff, placed Miss Carmelia Papalia, teacher and bookkeeper for her father in the 1929 year, as the witness upon the stand to testify to bookkeeping entries made and for purposes of identification sales slips and ledger sheet were admitted by Attorney Davis for respondent for the purposes of identification. With the completion of the testimony the case was continued two weeks for further testimony.

Charles Bowe, newly appointed deputy sheriff for Washington county, was in court for the first time as court officer and called the adjournment when taken by the court.

On Friday, Westerly was visited by numerous heavy showers and the rain, falling in quantities, will contribute greatly to keeping lawns and gardens green.

George Pickering, following domestic trouble in his North Stonington home, when under the influence of liquor he was reported as assaulting his wife on Thursday. On her complaint he was arrested by Connecticut State Police Officer James Dygert of the Groton barracks, charged with breach of the peace. The trouble is said to have followed an extended spree and the case will be called in Stonington town corut next Tuesday.

Aug. 14. Joseph Ruisi to Antonio Ruisi, a certain lot or tract of land, lots Nos. 146 and 147, Fairview park.

Meeting as a board of canvassers for the special Westerly financial town meeting to be held on Monday evening, to act upon the question of the town's purchase of seashore property for recreational purposes, the changes made showed there were 2,618 voters of the town qualified to take part in the meeting.

LLOYD FRAZER IN NAVY SEES MANY COUNTRIES

The village people are proud of a young man who has made such a fine record in the navy, Lloyd Frazer. He has been in the service since 1917, making 13 years following the waves of the ocean around the world. Young Frazer before dreaming of the navy was a bookkeeper at the shipyard. At that time the world war was going on with Uncle Sam ready. Frazer was sitting and thinking whether he would join to help out his country. Then quick as a cat he left everything, beat it to New London, enlisting in the navy. He has worked up from a seaman to chief gunner's mate. He is a first class deep sea diver, has been around the world seven or eight times, also never has been sea sick. Of course he has been in some awful storms, when the cook had to tie the navy beans on the stove, for the battleship was rolling high. Young Frazer was never on the water before, but with a smile says he will do 20 years and then retire. He is a member of the crew on the battleship Florida and is well liked by all. Happy Frazer has the English crawl stroke down great, and sure can make knots in the water. It was three years before he saw his home in the village. Gunner Frazer spent a furlough of 20 days here in March. That will be his last one for awhile for he got word that the Florida had orders to take 1,000 mid-shipmen from the navy school in Maryland for a three-month's trip to England, France, Germany and Scotland and then to ports in this North America.

Deacon William Frazer had four letters from his son Lloyd that came from Scotland, telling all about the trip so far. Smiling Lloyd wrote that when the big man-of-war landed in Germany the people went wild over the mid-shipmen—would not let them spend anything. It seemed as though the place was theirs. That did not set well with the students to think they could not spend any money. Gee! the German people they think are wonderful. They went all through the ship and when at last the anchor was pulled up from the harbor tears were in the people's eyes. They hated to see the middies leave.

Going over to Scotland they looked at the wonderful hills; also saw where the mine planters put in their mines in war time. The visitors have been all through the towns where John Morrison and Lester Smith went and they are sure some pretty places. John and Lester were on mine-laying craft and in the North Sea, where they had to put mines. They ran into Edinburgh harbor and when they got liberty to look the city over, they saw that the war sure did hurt Scotland. By now they are back on their feet, after those long years. It is a beautiful country, but when the fog sets in, it is like a big forest fire, so thick one could not cut it with a knife. But for beautiful sights you can't beat old New England. Take Prospect Hill; you can see for a long way off and the flowers are so pretty in Noank and around on the hills.

Not many of the students were sea sick. One fellow got sick in a storm, with waves high as a house. He got sick and did not care what became of him; so his pals got kidding him, told him to take a piece of fat pork with a string on it and put it on his tongue and his troubles would be over. He did, but that made him sicker so everyone had a great laugh at him. But he was a good sport and did not get angry at their jokes. In one place in England it was some hot—seemed about 106 in the shade; the apples on the trees got baked from the sun and were all ready for the table. One wise guy in the crowd that went ashore told one Englishman where he came from in good old U. S. A., it was so hot that the potatoes were all ready for potatoe salad. The Englishman's eyes grew big at that story. Some one claimed he had a better one, being from the wild west where horse flies are elephants. He said it was so hot one day last summer that a fellow got a letter from the postoffice from his girl and opened it and started to read and the sun burned the letter up and they almost had to call out the fire department.

The English man said it was time to go home on that one!

Young Frazer says he is having a great time and everybody on board is.

He is another Noank fellow who has made good in the world.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Here's a laugh! Jack Oakie in "The Sap from Syracuse" is at Warner's Broadway for a 4-day engagement starting today.

Those who saw Jack Oakie in his first starring picture, "The Social Lion," will need no introduction to the grin and chin boy, nor any other inducement to set a date to see this hilarious highlight of the movie season in town.

Oakie is the "cheerful giver" of fun whose first appearance in "Close Harmony" was an instantaneous signal of joy to come. In "The Sap from Syracuse," he has, by far, his best role to date, as the naive country boy who thinks the world is his "oyster." Off to see Europe, he meets a lovely charmer in distress, in the person of Ginger Rogers, the cuddlesome cutie of "Young Man of Manhattan." Mistaken for a prominent engineer, traveling incognito, Oakie cannot convince Ginger of his real identity. He is feted and regaled by everyone on the ship.

Ginger engages him to rescue her from two fake engineers who are trying to obtain possession of a mine she owns in the Balkans. How Oakie proves his sincerity, and helps and wins the girl is a rousing series of laugh moments.

"The Sap from Syracuse" is adapted from the stage comedy of the same name that kept New York theatregoers in spasms of mirth during the run of the play last season. Many supporting players in the screen version of the fun-hit were members of the original New York stage cast. And A. Edward Sutherland, who piloted Oakie in "The Social Lion," directed this one too.

No Oakie starring picture is complete without a song put over by the star in his own inimitable way. Those who remember his singing of "Alma Mammy" in "Sweetie" will look forward to hearing him sing, "I Wish I Could Sing a Love Song" in "The Sap from Syracuse."

BERTHA ELLA SLATER
Who Passed Away 5 Years Ago Today, Aug. 16, 1925

Through all pains at times she'd smile;
A smile of heavenly birth;
And when the angels called her home,
She smiled farewell to earth.

Earth the lonely casket keeps;
And the sunbeams love to linger
Where our loved one sleeps.

POSTCARD FROM NEW LONDON FRIDAY REACHES MOTHER OF PROV. BAD BOY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 15—John Stopors, 15, and Stanley Loworwaki, 13, both of Providence, one of whom is accused of mortally shooting a companion earlier in the week, as the boy is at a Providence hospital, are known to have been in New London recently and in view of the fact the local police were requested to be on the lookout for the youths. The mother of one of the boys this morning received a card, postmarked New London and it is believed that the youths are still here.

Faces Serious Charge

John Lavigne, Montville resident, is evidently on the way to severe discipline when he is presented before Justice of the Peace Oscar Church in Montville this week on a charge of contributing to the mental delinquency of minors. Lavigne, who was arrested yesterday by State Police Officer John Smith, has a strong appetite for liquor and he entertains the idea, evidently, that youths of the age of 14 or 15 years, should also partake of alcoholic drinks. Recently he insisted on two or three youths drinking his liquor with the result that the young men became intoxicated. When that fact became known by the parents of the youths, complaint was made to the state police and Lavigne's arrest was the result.

The Shamrock V, which arrived in the harbor Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of having her mast stepped at Groton Electric Boat Co. plant was towed to the wharf of the boat company this morning and work was started which will occupy the greater part of 10 days. The first part of next week, Sir Thomas Lipton, owner of the cup challenger, also of the steam yacht Erin, which accompanied the cup challenger, will arrive in port and will make his headquarters here until the Shamrock V goes to Long Island sound for trials after her mast has been stepped and other changes in the sailing gear of the boat remedied. Today hundreds of men and women went to the municipal pier and the wharf of the Fishers Island Navigation company where they got a glimpse of the cup challenger, but the view was not so satisfactory as was the case when the Shamrock V, was in mid-stream yesterday. Today William Kissman Vanderbilt's steam yacht arrived in port.

The police have been given much trouble for several nights because of the conduct of youths residing in the vicinity of Thames street. An automobile patrol officer has been kept on duty in that vicinity practically every hour of the night until midnight.

G. Q. Garrett left his car parked on Hurtington street and when he started to drive to the submarine base this forenoon, Garrett discovered that a tire cover, jack, wrenches and a gasoline cap had been stolen during the night.

Mrs. Alfred E. Dixon, of Uncasville, was in New London seeking information as to the whereabouts of her husband and the manner in which he was assaulted last night, but she was not successful, for other than determining that her husband had been beaten, she did not obtain the information she sought. Mrs. Dixon learned that her husband was treated for injuries at the office of a physician, but she did not learn the manner by which he was beaten nor his whereabouts. Inquiry at police headquarters resulted in it being shown that there was no record there of the assault.

Theodore Bodenwein has sold an undivided one-half interest in a tract of land on Park avenue to Coleman and Jennie Crocker.

An automobile owned by Margaret Newman, 319 Broad street, and a machine driven by a colored operator, collided on Broad street this morning. Although both automobiles were damaged, no report of the crash was made at police headquarters.

Ramsay went to a North Bank street restaurant last night and created a disturbance. When the proprietor of the restaurant became angered he started to eject the disturber who ran to the street and at a time when Patrolmen Edward Riordan and Lawrence Fardy were passing. When the proprietor related his version of the trouble, Ramsay was arrested.

Samuel Shind, 123 Bentley avenue, Ocean Beach and Hartford, was charged with reckless driving, but the charge was nolled, for the alleged offense was committed in Waterford. Shind was driving an automobile on Broad street near Jefferson avenue, Wednesday and it collided with cars driven by Richard Johnson, 12 Godfrey street, Groton, and Harry Stein, Chicopee, Mass. Johnson and Stein asserted that it was the reckless manner in which Shing drove his car that caused the crash and when complaint was made to Motorcycle Officer Thomas Cavanaugh, Shind was arrested.

Thomas McCusker, of Jewett City, employed as a stationary engineer, was charged with intoxication and fined $5 and costs. McCusker, who was arrested yesterday afternoon on North Bank street by Patrolman Henry Hick, has a long police court record.

NORWICH DRIVER'S TRUCK RUNS OVER 7-YEAR-OLD BOY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 15.— George Botchis, 7, residing with his parents at 73 Woodbridge street, is perhaps fatally injured tonight at Lawrence Memorial hospital as a result of being run over this afternoon by an auto truck driven by Edward Gilchrist, 56 Spring Garden avenue, Norwich. The youth has, among other injuries, several crushed ribs, which have produced internal injuries and he is on the danger list. Gilchrist, although so far as is known, was not responsible for the accident, is being held in bail of $1,000 on a technical charge of reckless driving and will be in the police court tomorrow. Gilchrist drove to Bank and Truman streets about 2 o'clock and parked the truck while he made a delivery of merchandise at a Bank street store. While he was absent from the truck the child went to the gutter in the rear of the truck where he amused himself by splashing water with his hands. When Gilchrist returned to the truck and started to drive away, he did not notice the child at play and as he backed the truck to drive from the curb, the rear wheels ran over the child's chest. The cries of the child attracted pedestrians as well as Gilchrist and the boy was rushed to the hospital. At the hospital tonight it was said that there was no change in the boy's condition.

Letters Read.

Secretary Peale read a number of letters received from comrades who were unable to be present. The letters, in part follow:

Albert Hempstead, Alhambra, Cal., —I thank you once more for your invitation which I should be very glad to accept were it not for old age, distance, heat, etc. I am the only remaining member of the boys' drum corps, so he put the men drummers in the ranks in Co. A, H. and K. and put in boys under twenty in corps Co. C. had an enlisted drummer (Charley Case) so he transferred me to Co. K. We join in wishing you a happy reunion, not forgetting the worthy W. R. C.

George W. Loomis, Dallas, Tex.—Your notice of the 62nd August reunion received. Am sorry that I cannot be there. I hope you may have a good attendance and an enjoyable time. My best wishes will be with you and the comrades. Am always pleased to hear from you.

George Herrick, Willimantic, Conn. —I will not attend reunion of 18th Conn. Regiment volunteers. As I am 95 years old I am not feeling any too good this weather and don't believe I better try going on trolley.

A. M. Lathrop, Washington, D. C.—Am glad to be able to answer "Here" at the 62nd annual reunion of the 18th regiment from Washington, D. C. I was present at the first annual reunion and wish that I could be at the 62nd. I am now in my 90th year of life and am in good general health. I get about very well with an artificial left leg. I have been without reading and writing eyesight for the past six years and enjoy life as well as could be expected.

John D. Brown, Missouri Valley, Iowa—Notice of the 62nd annual reunion of the 18th Connecticut regiment on Aug. 15 at hand. Nothing would give me greater pleasure than to be able to meet with my only comrades on this occasion, but the condition of my health will not permit it. I hope you may have a good attendance of the old comrades although they are all now getting old and feeble and may not be able to forego the strain of attending. Enclosed I hand you $1 in currency to help towards the expense of the reunion. Shake the hand of the old comrades present for me and convey to them my dearest respects for comrades in arms, including yourself.

Chauncey Morse, Putnam, Conn. — Your letter with notice of reunion received and in reply must say that I don't think it best for me to attend same. While my general health is fairly good I have to be very careful of what I do. Hoping you will have a pleasant day and with my prayers I will bid goodbye to all my comrades.

J. J. Jerome, Yuma, Ariz.—Your esteemed favor containing names of living members, the silken badge and notice of "reunion" came last night. Please accept my thanks for your attention.

To the few survivors who may be gathered I send a "comrade's" heartfelt greetings, and the earnest wish that many more years may pass ere "Taps" shall sound for them. (This letter came by air-mail and enclosed was a $5 bill.)

G. A. Latham, Jackson Heights, N. Y.—It is with great pleasure I take to thank you for the reminder of the reunion of the good old 26th and I cannot express my sorrow for not attending this meeting. I am living with my children but confined to the house. My only wish is that I could be with the boys on the 15th of August.

May it be a day of joy and happiness and now fellows, here goes a cheer for the flag and good old 26th regiment.

Robert H. Douglas, San Jose, Cal.—Your report of the sermon of our old regiment (or what there is left of it) came to hand with a request that I write something to be read there. Therefore will say that I have a wife here and 4 children (of course— all grown) 8 married, 8 grand children and thank God am very comfortable and happy as the climate is such here that any one but a grouch could not be otherwise.

Following the business meetings a joint dinner was enjoyed in the banquet hall, which was effectively trimmed with patriotic decorations, including gladioli, donated by Mrs. Christine Hommel and Mrs. Dean. The appetizing dinner, prepared and served by the Woman's Relief corps Sedgwick post, under the direction of Mrs. M. William S. Murray, the first selectman, expressed his pleasure in attending another reunion and that the veterans could meet in the old historic Buckingham Memorial each year. Ex-Mayor Lerou, who has been a regular attendant at the reunions for many years, referred to the patriotism of the veterans and stated that the younger generations will continue to honor them in the years to come. Col. Henry W. Babson, the president of the 18th, thanked all for the generous reception to the veterans, and for his personal enjoyment in meeting his old comrades and their many friends.

Edward G. Willey, the only member of the 26th regiment present, spoke of the many interesting experiences during the Civil war, and especially of the battle at Port Hudson where the 26th lost many of its members. BOY SCOUT TRIED FOR BREAKING PLATE

Boy Scout Joe, writing to his friend Jim, tells of a broken plate that results in a trial for Joe Irby at Camp Wakenah, the Boy Scout camp at Gardner Lake. In his letter to Jim, Boy Scout Joe says:

We're having our trials out here now, but before you get hot-footing it over to tell Mary, read a little bit further so she ain't going to think there's some trouble and be worrying about me. You see we've passed over one trial and had a lot of fun in the passing.

It was only a mock trial, with Joe Irby being accused of breaking a plate. Boy, that's an awful offense. Joe was summoned before the court, and Gene Cushman was his lawyer. George Spinner was the prosecuting attorney, and Nick Tarrant was the judge. There was a long court session during which a lot of arguments were heard, and Joe was found not guilty. All the kids were spectators and some of the younger ones were wondering if it were the real thing. Of course us old timers didn't wonder, but just the same we enjoyed the show and hope that some one else will be accused of something.

Yesterday Scout Executive Fred J. Hill of Hartford visited the camp and Fred M. Whittemore, member of the camp committee, also was a guest. They both looked everything over and like all other visitors found everything perfect. Guess you can understand that, knowing what a peachy camp we got.

And Gee! I almost forgot to tell you. Joe Irby, him of mock trial fame, occupies an upper bunk and has had a tough time getting into it. You know what he did? No, 'course you don't. Anyway he built himself a ladder and climbs up to hit the hay now.

We got a new canoe. It's one the Bank street merchants promised us, and boy we're appreciative.

A fleet of five canoes and nine rowboats took the entire camp to the upper end of the lake to look for arrowheads. I didn't find any, but I did get a lot of huckleberries, and they sure were good, too.

Well, there isn't much more to tell you, only that Scout Paul Romanio of Niantic captured a snapping turtle weighing about 35 pounds. I'm keeping away from that fellow's head, and I'll close saying that I'm Yours till that snapping turtle gets me and that ain't going to be ever.

JOE.

STRAWBERRY and BUTTERSCOTCH

LIKE BUTTER? Most everybody does, and offers proof by eating it generously and often. The "staff of life" would lose its appeal without this golden spread. Butter-scotch—that's not a reference to the Highlands and heather, but to the manner of cooking which provides a different flavor. "Scotchy."

There's no reason why your vitamins shouldn't be delicious, as well as vital. Here's an Ice Cream combination which has them all—A, B, C, AND EVEN D, the sunshine vitamin that nature permits the cow to give us through her cream. Strawberries account for vitamin power, too.

Delicious? Yes, that's the chief reason our chef matched these flavors.—It can't be helped if they do you good, too.

POETRY

A Note From the Pipes

Pan, blow your pipes and I will be Your fern, your pool, your dream, your tree!

I heard you play, caught your swift eye,
"A pretty melody!" called I,
"Hail, Pan!"—and sought to pass you
by.

Now blow your pipes and I will sing
To your sure lips accompanying!

Wild god, who lifted me from earth,
Who taught me freedom, wisdom, mirth,
Immortalized my body's worth.

Blow, blow your pipes! And from afar
I'll come—I'll be your bird, your star,
Your wood, your nymph, your kiss, your rhyme,
And all your godlike summertime!

—Leonora Speyer.

Voices of the Air

But then there comes that moment rare
When, for no cause that I can find,
The little voices of the air
Sound above all the sea and wind.

The sea and wind do then obey
And sighing, sighing double notes
Of double basses, content to play
A droning chord for the little throats—

The little throats that sing and rise
Up into the light with lovely ease,
And a kind of magical sweet surprise
To hear and know themselves for these.

For these little voices; the bee, the fly,
The leaf that taps, the pod that breaks,
The breeze on the grasstops bending by,
The shrill quick sound that the insect makes.

—Katherine Mansfield.

NEW AIRPLANE ENDURANCE RECORD 647 HOURS, 28M, 30S

Jackson and O'Brine Landed in St. Louis at 6:40 C. S. T. Yesterday Morning—Motor Trouble and Oil Leakage Caused the Pilots to Land—Exceeded the Record Held by the Hunter Brothers by 93 Hours and 47 Minutes—Manager Pickens Says the Fliers Landed Because of Lack of Financial Support.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 17.— (AP)— Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, endurance fliers, landed at 6:39 1-2 (Central Standard Time) this morning, after being in the air 647 hours, 28 minutes and 30 seconds.

Motor trouble and oil leakage caused the pilots, Dale (Red) Jackson and Forest O'Brine, to end their long grind unexpectedly to insure safety, they announced upon landing. The motor had been missing and throwing oil during the night and the flyers said they thought there was a crack in the crank case.

A preliminary inspection by mechanics today failed to reveal any crack in the crank case or to determine the exact cause of the trouble. The plane and the motor were badly smeared with oil.

The sudden descent startled a crowd of about 500 sleepy-eyed observers, including a flock of cameramen and reporters who had been sleeping on improvised beds on the field for several days. The flyers had radioed the ground crew a few minutes before the landing that they were coming down.

O'Brine was at the controls as the plane made an easy landing and taxied to a hangar. It was several minutes before the dazed crowd fully realized what had occurred and there was only a flutter of a demonstration, contrasted with the wild scene staged on the same field in July, 1929, when the same airmen landed with a 420-hour record with 25,000 looking on.

Jackson and O'Brine said the plane's motor first began showing signs of weakness last night. The flyers managed to keep it going until dawn, hoping that an inspection by daylight wold enable them to make repairs and keep the ship aloft. At dawn, Jackson crawled out onto the catwalk, he said, and observed the situation.

Deciding it would be impossible to make repairs, the flyers waited until their fuel ran low and then came down.

The crowd was orderly and the flyers were quickly whisked away to a downtown hotel where, after breakfast, the first thing they asked for was haircuts. This done, they retired for a few hours of rest before receiving interviewers.

Jackson and O'Brine had hoped to set a 1,000-hour record. The mark they did establish is 93 hours, 47 minutes better than the previous record set July 4 in the "City of Chicago" at Chicago by Kenneth and John Hunter.

The Greater St. Louis flyers were up almost exactly 27 days, one day short of four weeks. The flight started at 7:11 a. m., July 21.

The flight was made in the same type of plane, a Curtiss-Robin monoplane with a Challenger engine, they used in their previous record flight in the "St. Louis Robin." That flight started July 13, 1929, and ended the following July 30, the airmen having been called down by the flight sponsors.

MANAGER CLAIMS LACK OF FINANCIAL SUPPORT

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 17.—(AP)—William Pickens, manager of Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, endurance flight champions, told interviewers this afternoon that the fliers landed this morning because of lack of financial support for the flight.

Pickens' statement was made at a conference with reporters who interviewed the fliers this afternoon. Jackson and O'Brine insisted, however, that they had landed because of motor trouble.

COSTE READY FOR TRANS-ATLANTIC FLIGHT TODAY

LE BOURGET, France, Aug. 17.—(AP) — Captain Dieudonne Coste, France's foremost airman, landed here this evening ready for a start at dawn on a trans-Atlantic flight to New York, but late this evening was obliged by adverse weather along the French sea coast to postpone his attempt.

The change along the seaboard came in sudden contrast to earlier forecasts at the government weather bureau, where "perfect conditions" had been prophesied for both the northern route and the Azores route attempted last year by Coste.

The airport authorities had ordered out the fire engines and the ambulance that accompany heavily laden planes down the field on the take-off. These were to be on hand at 3 a. m.

Before going to bed, both Coste and Bellonte were uncommunicative.

CORONATION OF KING CAROL INDEFINITELY POSTPONED

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Aug. 17.—(AP)—The coronation of King Carol II was definitey postponed today, and will take place in the spring of 1931. Queen Helen plans a prolonged absence on a journey.

The reasons for postponing the ceremony were said to be personal as well as political and economic.

Ecclesiastical and civil officials have been making elaborate preparations with the understanding that the coronation ceremony would be held Oct. 15. Carol desired services more closely approximating those of the Greek Orthodox rite than were used in the last two coronations.

The last two kings were Roman Catholics. The Patriarch Miron Cristea had been studying old scrolls in an attempt to satisfy Carol's wishes.

GLADY'S O'DONNELL LEADS IN WOMEN'S AIR DERBY

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Aug. 17—(AP)—Gladys O'Donnell of Long Beach, was the first fler to land at Ryan field late today, completing the first lap of the women's national air derby from Long Beach to Chicago. She was followed about 30 seconds later by Margery Doeg of Danbury, Conn.

Miss O'Donnel, who took off from Long Beach at 3:31 p. m. (P.S.T.) landed at Lindbergh field at 4:04:51 p. m. P.S.T. Miss Doeg landed at 4:05:03 p. m.

Third to arrive was Ruth Barrow of Hollywood, who crossed the landing line at 4:22:04. She was followed by Mrs. Milfred Morgan of Beverley Hills, who landed at 4:25:29.

Jean Le Rene of Chicago landed fifth at 4:30:16. She was followed by Ruth Steward of St. Louis, whose landing time was 4:31:09.

SPRINGFIELD, Vt., Aug. 17—(AP)—Attorney General J. Ward Carver, came here today to confer with State Detective Edwin C. Brown, in a further effort to pierce the mystery surrounding the identity of a woman buried as Mrs. Catherine R. Packard, who re-appeared last week.

When the conference was over, the attorney general returned with the detective to Montpelier after saying that the state had no intention of dropping the case, which he described as "cooking" and either homicide or suicide.

HOOVER IN CONFERENCE ON DROUGHT SITUATION

ORANGE, Va., Aug. 17—(AP)—The mountain lodge of President Hoover was the scene today of further conferences on the drought situation between the president, Secretary Hyde and Chairman Legge of the federal farm board, but no conclusions were announced.

Word from the camp said the president expected the governors of 13 states originaly included in the relief organization to have completed their set-up of state relief committees by Tuesday and that the complete program would be well under way soon afterward.

However, the appointment by Governor Pollard of Former Governor Byrd as chairman of Virginia's relief committee was the only one officially to come to the president's attention today.

Between walks along nearby mountain trails, the president also continued his conferences today with departmental air chiefs on problems confronting commercial aviation and possible federal steps to awaken greater interest in the industry.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17—(AP)—An economist has been engaged to make a thorough survey of the book industry and to seek means for the widest possible distribution of books, the National Association of Book Publishers announced today.

Edward S. Mills, president of the association, said O. H. Cheney, former superintendent of banking in New York state had been employed to conduct the survey, financed by the book publishers, the Book Binders' Association of America, and book dealers, paper manufacturers and allied interests.

Mr. Mills foresaw as a result of this research "a new period of growth and extended markets, and reduced costs through standardized manufacture."

TEN BATHERS RESCUED AT OLD ORCHARD BEACH, ME.

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Me., Aug. 17—(AP)—Life Guards William Craig and Harold Burnham, had their busiest day of the season here today in rescuing 10 bathers caught by a vicious undertow.

Four Deaths I[illegible]ate From Stor[illegible]at'day

Three F[illegible]orkers Were Killed in Tobacco Shed in Windsor.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 17.—(AP)— A toll of four lives and crop damage estimated at more than $500,000, was exacted by the fury of storms that swept Connecticut Saturday.

Ushered in by flashes of lightning and reverberating peals of thunder, a severe electrical storm broke over the state shortly before noon accompanied in some sections by torrential rainfall and in other sections by pelting hail that slashed at crops weakened by the long drought.

At Windsor, three members of a party of 25 farm workers who sought refuge from the storm in a tobacco shed were killed when lightning demolished the structure. Other members of the party were stunned and three were taken to Hartford hospitals. The dead were Fred Dibble, 51; George Nolan, 42, and Alfred Seam, 50, all of Poquonock. Earlier John Snellus, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Snellus, of Rockville, fell dead as he was closing the doors of a tobacco shed as the storm was starting. The boy's death was laid to fright at the storm.

Principal crop damage was reported in the town of East Windsor, lashed by two hail storms during the day. Unofficial estimates placed the loss at $150,000. Extensive damage to tobacco and other crops was reported also at Simsbury, North Bloomfield, Windsor Locks, Warehouse Point, Broad Brook, Ellington, Rockville, Vernon and Wapping.

Many telephone lines throughout the state temporarily were put out of commission and traffic on highways and in cities was impeded.

In New Haven, a near cloudburst, lasting for a little more than 15 minutes, flooded the streets. Some hail fell.

DAMAGE IN STATE FROM SATURDAY'S STORMS $600,000

HARTFORD, Aug. 17—(AP)—Damage estimated at approximately $100,000 to the fruit and vegetable crops in the hail stricken area in northern Connecticut, will raise the crop losses in Saturday's two disastrous storms to more than $600,000, it was estimated by agricultural leaders tonight. The wind driven hail ruined apple and peach orchards in several towns, stripping the leaves and fruit from the trees, breaking limbs and deeply pitting the exposed fruit. Tomatoes and other ground crops also exposed to damage from the storm were ruined in many places, while one potato grower in the district reported that his crop was so badly damaged as to kill the crop.

Tobacco growers in the area, hit by disastrous hail storms for the second consecutive year, are believed to be in dire financial straits, and many of the smaller growers are facing ruin. A meeting of the state officials and prominent tobacco growers has been called at the county building tomorrow morning at which plans for the relief of the growers of the district will be discussed.

Families Flee From Oil Well Running Wild

Roads Are Blocked in the North End of Oklahoma City Oil Field.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 17—(AP)—An oil well of the C. C. Julian Oil and Royalty company was running wild today in a residential section in the north end of the Oklahoma City oil field.

Families were removed from homes in the immediate vicinity of the well, fires of other drilling operations were extinguished and roads were blocked.

The well, the No. 2 houser, the second brought in by the Julian company in the South Oklahoma City field, broke loose this morning when it was shut in after flowing its initial 24 hours. Its estimated oil flow was 175 barrels an hour and it had a calculated gas flow of 50,000,000 cubic feet a day.

Control presented a difficult problem as the break was below the master gates and engineers expressed belief oil and gas was coming up between the six inch and nine inch casing. The master gates were opened to relieve pressure on the break and most of the oil went into tankage on the Julian and T. B. Slick leases.

A score of persons fled from their homes as the menacing giant broke loose and roared defiantly and oil field workers rushed to pit their skill against the strength of nature.

Because of its location the well was considered more dangerous than the Wild Mary Sudik which for more than eleven days recently sprayed the countryside with a shower of oil.

All fires for blocks around were extinguished. A spark might start a conflagration of immense proportions.

Officials of other oil companies sent men to assist in shutting off the flow.

Tommy Vaughn, conservation officer for the district, after inspecting the well, said difficulty would be experienced in bringing it under control.

DEAD GUNMAN'S BOOK IMPLICATES POLITICIANS

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.— (AP) — Pat Roche, chief investigator of the state's attorney's office, today indicated evidence uncovered in the investigation into the slaying of Jack Zuta may expose a political-criminal alliance without precedent in the city's history.

Records of Zuta already made public, showing receipts and disbursements of the Moran gang vice lord, have resulted in a number of public officials and politicians being called to the state's attorney's office for questioning.

"We have much more than we have made public," Roche said. "Before we disclose the rest of it we must question many persons, and bring together every bit of evidence into a perfect pattern."

Although no comment was forthcoming from Roche, the Herald and Examiner today said that these undisclosed records contain a notation showing that a virtual political board of directors, composed of eight politicians, secretly governed gambling, vice and booze interest throughout the county.

This evidence, the paper said, indicates that the eight persons shared millions in gang craft yearly. It shows, the paper continued, how these graft privileges had been divided and lists the particular territory over which each politician was recognized czar. Names of these men, the paper said, are being withheld while investigators under Roche follow the labyrinth of connections involved.

A corps of detectives competed with anxious gangsters today in the search for the Zuta holdings still unfound but believed to rest in secret niches somewhere in the city. Authorities said they have information that Zuta hid two trunks containing ledgers and a $250,000 emergency fund before his death. Authorities also sought to locate a number of persons and offices named in the papers already impounded.

POLICEMAN SEEK SLAYER OF A FELLOW OFFICER

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 17—(AP)—A wrathful police force, seeking retaliation for the death of a fellow officer, tonight completed its third day of a so far unsuccessful hunt for clues to the mysterious drowning of Patrolman Michael T. Connolly.

Working on the assumption that the officer was slain, and scouting a suicide theory, investigators found themselves confronted with contrasting facts which apparently fitted only the theory that Connolly had been held up at gun point, shackled with his own cuffs and marched to an old pier where he was either pushed or flung into the harbor.

His body, partly buried in sand, was found on an east end beach early Friday morning. An autopsy revealed that drowning was the cause of his death.

Police sleuths, however, found incompatibility in the facts that while Connolly's watch had stopped at 4:07 o'clock, he had been seen and talked with a special officer of the Grand Trunk railroad nearly two hours later, and that while his hands had been fettered with his own manacles, the body revealed no evidences of violence.

ROGER W. BABSON, ECONOMIST, PREDICTS A MARKED IMPROVEMENT IN BUSINESS

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 17.—Roger W. Babson, economist, today said midwestern agriculture is on the upgrade and general business in this region should show marked improvement during the final quarter of 1930.

Mr. Babson said this was his first public utterance on the business situation since his bearish forecast last November.

"The corner has turned in the middle west," he said. "Conditions are as bad out here as they will get."

"Reports of the damage have been greatly exaggerated, perhaps purposely so for the effect upon Europe," he declared. "European countries have been on a buying strike. They have been waiting to see how low American crop prices would go. The drought reports have brought them to their senses. x x xThey are beginning to worry and place orders."

The middle western farmer will be the first to feel the effect of better times, Mr. Babson predicted. "He was the first to go down in the recent slump and he will be the first to come up."

PASSENGERS AND MAIL OFF DISABLED STEAMER TAHITI

The 175 Passengers Were Transferred by Lifeboats in a Heavy Sea to the Matson Liner Ventura—The Crew Remained Aboard in a Desperate Effort to Keep the Steamer Afloat 500 Miles South of Cook Islands, Pacific Ocean—The Ship is Listing Badly and Probably Will Founder.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Aug. 18. (Monday)— (AP) —Racing against an impending storm, the Matson liner Ventura this morning reached the disabled British steamer Tahiti about 500 miles southwest of Rarotonga, Cook Islands and took aboard her passengers and mails.

Despite a heavy swell running, the lifeboats safely transferred the 175 persons composing the Tahiti's passenger list.

The Tahiti, though listing badly and expected to founder, was not abandoned by her crew, which remained aboard at the pumps in desperate effort to keep her afloat.

The Tahiti, one of the largest ships plying the Pacific, left Wellington for San Francisco August 12 with 17 passengers and crew of 142. It was due in San Francisco August 29.

The vessel got into trouble when it lost its starboard propeller and tailshaft and began to leak. The cause was not ascertained. The number 4 hold began to leak early Sunday, New Zealand time. (9:30 a. m., E. S. T. Saturday). Captain A. T. Toten and master of the ship ordered all aboard to lifeboats.

CHICAGO TERMINAL OF SIX AIR DERBIES THIS WEEK

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—(AP) —A shot that echoed through the world of aviation was fired at 5:30, C. S. T., this afternoon at Curtiss airport as a signal for the start of the first derby of the tenth annual national air races.

For six eager young women pilots, seated in their planes at Long Beach, Cal., the report of the gun fired here and broadcast westward, was the signal which national air race officials predicted would start a rush of heavier than air craft to Chicago for the greatest concentration of civil aircraft in the history of flying.

Although competitions at Curtiss field do not begin until next Saturday, a great crowd had assembled there today when Maj. H. W. Schroeder, race contest director, stepped to the microphone, pistol in hand, and fired the starting shot.

During the week participants in five other derbies from the rims of the country will be sent hurtling Chicago-ward in a similar manner. Participants in two of the derbies, the southern men's competition from Brownsville, Tex., and the men's Atlantic race from Miami, Fla., are scheduled to arrive Saturday, the day on which actual competitions over Curtiss airport are to start.

All of the derbies end at Curtiss field during the nine days of races and other aerial competition to be held there. Prizes exceeding $100,000 are offered for winners of the derbies and of the 50 odd competitions over the airport. Derby competitors also will receive lap prizes.

TWO GANG SLAYINGS IN NEW YORK YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.— (AP)— Assassins' bullets took two lives in widely separated sections of New York today. Police hunting for the slayers were hampered by the inability or unwillingness of the dying men to identify their assailants.

Standing on a street corner in midtown Manhattan, Patrick Corozo, 30, was shot by two men who jumped out of an automobile.

Three bullets found their target in Luciano Cervasi, 42-year-old dockworker, as he sat eating his mid-day meal in his Brooklyn tenement. Neighbors heard a shot, saw a well-dressed stranger flee from the house and found Cervasio dying on the floor. He said he had no enemies and police were unable to connect him with any racket.

MAN'S DROWNING DUE TO STORM FORMER SANDBAR

HULL, Mass., Aug. 17.— (AP) — A sandbar, formed off the bathing beach at Nantasket by recent storms sent one man to his death today, and imperilled the lives of scores of bathers unable to swim. Life guards experienced the busiest day of the season and succeeded with the help of swimmers in saving the lives of all but Peter Tusky, 40, of Boston.

The unseen danger trapped several bathers who went into water up to their waists. A sudden drop, sending them into deep water, resulted in numerous calls for help. The large number of persons in the water in all probability saved others from drowning.

A girl whose name police did not know, had a narrow escape from drowning and nearly carried her rescuer under the surf when he went to her assistance. Samuel Simon, 29, heard the girl's cries and swam to her aid. She struggled with him and he had a difficult time in carrying her to shallow water where others assisted him. Simon collapsed after his exertion and was taken to Sturgis hospital.

Harry Demootian, 43, of Worcester, slipped into deep water and was rescued by Life Guard William Ferarra.

CONSPIRACY BY KING AND PREMIER OF EGYPT

LONDON, Aug. 17—(AP)—King Fuad of Egypt and Premier Sidky Pasha were said in an article contributed to the Daily Mail today to be planning a coup d'etat that would make Fuad an absolute monarch with a restricted parliament.

The king and the premier, according to the writer, have drafted a completely new constitution, which the king is to sign on Tuesday. The constitution will be operative immediately and entail the dissolution of the present parliament with its heavy Wafdist majority.

The plan is said to include drastic revision of the Egyptian electoral law, two-thirds of parliament would be chosen on a modified democratic principle, based on the view that universal suffrage is not suitable for a country almost wholly illiterate.

The other third would be chosen by the government. The number of deputies would be reduced from 240 to 100.

The writer in the Daily Mail says the British government, though it must be fully informed of the proposed changes, is ignoring them on the grounds that they do not concern Great Britain.

TRI-COUNTY W.C.T.U. SERVICE HELD AT THE WILLIMANTIC CAMPGROUND

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC CAMP GROUND, Aug. 17—Saturday revealed all kinds of weather for the opening day of the Camp meeting. Cloudy, stormy, and sunny weather prevailed in turn but fair weather finally prevailed for the evening.

The gold medal contest involved readings by Miss Madeline DeCicco of South Willington; and the Misses Jennie Worobey, Jennie Boska, Renee Haddad and Ernest Richards of New London All of these acquitted themselves with credit. The medal was awarded to Miss Jennie Werobey. The principal speaker was Mrs. Mary E. Welles, the state president, her topic being "The Signs of the Times." It was a stirring address in which she dealt with present conditions in Connecticut and exposed some of the methods being used to effect the repeal of the 18th amendment, adding words of encouragement for the forces who work for its restoration and honest enforcement. Rev. Myron E. Genter, of Norwich, president of the Camp Meeting association, was called upon for a brief address in which he said: "I believe that they will never, never, never again succeed in putting the bartender's apron on Uncle Sam," which won a thrilling responce from the audience.

Camp Meeting Opens.

The camp meeting proper was opened Saturday evening with the program which had been announced. Miss Pauline Mayo the reader was at her best and her presentation of "Pollyanna" will not be soon forgotten. Saulisbury, the soloist, did his part equally well, completely winning his audience as he sang Negro spirituals and other sacred and touching selections.

The sermon Sunday morning by Rev. Dr. L. O. Hartman, editor of Zion's Herald, Boston, was based on words found in 1st John 5:4 "And this is the victory which overcometh the world even our faith." He showed how faith had prevailed in the scientific world and urged that it must prevail in the moral world,—that faith which finds its source at the cross of Christ. The profound impression made by the sermon was continued as Justin Lawrie sang in sweet voice "Sometime We'll Understand" immediately following.

Justin Lawrie began his work as soloist and as song leader at the services on Sunday. He sang several solos and sang in a trio Sunday afternoon with the Rev. and Mrs. T. A. Mosely of Stafford Springs.

Rev. T. Arthur Moseley was the preacher Sunday afternoon. His sermon was based upon the words of Heb. 13:13, "Let us go forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach." The hymn "Lead On O King Eternal" was sung heartily by the choir and congregation as the service closed.

At the service Sunday evening important announcements were made and Dr. G. H. Birney gave the first in his series of evening sermons, his topic being "God's Harp With a Trillion Strings."

COLCHESTER

TOWN'S OLD HOME DAY ATTRACTS BIG CROWD

A large crowd was in attendance at Colchester's First Annual Old Home day celebration, Saturday, held under the auspices of Colchester grange. Lecturer Mrs. Robert S. Brown was in charge of arrangements, assisted by Worthy Master Elmer H. Foote, Mrs. Frank H. Browning, Mrs. W. O. Seyms, George B. Boson, William B. Gerhardt, Mrs. Edwin S. Munson, Mrs. Nellie J. Skinner, Mrs. H. Herbert Tompkins, Mrs. John M. Riley and Mrs. Clara M. Gillette. The program opened at 12 o'clock, with a parade of floats furnished by several of the merchants and private individuals and led by a five-piece local fife and drum corps. The Red Wing Feed and Lumber Co. float was voted the best looking in the parade, with Miss Doris Riley costumed as a beautiful ear of golden bantam corn, standing atop a massive mound of red and white colored bags of grain and builders' supplied, arranged cleverly on the gaily decorated truck. A millinery float prepared prepared by Mrs. C. H. Norton was also strikingly arranged, as well as floats prepared by Anthony Rutka, Berman and Falk, the Colchester Fire Co., Mrs. George B. Boson and Miss Ruth M. Murray.

From 12 to 2 o'clock in the afternoon the Sisters of the Grange, under direction of Mrs. R. S. Brown served a dinner of clam chowder, cold meats, potato and egg salads, cake, pie and ice cream to the large number gathered in the grange dining hall to renew acquaintances, there being many of the former residents here during the day.

At 3 o'clock a crowd gathered in Grange hall to listen to addresses by Louis G. Tolles of Southington, master of the State Grange and leader of the Connecticut Rural Road Improvement association, and Merton Bartlett, of Jewett City, county committeeman of the same association.

Both stressed the need of improving Connecticut's dirt roads and urged the formation of a local rural road improvement association. "There are over twelve thousand miles of highways in Connecticut," said Mr. Tolles, "and about ten thousand miles are still unimproved and in the mud every spring." He went on to say that five million dollars a year will pull Connecticut "out of the mud" and no increase in taxes will be needed to carry out the program. He suggested that the money being spent by the state in beautifying the sides of the main highways for the benefit of tourists, could be more profitably spent in repairing the dirt roads for the benefit of the farmers. In answer to questions Mr. Tolles stated that the road improvement association would be in favor of having the dirt road repairs made by the town, under the supervision of the state highway department, each town to receive a proportionate share of the state rural road fund.

County Committeeman Mr. Bartlett, mentioned the difficulties encountered in rural sections about the state when milk truck and school buses are unable to travel over the dirt roads during the spring months. He urged his listeners to get behind the movement and join the local association, which is to be organized during the next few weeks. Plans are being made to hold another public meeting here the latter part of August to get all the interested towns people together for the formation of a local road improvement association. There was a large number of local and out of town farmers in attendance at Saturday's gathering and as interest is growing daily, a still larger crowd is expected at the next meeting.

The Nathaniel Foote chapter house of Colonel Henry Champion chapter D. A. R., was kept open to the many local and out of town visitors Saturday, Old Home day. Miss Addie M. Wickwire and Mrs. Henry J. Bailey were hostesses and explained about the many articles of historic interest kept at the house. Among the visitors during the day were people from Philadelphia, Utica, Brooklyn, New York city, Providence, Boston, Fairfield, East Hadden, East Hampton, Hebron, Lebanon and Scotland, Conn.

Defeat Lebanon 5-1

An added feature of Old Home day was a ball game on the local park diamond between the Colchester town team and Lebanon town team, the local boys winning 5 to 1. Line-ups: Colchester—Broder, p; Fedus, c; Rathbun, 1b; Falbowski, 2b; Slavkin, ss; Minsk, 3b; McDonald, lf; Broder, cf, Woynam, rf. Lebanon — Thorpe, c; Williams, p; Hoxie, Barney, 1b; Thorpe, 2b; Norris, ss; Abel, 3b; McCall, cf; Burgess, lf; Lipton, rf. The Lebanon outfit got their lone run in the first inning when Norris made a two bagger, bringing in a run. Broder, the local twirler struck out thirteen men and only allowed 4 hits. Williams, the Lebanon pitcher made 4 strike-outs and after the third inning pitched good ball, but at times he had poor support. Slavkin, the local short stop, laid down a sacrifice hit along the first base line and brought in two runs in the second inning. Rathbun at first was the high spot of the game, when he made several sensational catches. McDonald and Broder were the heavy hitters for manager Zeke Falk's outfit, while Norris and Hoxie were the best for Lebanon. The Colchester boys made a fine showing in spite of the absence of two star players, Bob Fedus and Captain Gyome. Gyome, who usually covers second base so effectively was unable to be present due to illness. Thorpe, the Lebanon catcher, injured his finger during the game and required medical attention. This was the third game played with Lebanon so far this season, Lebanon having won two games. A return game is to be played in Lebanon the Saturday before Labor day. Manager Falk is negotiating with the Fitchville, Baltic and East Hampton teams for games here during the coming weeks. There will be games on the local diamond, Saturday, August 23rd and Labor day, September 1.

FIRE IN DISPLAY WINDOW IN CYR BLOCK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Aug. 17—A fire of undetermined origin broke out in one of the large show windows of Church Co. in the Cyr block at 8:10 tonight. An alarm from Box 24 called out the firemen, who had returned only a short time before from their annual outing at Old Killingly pond. Before the arrival of the firemen Dr. J. N. Perreault owner of the building, A. A. Bonneville, whose store is next to that of the Church Co. and Joseph Meunier, a resident in the block, broke through one of the doors of the Church Co. block and put out the fire with extinguishers.

The contents of the window are mostly clothing and shoes and were practically ruined. The loss, which had not been estimated tonight, is covered by insurance.

Irrigation of new farm land in India is expected to provide a new market for American farm machinery.

DANIELSON

COURTS HAVE BUSY SATURDAY WITH MANY LIQUOR CASES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Aug. 17.—There was court business here in Plainfield and in Putnam Saturday as the result of raids for intoxicants made Friday night by state officers from the Danielson barracks, assisted by other state officers from the barracks at Groton and at Stafford. Eleven raids was the total made, and there were seizures of beer and liquor.

At Killingly Center, the home of Herman Decoteau was raided and a gallon of moonshine and six 1-2 pints of some sort of alleged intoxicant seized, State Officer McKenzie, of the Groton barracks, assisted in that raid. Decoteau is charged with selling and keeping with intent to sell. His case is continued until Aug. 20.

Down at Wauregan another raid was made at the home of Ludovic Peloquin. That raid was carried out by State Officer Henry Mayo of Danielson and State Officer Clark of Stafford. Both Peloquin and his wife, Ida, were arrested. In the Plainfield town court Saturday Peloquin was fined $50 for keeping with intent to sell and $50 on an actual sale, the $50 for keeping with intent being remitted. Mrs. Peloquin was fined $25 and costs on a selling charge.

Another raid in Wauregan, at the home of Lawrence Campbell, was conducted by State Officer John Murphy of the Danielson barracks and State Officer Bush, of Groton. A quantity of beer was seized by the officers Saturday. In the Plainfield town court Campbell was fined $50 and costs for keeping with intent to sell, and an additional $50 on an actual sale. On the intent charge the fine was remitted. Campbell pleaded guilty to both counts. In order to allow him opportunity to obtain the money with which to pay his fine and costs the case was continued to Sept. 16.

The third raid in Wauregan was at the home of Thomas Langevin, and was conducted by State Officer James Carmody of Danielson and State Officer Smith of the Groton barracks Langevin also appeared in the Plainfield town court on Saturday and was fined $50 for keeping with intent to sell and $50 on an actual sale count, he having pleaded guilty to both charges. As in the other cases in that court the $50 fine for keeping with intent was remitted.

Fire Laddies Have Outing

Members of Danielson's fire department today attacked a "shore" dinner with the same gusto that marks their onslaughts on a threatening blaze. The occasion was their annual outing, held this year at Old Killingly pond. "King" George Jacques prepared the splendid dinner that was served them, and to which they did he-men's justice. The majority of the members did not get away from Danielson until well into the forenoon, and most of them were back here within a few hours.

There were no alarms for fire during their absence, a circumstance that added very considerably to their peace of mind and general well being.

Darkness in the degree that made it seem wise for many motorists to turn on the lights of their cars descended on Danielson during the noon hour Saturday as this territory came under the pall of one of the most severe thunderstorms of the year. Today, as a reminder of the near-deluge that came, there was barely a street hereabouts where puddles of water did not remain. The storm, after the rain of Friday, did much to relieve drought conditions. However, the rainfall of the past week is not nearly sufficient to replenish wells that have dried up or are drying up or to increase in any great degree the amount of water flowing through brooks all over this section of Windham county.

Stella Farber and Agnes Gabinski, Jewett City girls, were cut by flying glass, it is presumed, last evening, when the car in which they were riding with Philip Clark of Danielson collided with a machine operated by Eli Gatineau of Brooklyn. The accident happened on the West Side, just across the bridge over the Quinebaug river. Investigation of the affair by a state officer resulted in Clark being ordered to appear in court Monday, in Brooklyn, to answer to a charge of violating the rules of the road. The machines involved were considerably damaged.

At the week end State Officer H. Theodore Strand of the Danielson barracks checked up on a break at the William Young store in Oneco, where thieves got away with some money and merchandise during late Friday night or the early hours of Saturday morning. This break was another in the series of such affairs reported in various eastern Windham county towns during the past week.

Saturday, at Plainfield, State Officer George Martin of the Danielson barracks ordered two Norwich men to make appearance during the current week in the town court down there to answer to charges that they were operating trucks loaded in excess of the capacity allowed for the particular machines. The men are Armand Harnois and Octave J. Merrill. Local state officers regularly check on trucks in order to determine whether they are carrying in excess of maximum loads.

Harry Swarthout, a resident of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, paid a fine of $5 and costs in a justice's court presided over by Miss Laura Pike in Brooklyn Saturday for a violation of the rules of the road in operating his motor car. He was ordered into court by State Officer Lionel Poirier of the Danielson barracks. Swarthout was charged with failing to keep to the right of an intersection.

Danielson men, who spent a fortnight at Camp Devens, living the routine life of men in the army, returned here Saturday, pleased with their experience, glad of the training, but delighted to get home again. The local outfits were the Headquarters detachment, special troops, 43rd division, these troops under command of Major E. L. Darbie, and the Medical detachment. This year, Major Darbie was provost marshal at Devens, and in direct charge of all the policing work undertaken in the name of the division.

The death of Thomas T. Bates at Elmville reduces the number of Civil war veterans resident in Danielson to nine, all of them nearing or over 90 years of age.

Traffic remained at close to what is likely to be the season's peak in Danielson today, there being a steady flow of machines through the borough all day and late into the night.

Michael Dascoli, of the Riverview section, is one of the most successful home gardeners in Danielson this year, and is now getting a very considerable array of products from his garden.

Monday evening brings the interstate meeting of grangers, at the town hall. The committee in charge of the affair will be busy during the day completing the details of the arrangements.

About 400 pounds of fish were brought in here Saturday evening by seven men who are residents of this town, after a day on the water off Montauk Point, after going out of Noank. There were mostly sea bass in the catch.

It is regarded as likely that no more than three weeks given good weather, will be required to finish the concrete work on the new three-mile stretch of state highway between Wauregan and Danielson. In another week the entire length of the finished side will be open for travel.

Schools of the town of Killingly are to re-open for another year on September 2, the day after Labor day. The teaching organization is practically complete, the great majority of the teachers of last year in this town continuing their work.

In the absence today of Chief John McFarland, having one of his rare days off duty, Special Officer Hosea Greene was doing patrol duty in the business section.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wilbur and Mr. and Mrs. William M. Franklin motored from Danielson into the Holyoke section of Massachusetts today.

A considerable number of Danielson people, who have either been going to New London because their trips have taken them that way, or for the special purpose, have been looking Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V over, and they are agreed that it is a very pretty boat.

Town Clerk and Mrs. Frank T. Preston had as visitors today Mr. and Mrs. Earl Young, of Providence and Raymond A. Preston, of New York.

Miss Marie A. Cassavant of Springfield, was a visitor with friends in Danielson today.

Mrs. Victor Anderson has returned to her home on Broad street, after spending a fortnight at Pleasure Beach.

Rev. Harold L. Stratton, D. D., of the Pilgrim Congregational church at Worcester, was the preacher at this morning's service at the Westfield Congregational church.

Henry Lague was in Worcester today to visit with his father, Louis who is a patient at St. Vincent's hospital, where he recently underwent a serious surgical operation.

PUTNAM

PUTNAM CIVILIAN SOLDIERS RETURN FROM TOUR OF DUTY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, August 17—Members of the Headquarters Co. 43rd Div. Inf. C. N. G., returned to civil life yesterday, bronzed and hardened after two weeks of field duty at Camp Devens, the divisional cantonment. A troop train bearing the greater part of the Connecticut factors of the 43rd division arrived in Putnam on the tracks of the Norwich branch at about 3 o'clock. The soldiers lined up for an inspection at the platform and marched from the depot to the armory on Harris street, with full pack on their backs. They were a tired but happy lot of guardsmen as they detrained after the long ride home and lost but little time in getting to the armory for the check-out and dismissal.

Captain John J. McGarry was well pleased with the efficient manner in which the company performed its duties and in recognition of their work he complimented them before dismissal from the armory last night.

Corporal Arthur J. Pominville, camp correspondent for this paper, reported today that the night before departure was an eventful one, proving to be plenty noisy and exciting. A band assembling in the company street at 5 a. m., serenaded the sleeping soldiers out of their bunks. This was followed by the burning of straw emptied out of the bed sacks. After the departure of the troops, silence once more enfolded the old war time barracks.

The special troops bade Devens a fond farewell after packing several of the divisional athletic honors into its barracks bag. Among the outstanding, was the 43rd, divisional championship in baseball which was wrested from the crack 102nd infantry. Five members of the local company aided in gaining the victory. They were: Lieut. Francis Murphy, Privates Lefty Touchette, Izzy Weiss, Charley Murphy and Chubby Holgerson, all prominent in local baseball. In the deciding game Touchette banged out two three-base hits, while Weiss's pitching helped the special troops nine on to victory and the championship. On Friday, Major E. L. Darbie, commanding the special troops was presented with a large silver loving cup, emblematic of the championship.

Private Gordon "Flash" Winslow, former Putnam high school football and track ace, now attached to the 169th infantry, proved his mettle by winning the 100 yard dash in short time and placing first in several other events.

Only two unfortunate occurrences marred what otherwise would have been a perfect tour of duty. Private James Rowe was stricken and was forced to enter the Fort Banks hospital at Boston and Private Louis Touchette sustained a sprained arm when a horse, which he was leading aboard a freight car suddenly reared upwards and struck him with its hoofs.

Sergeant Henry Mayotte on arriving at the armory yesterday said he was much relieved after he had received his clearance papers from the camp stables where he directed the work during his stay.

Although Camp Devens did not afford the vacation aspect experienced by the headquarters company at Niantic in past years, the morale of the troops remained high during the entire stay, Captain McGarry commented. He said he was well pleased with the enthusiasm displayed by his men when they tackled their first real taste of war manoeuvering, and even though enjoying the mobilization period immensely, he said he was glad to be back, as were the soldiers.

LIQUOR CASES ARE CONTINUED TO THURSDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Aug. 17—Five men and one woman, answered to their names, as Prosecuting Attorney E. H. Johnson called the roll in the city court Saturday, on liquor violation charges. Asked if they had retained counsel, Attorney Irving H. Miron, addressed the court and stated that he would answer for the group when the cases go to trial next Thursday morning.

When asked whether or not his clients intended to submit without argument or fight the case Attorney Miron said that after conferring with the liquor sellers, "he had decided to go into detail". With this Judge Geissler ordered a continuance of the cases until Thursday morning.

A charge of operating under the influence of liquor was made against William Leclair of Providence street following the investigation of an accident in which his car figured at an early hour Saturday morning. Leclair failed to make the curve on the northerly end of Mechanic street near the residence of George Anas. A sudden application of the brakes caused the vehicle to skid and later capsize. Officer Joseph Page of the local police placed Leclair under arrest after a checkup of the accident. He appeared in court Saturday morning. At the request of his counsel, Attorney Miron, a continuance of the case until Thursday, was granted.

Henry A. Keech of Sabin street, who conducts a farm on the lower end of the River road reported to the police today that thieves entered his potato and cornfields some time during Saturday evening and Sunday morning and made away with several bushels of products from both fields.

Severe Electrical Storm

A severe electrical storm sweeping over the northern part of the state Saturday struck this city at noon time and did considerable damage to public property, electric light and telephone lines. A bolt of lightning which came during the height of the heaviest downpour of rain tore into the roof of the Israel Putnam school, retraced its course to strike the chimney and finally ploughed its way through the school's electrical system into the ground. Superintendent of Schools Leon N. Farrin was in the building at the time, but was not injured in the least. He said that all lights were thrown out as the bolt coursed its way through the circuit.

As usual the telephone company suffered the greatest amount of damage. Several lines were grounded, severing communication with a large number of stations. Wire Chief W. T. Jones of the Putnam district and his staff of test and repair men were immediately called and the task of restoring service was started at once. A report from the chief's office this afternoon said that the system had been practically restored to normal at six o'clock tonight.

The power lines of the Connecticut Light and Power company were the objectives of many of the lightning bolts which managed to connect and interrupt the flow of power several times. Gales which accompanied the heavy rains did some damage to growing crops.

Rev. U. O. Bellerose was host to the members of St. Mary's choral society at an outing which was held this afternoon at the summer camp at the parish Boy Scout organization in North Woodstock. A shore dinner, prepared by the camp chefs, was served. On Monday the children of the county home in Sawyer district will enjoy a day's outing at the camp. Rev. Father Bellerose has arranged a delightful programme which will be run off under his supervision. About 85 of the inmates of the home will be guests of the parish priest. Members of the county commission and officials of the institution are expected to attend.

Mrs. Edith Perry of Grove street and son Myron are spending this week at Crescent beach.

Miss Margaret Sherlock of the law offices of Torrey and Geissler, is spending a week's vacation with relatives in Providence.

After his car went out of control on the Woodstock Putnam road Saturday evening (on the Putnam side of the Harrisville bridge), striking an embankment which it hurdled to wrap itself around a tree below, James Spellman of Pomfret, emerged from the wreckage unscathed, only to be placed under arrest by State Officer R. V. Scranton of the Danielson barracks, on a charge of operating while under the influence of liquor. He will be arraigned in city court Monday morning to answer to charges preferred against him, poice said tonight. The car was reduced to a mass of wreckage which was later hauled to a local garage.

JEWETT CITY

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE OF WATER CARNIVAL PLANS

Local entries for the annual water carnival to be promoted by the Ashland club Friday evening next are coming in very favorably according to P. W. Chase and indications are that there will be more contestants this year than ever before. The program will start at 6:30.

Among the entries received are many of the best known local aquatic stars. A special relay race has been arranged between a quartet of local swimmers to be known as the Jewett City team and a team which will represent Ashland. Roland Guillett is captain of the Jewett City team and will swim with Stanley Grobofski, Andrew Misiorek and Cyril Liberty. This is a pretty fast combination but Hal Chase expects that Manager Ray W. Greene, Jr., of the Ashland Cotton company, whose swimming ability needs no comment will come out to help Ashland in this event. Other entries received include Stanley Golas who is entered for several events. A number of girls have also entered and among those received to date are Catherine Misiaszek, Sophie Burda, Helen Gaska, Catherine Kos, Helen Miss, Theresa Shorey, Anita Wolkowski, Catherine Bergman, Stella Shorey, Estelle Ethier and Lea Brochu. A number of other girls plan to enter whose entries have not been handed in yet. The big feature for the girls will be a departmental relay race with three teams already entered, the Warpers, the Winders and the Weave Shop.

For the juveniles some interesting events are planned and a large list of entries has been received which will be published later as will other entries for the grownups. The entries for a diving contest for the grownups have been so small that this event will be scratched from the list unless more entries are received shortly and the Ashland Diving Troupe will offer a special exhibition in its place.

A number of both boys and girls are entered for the junior diving. John Burda has been appointed clerk of the course and the judges and other officials will be named within a day or two.

Teams Failed To Appear.

The wonderful Plainfield ball team, which was to play the Fisk team Saturday, evidently got cold feet and failed to show up. Sunday, the redoubtable Cuban Giants of Waterbury were scheduled to play the A. C. C. They also flunked and did not put in an appearance. Peter Sekula, the local manager, is in no way to be blamed for the non-appearance of the gentlemen from Cuba. Money was refunded to the several hundreds who had purchased tickets. Mr. Sekula is arranging a game to be played next Sunday with the All-Rockville team.

Mrs. Joseph Boucher and son, Lionel E. Boucher, left Sunday for a motor trip to Canada. One of the places of interest which they will visit will be the Shrine of Saint Anne De Beaupre.

The boroughites will be afforded the last opportunity for some time to see one of the big steam shovels in operation. Today (Monday) the state road approach to the big bridge is to be made ready for the cement, by removing the old macadam.

W. A. Richardson, president of Jewett City Baseball league, is arranging for a grand chicken supper for the players on the four teams, to be given September 10th.

Misses Grace and Marian Jeffers are to spend a week's vacation at Quonochontaug Inn.

DEEP RIVER NEGRO AT NEW LONDON MAKES CHECKS TO SQUARE ACCOUNTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, August 17—John Siminton, colored, employed as a carpenter at Deep River, was arrested Saturday charged with uttering worthless checks, one of which was tendered in payment of a fine of $200 and added costs of $18.23, imposed in the police court. The other check was for $200 and was for payment of counsel for defending the negro. Siminton was released on his own recognizance after he had paid the court penalty and had paid his attorney $50, with a promise to make additional payments within a short time. Siminton was arrested a week ago charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, driving while his license is under suspension and evasion of responsibility. In court the first count was nolled, but a fine of $100 and costs was imposed on each of the other charges. He tendered his lawyer two checks, one for payment of the fines and the other for counsel fee. E. C. REED HANGS HIMSELF WITH BELT AT POLICE STATION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 17—Edward C. Reed, 20, residing at 340 Washington street, New Britain, and an optician, committed suicide at New London police headquarters late this afternoon by hanging. It is believed that Reed's death was the result of a broken neck rather than from strangulation.

Reed and William Dolan, 231 Beaver street, New Britain, were the occupants of an Oakland car on the New Haven turnpike about 3 o'clock at a time when State Police Officer John Smith was doing duty there. As the car, which was headed towards New London, approached, the officer observed that it was being driven in an irregular manner and mounting his motorcycle gave chase. The autoist was ordered to pull to the side of the highway and stop. When Reed did so, it was plain that the driver was intoxicated and Dolan was in an almost helpless state of intoxication. The two youths were arrested and taken to New London police headquarters where they were locked up in separate cells. About 4 o'clock Station House Keeper Frank Corcoran made his final rounds of the cell room before going off duty and Reed was on the cell cot. About five minutes later, Patrolman Cornelius Moriarty in making an inspection of the cell room, discovered Reed suspended by his belt from the top of the cell. The youth having fastened one end to the latticed iron work, buckeled the other about his neck and then leaped into space. Moriarty rushed up stairs to the office and securing the keys, unlocked the cell and cut the belt, allowing Reed's body to drop to the floor. City Physician George P. Cheney was summoned as was Chief of the Fire Department Thomas Shipman, the latter bringing a ulmoter and four assistants from fire headquarters. The pulmoter was put into operation, for an hour and a half, but without avail in restoring consciousness. It is believed that Reed was dead when Moriarty found him. Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman after viewing of the body, ordered its removal to an undertaking establishment. When arrested by Officer Smith, Reed said that he was enroute to Sound View, and if such was the case, the youth was driving away from that shore resort instead of being headed toward it.

WESTERLY ITALIANS HAVE GALA FEAST DAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 17—The observance of the Italian feast day, The Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary, in Pawcatuck by Westerly Italian-American citizens was ushered in by the salvo of three aerial bombs fired from the grounds off Stillman avenue at 8:00 a. m. Sunday. These bombs were followed by others during the day so there could be no one to mistake the occasion.

Special masses were said at 10:30 a. m. at St. Michael's Catholic church and largely attended. The church services were followed by a religious procession, preliminary services starting at 8:30 a. m., and the music was furnished by the 35-piece City band of Hartford, Prof. P. Puca, leader. The parade was mainly through the Italian sections of the town passing over the following streets: Liberty street, Stillman avenue, Canal street, Pleasant street, Pierce street, Dayton street, Pleasant street, Canal street and Stillman avenue to Garden street. The religious procession was continued at 11:30 a. m., the line of march headed by Motorcycle Officers Robert Kessel and Charles Button.

At 4:30 p. m., there was another street parade through the business section of the town with a return to the picnic grounds off Stillman avenue.

The City band of Hartford under the directorship of Prof. Puca, at 7:30 p. m., on the Stillman avenue grounds rendered the following program:

March Informia, "Ideale" P. Puca; overture, "Gilielna Cellini" G. Prossini; waltz, "Bruselles", L. Sangiair; grand fantasia, "Travita", G. Verdi; ballet, "Flight of the Birds" W. Rice; Arlesienne, 2nd, "Suite de Concert" G. Bizet; overture, "Jolly Robbers", F. Suppe; grand fantasia, "Ea Vedeva Allegro", F. Lihan.

The concert was followed at 10:15 p. m. by an elaborate and beautiful display of aerial and set piece fireworks, when there were several thousand spectators, many of whom came in hundreds of parked automobiles from surrounding cities and towns.

The committee on arrangements included Samuel Falise, chairman; Antonio Italiano, treasurer; Joseph A. Demarco, secretary; James Giagari, James Dimarco, Paul Loverdi, Joseph Sisco, Benes Dimagio, Nunrio, Italiano, James Catappo and Patsy Dimaggio.

WHALEN TELLS BOOTBLACK HE THINKS BEER WILL COME BACK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, Aug. 17—A celebrated, much heard-of and former high official Gothamite, slipped quietly through Westerly on Saturday afternoon, "unheralded and un-sung." It was none other than New York city's official greeter, Grover Whalen, former police commissioner, and his stop in Westerly was as much of a surprise to him as it was to the few Westerly people who knew of his presence here.

In the morning at New York he was "on his job" as the city's official "gladhander" to Sir Thomas Lipton, who was taken from the Leviathan by the city tug boat Macon which Greeter Whalen in police launch Gypsy caught up with and brought up the bay the would-be America's cup lifter and with the Fire Department band landed at the Battery. Then when Sir Lipton went to his hotel to rest Mr. Whalen boarded the Bay State express en route to be the week end guest of friends at Narragansett, R. I.

When Narragansett friends heard of Grover's early get-away from the "city" they telephoned a Westerly station official of the New Haven railroad to "page" the train and have him leave the train here, saying that an automobile was en route to take him to the east end of Washington county for his week-end stay.

At the station while waiting for his auto it fell to the proprietor of the station shoe-shining stand, Pasquale Salemano, to do the "Whalen act" for Westerly, while shoes were being polished. The conversation ran something like this:

Whalen: It's been an almost unbearably hot week in New York and then there was a lot of rain. How has it been here?

Salemano: It's been fairly comfortable here and we've had some rain.

Whalen: How's business conditions here and politics?

Salemano: It has been better and there will probably be some contests in politics.

Whalen: (with possibly a thought of moisture discussion and his dusty ride from New York) You know, I think with a change in politics, you will see beer come back. How long have you lived here?

Salemano: About 35 years, but I was born in New York where I used to shine shoes with a box over my back.

Whalen: Do you know who I am, I came from New York, too.

Salemano: No. But I've seen your picture in the newspapers and your face is very familiar.

Whalen: I'm Grover Whalen, former New York police commissioner.

At this point the transfer of further confidences was cut off by the arrival of a large automobile and the departure of Mr. Whalen.

Heavy Traffic Over Bridge

Sunday was another busy motor traffic day which the Pawcatuck river bridge at Broad street carries in the transferring of motor vehicles from Connecticut into Rhode Island.

At 12 o'clock noon, on Sunday, when Police Patrolman Frank E. Knight relieved Police Officer Robert Kessell for his noon hour the motor vehicle traffic east-bound was at its height. On the Pawcatuck or Connecticut side of the bridge autos extended up West Broad and Liberty streets as far as the eye could see in an apparently unending line. In furtherance of the agreement between Westerly Police Committeeman Archie Meikle and Pawcatuck Selectman Arthur F. Babcock, Officer Simeon Shortman on West Broad street patrol, came to the river bridge and asked Officer Knight "To let them through." The Westerly motor traffic lights were then held to speed up the through motor traffic.

For a period of five minutes autos crossed the Broad street bridge to the number of 115 or at the rate of 23 a minute, almost an auto every two seconds and they continued longer, without a let-up in the line until 140 machines had been counted and then there was a lap of only the length of the bridge to Dixon square.

W. Lloyd Seymour of Mechanic street, Lower Pawcatuck, was given a Stonington town court summons for next Tuesday on a charge of reckless operation of an automobile in Pawcatuck. His court summons followed an investigation of Pawcatuck Police Officer Simeon Shortman and Groton Barracks State Police Officer Frederick O. Johnson, following complaint. In their examination the officers found that Seymour in driving his auto up and down a Pawcatuck street had cut up a lawn and knocked down a section of a wall belonging to a neighbor.

MEETING DROUGHT EMERGENCY

While it is perfectly evident that the drought situation is one for which no one is responsible, it is quite evident that certain measures of relief are possible and it cannot fail to be highly gratifying that President Hoover has acted so promptly in calling the conference of governors and heads of organizations for the purpose of setting in motion such remedial action as is possible.

Rain will do much to help the situation. Man can do little in supplying that but he will be most happy in receiving it. To have the dry spell broken will accomplish much in a short time. It will modify the effect of the long, hot period and brighten the crop prospects over which much anxiety has been felt. It will remove certain of the fears but not all of the effects. It will not restore those crops which have been dried up. It will not revive those which have been killed or spoiled. It will not replace the losses of the agriculturalists in many sections.

Thus, even though the rain that has been received will do much to brighten future prospects, it will not overcome the damage done. There may be certain instances where the depletion of the crops will operate to command better prices and thus in a way accomplish the object of those who have been urging the planting of less acreage, but there are others where help of a different character bids fair to be needed, and it is in such instances that the organized efforts recommended at the conference with the governors will be helpful.

In urging state and county organizations for the purpose of getting at the real conditions, the president is desirous of dealing with facts and the placing of relief where it is actually needed. It is a matter which calls for early and effective action. It is recognized that an emergency exists and the president has lost no time in setting in motion the movement for the real facts. It is an effort which means that all those affected are going to be included in studying and relieving the situation. Even though heavy rains have fallen the accumulated effects of the drought remain to be dealt with.

GRADUALLY DISAPPEARING

"Turn to the left at the watering trough," was the advice given to travelers in a certain city when seeking road directions. It was perfectly clear and proved to be an excellent guide, but it called attention, among other things, to the fact that watering troughs are still in use in some cities.

A quarter of a century ago there would have been no surprise to have such a common spot used in pointing out the location of buildings or roads, but in many cities the watering trough of other days has disappeared. It has gone the way of those other things for which there is no use. It has been found to be in the way and unused where in other days it was one of the busy spots of a city.

The watering trough has gone because of the change in transportation methods. It was a necessity in the days when horses were relied upon for transportation purposes. Its use decreased as the auto replaced Dobbin and it is the experience of many cities that the horses are so few that the watering place is no longer required. This means the shutting off of the water and the early abandonment of the trough.

Along the country highways there will be seen an occasional watering trough for horses, but there is no well worn path to them. The water still flows and the barrel or stone trough overruns but the horses which once found such welcome refreshment there are few and far between. Even the drives down to brooks where horses were once watered are gradually disappearing with the growth of the brush and grass.

Still there are cities, small ones but nevertheless cities, where horses are rather conspicuous by their presence. They haven't been crowded out by the autos but the number by no means balances the motor vehicles. It is in such cities that the watering trough is still a fixture, still a conspicuous location in the highway, easy to detect and prominent enough to guide strangers as well as residents. But like the hack and the buggy it is evident that their number will decrease rather than increase.

THE MAKINGS OF A WAR

The fact that the Turkish minister to Persia has been recalled does not necessarily mean that those countries are going to be involved in war. It is action that may be preliminary to a test of strength between the countries or it may be a step that will bring about a solution of the strained relations.

The situation has developed from the action of the Kurds. They have been creating a bothersome situation for the Turks and in doing so have recognized that they could not expect to successfully combat Turkish opposition. Rather have they relied upon fleeing into Persian territory when pursued. Naturally Turkey has appealed to Persia to put a stop to such tactics, but Persia has not seen fit to tackle the Kurds and it has forbidden the Turks to cross the Persian border in their desire to squelch the disturbers.

It is because Turkey appears to be determined to follow and punish the Kurds that the situation takes on such a serious aspect. Added to this is the suspicion as to the part which soviet Russia is taking in this situation. It involves a region in which Russia may well be interested and it concerns countries with which it has been supposed to be friendly. Nevertheless the intimation that Russia is giving support to the Persian stand indicates the explanation for Persia's refusal to cooperate with Turgey in subduing the Kurds. If true, it shows why the weaker displays such defiance to the stronger nation. It is the belief of the British that the Russians are responsible for the whole difficulty by encouraging the Persians to kindle an uprising among the Kurds.

There are thus angles to the situation which furnish the preliminaries which may easily develop into an actual clash between the nations. Between themselves there would be little question as to the victor. Backed by other nations there is no telling what the outcome might be or how terrific it might become. It is a matter which should be adjusted before it goes any further and that would seem to be the logical solution if there were no outside interference.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON

The arrival of Sir Thomas Lipton, soon after that of the Shamrock V, whets the interest in his determination to win the cup for which he has so long struggled.

This is not the first visit famous yachtsman has made to this country. For him to send a challenger and remain at home would take away more than half the interest in the contest. The sportsmanship which has been displayed by the Shamrock's owner has been of such a high order as to arouse lasting enthusiasm in this country. He has proved that he was not only a good spender when it came to providing contenders for the cup but an equally good loser.

Thus it is that Sir Thomas can always bank upon a rousing welcome when he finds time to visit these shores. He manages to get a large amount of advertising out of his undertaking but he must be given credit for making the most of it and for stepping forward to provide a challenger when no other backer seems to be in the field. For years before the lapse in the international contests he stood sponsor for the yacht that was expected to lift the cup. It is through no fault of Sir Thomas that the America's cup has remained on this side of the Atlantic so many years. In fact there are those who would not shed any tears if the contest this year should prove to be the successful one for the challenger. There is a feeling that he deserves to be rewarded and that greater interest would be created in the international race if it were less one sided.

It is a contest nevertheless in which the better yacht and the better seamanship should win and all efforts will be bent in that direction, but nothing will add more interest to the contest than the happy personality and good fellowship of the veteran yachtsman. New York's welcome to him fully expresses the country's feeling toward him.

UP TO THE GOVERNOR

Only a short time ago the governor of New York was asked to call a special session of the New York legislature that an investigation of conditions in New York city might be authorized and set in motion. The governor ducked the petition and in the meantime there has been a grand jury probe conducted by a Tammany district attorney of the charge that a judgeship was bought and sold. The jury has dismissed the charge and as if he felt that the disclosures were such that they should not be permitted to be covered up in that manner the governor has now called for all the papers in the case.

What Governor Roosevelt will do is eagerly awaited in New York state. The opportunity is presented again for him to start a housecleaning in the metropolis. The conditions revealed in the courts there are such that he can ill afford to disregard them. It is recognized that he must of necessity give a bit of consideration to Tammany from a political standpoint and yet there exists an unpleasant situation if he permits that to tie his hands in getting to the bottom of a situation which ought not to exist even if Tammany is responsible for it.

The situation in New York is one for which the voters in that city may well recognize their responsibility. They refused to listen to the plea for a change and insisted upon retaining in office those who have come in for plenty of criticism ever since. Conditions are constantly being revealed which call for decidedly different conditions and certainly when confidence in its courts is shaken the situation is one which not only calls for but should get a thorough investigation. The governor ought not to be long in making up his mind to start his own investigation, to act through the legislature or to support Tammany.

365 BREAKFASTS

Peter King was tall and handsome. On his salary he could support a wife in comfort and luxury. He wanted to marry, for he was lonely. There were at least three girls of his acquaintance that he could marry and be happy with. Again and again Peter found himself poising on the brink of a proposal, then panic would seize him. Peter loathed breakfast and breakfast was the one meal where you had to face your wife. He cringed at the thought of it. Three hundred and sixty-five breakfasts, that multiplied by the number of years one stayed married! At this point Peter usually lost all desire for marriage.

One morning Peter, feeling very blue, set out early. He decided he would walk around, and when he had worked up an appetite for food he would drop in at some different place and eat.

He had walked for about an hour when he suddenly discovered that food, no matter where eaten, appealed to him strongly. He turned a corner and found himself confronted by a sign which read, "The Red Geranium tearoom." The door stood invitingly open. Within a girl in a sleeveless red linen smock was scribbling in a book. Peter stepped inside the door.

"Good morning!" he said. "Can you furnish me with a bite to eat?"

"Certainly." The girl smiled. She was dark-eyed and vivid. "Which will you have, sir—our Rushaway Breakfast, our Nifty Nibble or our Old-fashioned Snack?"

"I—I'll take the old-fashioned snack, please." said Peter.

There was old landscape paper on the walls, white-and-red ruffled curtains at the windows and pots of red geraniums on the window sills. Peter sat down at a small table. He stared at the tablecloth. It was red.

Quickly the girl returned bringing Peter's breakfast—steaming pancakes, sausage, a big red apple, maple sirup in a quaint red-and-white jug, cookies and coffee. She poured his coffee and left him to wait on other customers, who by this time had come in. Peter found himself eating with a relish he had not known for years.

Peter came again and again to the Red Geranium tearoom, going out of his way to do so. By the time he had eaten his eighth breakfast on the red-and-white tablecloth, or one just like it, for there seemed to be an unlimited supply of fresh ones, he had decided that dark-eyed Phyllis must be his. Think of years and years of such breakfasts! A diamond wedding? Peter trembled with rapture at the thought.

One evening Phyllis snatched an hour from her tearoom and went for a ride with Peter in the blue coupe, which he had bought just for such an occasion. They drove and drove, and finally they stopped the coupe in the park. Overhead the full moon hung like a huge, white balloon in a cloudless sky.

"Phyllis," sighed Peter, as he slipped his arm about her. "I love you! Love you! Love you!" And then he told her how lonely he was, of his prospects for advancement, and again how much he loved her. And after a long ecstatic interval, during which Peter found that a kiss was not as casual as past experience had taught him to believe, and Phyllis had somewhat recovered from the suddenness of the proposal, Peter got his answer.

"I don't know as I want to give up all my satisfied customers for one who might grumble at everything I cooked him to eat," she told Peter.

"I haven't grumbled yet, Phyllis," Peter said earnestly.

"But you haven't eaten 365 breakfasts with me yet. Thats' the real test, you know."

"I swear to you, Phyllis"—Peter's voice trembled with emotion—"that I could go on living with you and eating breakfast with you for fifty years!"

"Tomorrow morning Peter, we'll eat breakfast together," Phyllis, laughed shakily. "That will give me time to think it over."

The next morning Peter appeared early at the Red Geranium tearoom. His heart was beating wildly. Phyllis met him with cloudy face and tear-filled eyes.

"Oh, Peter," she sobbed. Her independence was all gone. "Something has gone wrong with my cook stove! I can't serve any breakfasts here this morning!"

"Good!" Peter patted her shoulder consolingly. "We'll put a notice in the window. I'll take a morning off and we'll go and look up a little apartment where we can eat all our breakfasts together in the future."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18—Although probably unaware of it, Assistant Secretary Jahncke of the navy department, was walking in the footsteps of the late John Weeks of Massachusetts, sometime secretary of the war, when he went on the air in July.

He presented an historical accounting of the navy's share in evolution of American industry.

Secretary Adams was too busy testing prospective America cup defenders against a renewed yachting invasion by "Tea Tom" Lipton to do much navy radioing at that time.

And what Jahncke had discovered in his search of the non-combatant side of naval history proved interesting.

He had found a clause in a naval appropriation bill of 1882 that he contended was the seed from which the American steel industry of today, "the barometer of our national business," sprang.

It said naval ships it provided for must be built of "steel of domestic manufacture." The navy which urged that stipulation, stood pat on it in making ship contracts. The first American steel mills were actually built "with the money from the naval ship contracts," he said.

When Weeks became war secretary in the Harding administration, disappointed in his hopes of the treasury job by Uncle Andy Mellon's decision to enter public life and sort of round out his career—he's still rounding it out a dozen years later—the Massachusetts veteran found out many things about Uncle Sam's military service.

Despite his years in house and senate, things kept cropping up all the time that he had never heard of. They all concerned the peaceful pursuits of the soldiers, not their battle activities.

So Weeks started a memorandum for his own information

It began "Do you know that"—and went on to chronicle all these secretarial discoveries. He kept it up for months, putting down each new slant on his department's ramifying contacts with the civil life of the nation.

It made a long, long list. Finally, Weeks worked it over into a speech which he delivered with great pride one day, and found himself forced to repeat in substance a lot of times thereafter.

Dwight Davis of Missouri, now governor general in the Philippines, succeeded Weeks as war secretary on the latter's retirement stricken with the illness that soon caused his death.

ia'-m:j5Jnb'tecETAOIN SHRDU U

And Davis, despite his brilliant war record at the front, seemed more impressed with the Weeks' "Do you know" speech than any other aspect of army affairs.

He caused it to be worked over time and again for his own speech-making uses.

Departmental speech writers waxed weary of it.

But it continued to have good army propaganda value, and Secretary Jahncke's piece about the navy is in the same class. It was very timely.

YOUR HEALTH

We'l Formed Mouths for all Children

By Landis H. Wirt, D. D. S.
South Bend, Indiana.

There has been a great deal of new knowledge added to our store in the last decade, about the close relation that mouth health bears to general health. The discovery of the X-ray and its use in revealing diseased areas beneath the surface was the starting point of a new era in Dentistry. It demonstrated that many teeth previously supposed to be in good condition, in reality were sources of infection which set up serious disease processes in remote parts of the body.

We have learned that it is often next to impossible to permanently patch up teeth that have become badly broken down, or such conditions as pyorrhea of the gums after they become badly broken down, or such conditions as pyorrhea of the gums after they become firmly established. Consequently more thought has been applied to problems of prevention and to the correction of faulty function.

Since all preventive efforts require that atention be given early, the natural result has ben that more and more interest has been aroused in the care of the teeth of children.

If we needed our teeth only for chewing purposes, we might view without alarm the evidence that we are becoming a toothless race from lack of use of them. For we can get along quite well in that respect without teeth, since everyone who has to do with the preparation of our food apparently tries to see how nearly they can come to the elimination of all need of the chewing process. But we have other important uses for our teeth which are not so readily met by substitutes.

The principal functions of the teeth of humans are the mastication of the food, the clear enunciation of words in speech, and to serve as part of the substructure upon which the features of the face are formed.

Any deviation upon correct position or inter-relation of any of them impairs their usefulness for any of these functions, and also makes it more difficult to preserve them in a healthy they have been attacked by dental disease.

The incorrect position or inter-relation above referred to is called malocclusion, meaning in simpler words, improper closing, crowding, or irregularity. They do not hit right.

These conditions usually have associated with them abnormal or insufficient development of the bony structures underlying the face, and the nose, and throat often are involved, leading to the development of respiratory troubles, sinus infections, defective hearing and many other physical and even some mental disturbances.

Since the disfigurement of the features and the lowered masticating efficiency are both serious handicaps to happiness, health and success all through life, their prevention, or their correction by means of orthodontic treatment may mean a great deal to every child or youth of the land.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Impy Knows When to Sit Still

For learning there is small excuse
If knowledge be not put to use.
—Old Mother Nature.

Striped Chipmunk had a son whose coat was all black. His name was Impy. From the tip of his tail to the tip of hi snose Impy was black. He couldn't have ben blacker. Now, this meant that Impy had to be smart. Had he been otherwise, he would not have lived long. You see, the rules of life for a chipmunk with a striped coat would not always be the right rules for one with a black coat. There were times and places where, if his father, Striped Chipmunk, sat perfectly still, there would be little danger of his being seen. That was because his striped coat would look so like the surroundings that only the very keenest eyes would ever notice.

But under the same conditions Impy would be noticed right away. That black coat wouldn't be at all like the surroundings. It would stand right out. On the other hand, there were times and places where Striped Chipmunk would be seen and Impy would not. So Impy had to learn these differences. Yes, sir, Impy had to learn these differences. He had to learn a whole set of rules just for himself. No one could teach them to him except experience. So if Impy hadn't been smart, he wouldn't have lived very long.

Impy soon found that he had to watch out most sharply when he was out in the full sun. No matter what his surroundings were in the full sun he could easily be seen. However, where there was a deep, dark shadow he was comparatively safe. That was because the shadow was black and he was black. So Impy took to looking for shadows. Then, too he liked the late afternoon, when black shadows began to creep across the old stone wall. His father, Striped Chipmunk, and his mother and brothers and sisters didn't like that time of day so well, and they all went to bed earlier than Impy. Sometimes he would stay out quite late, for he felt safer than at any other time of day; all because he could not so easily be seen.

One day Impy and Striped Chipmunk were running along the old stone wall with Striped Chipmunk in the lead. He was quite a little distance ahead. Suddenly he dived down between the stones of the old wall and disappeared. Impy knew instantly that Striped Chipmunk had seen an enemy of some sort; but just who that enemy was he didn't know, for he couldn't see the enemy himself. Now Impy might have also dodged down between the stones of the old wall, but he did nothing of the kind. In the first place, he wanted to find out what the danger was. If he dodged down into the old wall he prepared for it another time. If he dodged down into the old wall he wouldn't be able to see who the enemy was.

Now the sun was shining brightly. Just in front of Impy was a big stone. On one side was a heavy shadow. What do you think Impy did? In the twinkling of an eye he jumped into that shadow and stopped. Yes, sir, he stopped. There he sat perfectly still. Just back of him was an opening between the stones. That was a black opening, for it, too, was in the shadow. So everything around Impy was black, or at least almost black. He didn't move so much as a whisker. In a moment who should appear but Sharpshin the Hawk. Impy held his breath. He knew how swiftly Sharpshin could strike; he knew how keen were the eyes of Sharkshin. So Impy held his breath and kept perfectly still.

He didn't move as much as a whisker

Sharpshin didn't see him at all. In a moment he had passed and was on his way to hunt elsewhere. Then Impy kicked up his heels and frisked along the top of the old stone wall to join his father. He had known when to keep still and had kept still.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Opponents of Prohibition

Mr. Editor: It has been asserted by some proponents of prohibition that those who advocate the repeal of the 18th amendment are nullifiers—have no respect for law or its observance—are repudiating their obligations to help sustain the Constitution and are in fact trying to undermine it. They would deny to those opposed to the 18th amendment the same rights and privileges (under the Constitution) which they freely exercised in procuring its passage. The mere statement of such assertions establishes their unfairness. But we do not need to stop there. Since ours is a representative form of government, laws enacted by the elected representatives of the people are presumed to reflect the established customs, habit and sentiment of the people. If a mistake is made or a change in sentiment occurs and a law does not do this, an orderly method has been provided to amend, alter or repeal it at the polls through the elected representatives of the people. A free discussion, however, is necessary and has been provided for that the people may be informed of all the facts and thus be able to vote intelligently on the issues. Were this not so no law once enacted could be changed—neither could mistakes be corrected. Under such a status changes could only be made by revolution. Would they usher in the republic of death—that ruler who sits in state in the great shadowy places—mocking at the relics of human achievement and spreading dust and forgetfullness upon the monuments of a once glorious republic? Let us further examine these assertions in the light of the fundamental law of our land and see if they have any support there.

Amend. to U. S. Const. Art. 1, "Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and petition the government for a redress of grievances."

U. S. Const. Art 6. "No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States." Separation of church and state.

Const. of State of Conn. Art 1. "That the great and essential principles of free government may be recognized and established we declare: That all political power is inherent in the people and all free governments are founded on their authority, and instituted for their benefit; and that they have at all times an undeniable and indefeasable right to alter their form of government in such manner as they think expedient."

Conn. Const. Sec. 5. "Every citizen may freely speak, write and publish his sentiments on all subjects being responsible for the abuse of that liberty."

Conn. Const. Sec. 6. "No law shall ever be passed to curtail the liberty of speech or of the press."

It is therefore apparent that the foregoing assertions misrepresent both the law and the fact and need not be seriously considered. These principles have stood forth for the last 150 years like the sunlit peak of the Mattehorn—unmatched throughout the world and humanity has raised its head—gazed on them and renewed its hope. The issues involved in the 18th amendment transcend in importance any question of liquor. If we are to begin or follow the policy (initiated by the 18th amendment) of taking away the control of individual personal habits (that do not violate anyone else's rights) from an enlightened conscience within and vesting such control at Washington through constitutional amendments we are travelling the road of paternalism and just at the end of the road is socialism. They have it in Russia. Are Russians citizens or subjects. Does anyone want it here? Is the 18th amendment a more noble experiment than the American experiment of self government?

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

International Silver Company

The International Silver company, with general offices in Meriden, is probably the largest concern of its kind in the world. It was incorporated in 1898 and consolidated more than a dozen different plants, some of them established in the early forties and fifties by Rogers Brothers of Hartford and the Wilcoxes of Meriden. These firms, in turn, were the inheritors of the tradition and business of early britannia and pewter ware makers. The Meriden Britannia company, for instance, was formed in 1852 by the combination of a dozen or more small manufactories for convenience in marketing and efficiency in production. The Rogers brothers had experimented with galvanic electricity as a mode of planting base metal with silver, early in the forties, although it wasn't until 1847 that their process was successful from a practical, manufacturing viewpoint. Some time later, the Rogers brothers joined forces with the Wilcoxes and their associates of the Meriden Britannia company. The brand they originated, 1847 Rogers Bros., is probably the most widely known of any silverplate made.

Most of the plants have been greatly enlarged in recent years. At the present time, they manufacture everything in sterling silver ranging from the most elaborate and expensive pieces to those moderate in price; in silverplate, from supreme quality down through varying grades to medium priced wares for volume distribution; and a great variety of pewter which is, at this time, in great demand. International Silver company also stands pre-eminent in the making of ecclesiastical ware of solid gold or gold plate on sterling silver. Everything in silverware for household, hotel, club, railroad or institution use is produced in a great variety to satisfy any and all conditions.

Today, the company maintains plants in Meriden, Wallingford, Bridgeport, Waterbury, Norwich and Northampton, Massachusetts, seventeen in all. Among them the best known individual plant names are: Meriden Britannia company (Factory E), Wilcox Silver Plate company (Factory N), Barbour Silver company (Factory A), Wm. Rogers Mfg. company (Factory H), Simpson, Hall, Miller & Company (Factory L), Simpson Nickel company (Factory M), Watrous Mfg. company (Factory P), Holmes & Edwards Silver company (Factory C), Derby Silver company (Factory B) and Rogers & Brother (Factory J). Listless? Depressed?

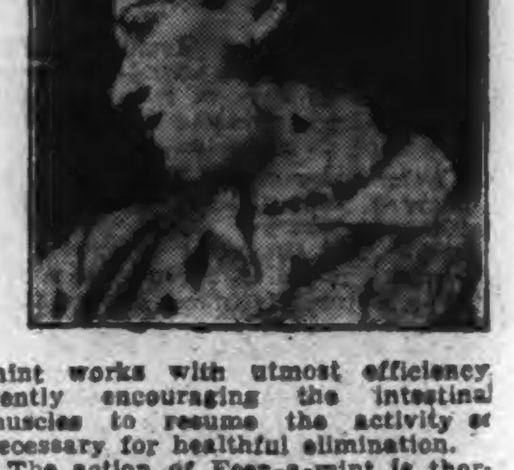
To correct constipation you must first know that the way you take a laxative is fully as important as the kind of laxative you take. All laxatives will vary in effectiveness unless every particle can be made to work. Feen-a-mint the original chewing gum laxative, was prepared to insure uniform "internal distribution," which is now known to be so important in the operation of a laxative.

Because you chew Feen-a-mint it is effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. For the effectiveness of a laxative is not so much dependent upon the quantity swallowed as upon the thoroughness of its distribution throughout the ailmentary tract.

While you chew this delicious bit of gum the tasteless laxative it contains is gradually released and mixed with the saliva. Thus it is carried to the intestinal tract smoothly, evenly, without shock to the system or the distressing after-effects so common with old-fashioned laxatives. Each particle of the laxative in Feen-a-mint works with utmost efficiency, gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to resume the activity so necessary for healthful elimination.



The action of Feen-a-mint is thorough, gentle, dependable. With the proper dosage, it is not necessary to increase the amount of Feen-a-mint you take nor to switch to another laxative for a change. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the health laxative. Ask for a package at any drug store.—Adv.

INQUEST INTO DOUBLE AXE SLAYING HELD HERE BY CORONER MCKAY

It is expected that within a day or two, Coroner Edward G. McKay of this city will render his finding in the double axe slaying at Mystic a week ago. Stanley S. Bogue, 34, is charged with the murder of Mrs. Eva Roberts and Ole Ostberg at Mrs. Roberts' home a week ago Saturday night. The victims were slain by an axe which it is said was wielded by Bogue in a jealous frenzy. The formal inquest into the double murder, started Friday at Groton by Coroner McKay, was continued Saturday at the coroner's office in this city. Eleven witnesses were examined Friday and five were examined Saturday.

Bogue, it is said, has admitted the double murder but maintained that he struck the couple with an axe when they came after him. It is understood that several witnesses gave testimony indicating that Bogue had planned the murder.

Bogue is at the Franklin street jail in New London and it was said at that institution that he has been a very docile prisoner and has given no trouble. However, he is being carefully guarded to prevent him from making a second attempt to cheat justice by taking his own life. He made the first attempt immediately following the dual slaying when he slashed his wrists with a razor blade. His wounds have practically healed.

HOLYOKE PREACHER DISCUSSES ANNIVERSARY OF PENTECOST

At the union service of the congregations of the United and Park Congregational churches at the former church Sunday morning, Rev. Edwin B. Robinson, D. D., of Holyoke, Mass., discussed those aspects of Pentecost, which should characterize all normal spiritual living. His text was Acts 19:2: "Have ye received the Holy Spirit?"

The Christian church throughout the world has observed to its immense profit the 1900 anniversary of Pentecost. There has been the mechanical gain of adding seven aggressive weeks after Easter, though why anyone should think of religion as a seasonal occupation is almost beyond understanding. To understand Pentecost we need insight rather than eyesight, we must get behind orientalism of description to the divine realities. We must find the real marvel, the actual wonder. We must seek in the spiritual realm for these wonders. We can have and desperately need greater Pentecosts and these should be the daily experiences of the Christian church. Great celebrations of greater anniversaries leave permanent gains built into the life of the world. We must bring the recent unusual celebration of Pentecost face to face with our present problems.

The feature of the athletic program was a baseball game between the Norwich and New London members, which resulted in a victory for the New London team by a score of 19 to 4. The contest was called by the officials at the end of the fifth inning, although it had been planned to play a double-header.

At noon a chowder was served and a shore dinner was partaken of at 5 o'clock. At the dinner, announcement was made by Oscar Silverman of Norwich, that a member, Charles Tingley of Norwich, who had been a patient at the W. W. Backus hospital for four weeks following an operation, has been discharged.

The arrangements for the event were in charge of George W. Mitchell of New London. Mr. Silverman of Norwich and Philip Sheridan of New London acted as arbiters in the baseball contest. The New London team was captained by L. Rogers of New London and the losing team by Milton Adnopoz of Norwich. In the baseball contest last year the Norwich men were victorious.

Norwich Produce Market

Potatoes were generally firm and on most markets showing price gains according to the Connecticut Market Bulletin. Evidently the latest crop estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture which predicted the total potato crop for the United States as 372 million bushels instead of last month's estimate of 398 million had a definite influence on the market. The Maine crop was reduced in the estimate by about 3 million bushels, which added to the importance of the prediction in the opinion of traders on local markets. More recently higher prices at shipping points were reported which would make replacement of stocks now in dealers hands even higher than prices they now charge.

The prediction for the total apple crop as of August first was increased over the figure for July first by almost 2 million barrels. Northeastern states, including New England, were given credit for some of this increase, but Washington, on the Pacific Coast was credited with most of the increase.

The prediction for peaches was little changed from last month and stood almost 47 million bushels compared with a final total last year of almost 46 million.

The local market was liberally supplied with most produce this morning and was generally more steady. Green and wax beans were scarce and prices considerably advanced. Sweet corn and tomatoes were continuing their low prices with good stock available. Native muskmelons made their first appearance on the market and can now be added to the daily menu.

NO TROUBLE AT ALL NOW

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Has Benefited This Woman

Millions today are eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—guaranteed to relieve both temporary and recurring constipation.

The cause of constipation is the lack of roughage in food. Add sufficient roughage and constipation disappears. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is nearly all roughage.

Here is a letter from Mrs. H. Gilbert, 107 E. Knight Ave., Collingswood, N. J., which will be interesting to many sufferers:

"I had a very serious operation in October and when I came from the hospital my main trouble was constipation. One day I said to the doctor, 'I am going to eat ALL-BRAN,' and since I started I have no trouble whatever. So you see I can't praise it enough and am always telling my friends what it did for me."

You will enjoy the nut-like flavor of this delicious, ready-to-eat cereal. It is rich in iron, and when eaten with milk or fruit juices, adds important vitamins to the diet.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is an essential in any reducing diet. It means every-day health to people all over the world. Your grocer has it in the red-and-green package. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Husband Had to Do Her Work

"When my baby was a month old, I took a heavy cold and after that I felt miserable. Could not lift anything. My husband had to help me with the housework. I was so weak I could not do a washing. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the Kittaning paper and I gave it a good trial. Before I had taken half a bottle, I found the difference. I do all my own work now and I have told others how much this medicine helped me."—Mrs. Alice Bassett, Cadogan, Pennsylvania.

CITY LEAGUE ENTERS HOME STRETCH WITH CLUBS CLOSELY BUNCHED

With the Polish Citizens still in the lead, the City league pack comes pounding down the home stretch of the 1930 chase this week. The competing clubs play five games in the next five days and next week wind up the season with two regularly scheduled games and a pair of postponements.

The week past was a rather dull one as far as upsets were concerned but it wouldn't be the least bit surprising to see a big change before the coming week is out. There are several big games billed, the two outstanding affairs being that between the Thermos and Ideals Tuesday and the Polish Citizens-Italian clubs on Friday. The week opens this evening with the Royals and Smoke Shop in action.

The schedule for the week is as follows:

Monday—Royal vs Smoke Shop.
Tuesday—Ideals vs Thermos.
Wednesday—Royals vs Italians.
Thursday—Smoke Shop vs Ideals.
Friday—Italians vs Polish.

With the end of the chase in sight the Cits hold a one game lead over the Thermos Bottlers. Should both clubs get through this week without an upset they go into the final week for a show-down. In the last week the Bottlers play off a tie with the Ideals and the Cits and Thermos come together in the last regularly scheduled game of the season.

The standing of the league to date is as follows:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Polish Citizens	9	3	.750
Thermos	8	4	.665
Royals	7	5	.581
Italians	7	6	.539
Ideals	3	8	.271
Smoke Shop	2	10	.167

PLAINFIELD RED STARS LOSE CLOSE GAME AT NEW LONDON

A single run coming in the second inning was enough to give the New London Colored Giants a pitching battle Sunday afternoon. Marriott and Hadley hooked up in a sweet pitching battle and except for a double by Lyons, Giants right fielder, which eventually accounted for the one run the game would have gone into extra innings. Marriott allowed but two hits while Hadley was touched for three.

GIANTS SPLIT WITH CARDS IN FREE-HITTING GAMES

ST. LOUIS, Aug 17—(AP)—The Giants and the Cardinals divided a double header here today, New York winning the first game 12 to 4 and St. Louis the night cap, 14 to 4.

The Giants hammered Wild Bill Hallahan from the mound in the sixth inning of the first game, but Burleigh Grimes hurled steadily in the after piece to give the Cardinals an even break. Bill Walker, who started the second game for the visitors lasted less than two innings.

The veteran spitballer, Clarence Mitchell, traded to the Giants by the Cardinals this year, was the winning pitcher in the first game.

VANCE TOO MUCH FOR PIRATES AND ROBINS WIN

BROOKLYN, Aug. 17—(AP)—Dazzy Vance completely baffled the Pirates here today as the Robins struggling to retain their grip on second place, celebrated a home stand of one day with a 5 to 0 victory over Pittsburgh. Vance fanned nine and allowed eight hits which were well scattered except in the sixth, when three singles failed to score for the Pirates.

Larry French, who opposed the veteran Vance, became two down in the first inning when Babe Herman followed Frederick's single with his 27th homer of the season, a towering smash over the right field wall. French pitched the complete game and allowed ten hits. The score:

CUBS WIN AS COLLARD WEAKENS IN EIGHTH

CHICAGO, Aug. 17—(AP)—Taking advantage of Collard's wildness in the eighth inning to score two runs, the Cubs defeated Philadelphia, 5 to 4, today and retained their two and one-half game leadership in the National league.

Guy Bush held the Phillies fairly well in hand, while Collard ruined his own cause in the eighth by walking two men and hitting another, which with a single and a fielder's choice, brought in the winning runs. Frank O'Doul got a homer into the right field bleachers in the first inning and Whitney got one in the ninth. Lester Bell, played first base in place of Captain Charlie Grimm, who was injured yesterday, got three singles and drove in a pair of runs. Around 35,000 spectators watched the contest. The score:

COOPER WINS $10,000 ST. PAUL OPEN WITH SCORE OF 280, EIGHT UNDER PAR

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 17—(AP)—"Lighthouse" Harry Cooper more than up-held his sobriquet today by galloping away with first prize money in the rich $10,000 St. Paul open golf championship.

The stout Chicago professional captured the title and a $2,500 pot of gold by compiling an amazing 72-hole total of 280 strokes, eight wallops under par. And three shots lower than the final total tallied by Tony Monero the great little shot maker from New York, who finished second and received $2,500.

Today's victory, clinched by two brilliant rounds of 68 and 70, erased the blow Cooper suffered in the 1930 national open at Minneapolis, when his hotel room was rifled of cash and clothes valued at $1,500.

Horton Smith always a big money winner, finished third today with a 285 total to win $1,500. Fourth came Walter Hagen, with a 286, and Gene Sarazen of New York and Charles Lacey, the astonishing Briton from Clementson, N. J., tied for fifth with 288 totals, even par for the long grind. Johnny Goodman of Omaha easily topped the amateurs in the field and tied with Tommy Armour of Detroit western open champ, with a 289 total.

Cooper, within striking distance of the lead from the first round shoved himself over the top on the homeward stretch of his morning round today. Tied for fourth place at the end of the first 36 holes yesterday, he started out on his third round with a 37, one over par for the initial nine holes. Coming back, he smacked a dizzy 31, which sky-rocketed him into the lead at the three quarter mark with a grand total of 210, one less than Manero's 54-hole total. On the blistering homeward nine, the greatest ever carded on the Keller course, he clicked off five birdies and made every one count by playing par even on the rest of them.

Instead of cracking when he heard that Manero had finished ahead of him with his 283 total, Cooper sailed right along and finished with another par-fracturing score, a 70, to clinch his triumph. Manero, leader at the halfway mark with a 139 total, shot par 72's on both his rounds today.

Horton Smith also shot a remarkable 68, on his final round to land third. The "Joplin Ghost" ended his third round seven strokes away from Cooper and if some of his frequent putts for birdies and a chance eagle had gone down, he might have thrown the championship fight into a deadlock. It was a typical Smith come-back.

Other prize winning totals:

TERRY INCREASES LEAD IN BIG SIX BY 4 POINTS

Baseball's big six spent a busy Sunday afternoon gathering hits and celebrated the occasion with a general rise in the batting averages. Chuck Klein was the only one who had a chance to participate in the slugging and failed, but his average did not fall below its previous .395 mark as he hit once in four tries. Al Simmons was kept out by the schedule. Babe Ruth likewise failed to gain but he connected for his 44th home run and one other hit in five times at bat to remain at .363.

Lou Gehrig registered the day's big gain with five hits; including his 34th homer, in seven trips to the plate. This carried his mark up five points to .388. Bill Terry registered a four point gain with five hits in eight times at bat, going to the new high level of .414. Babe Herman picked up one point with two hits in three times up.

SUTTER GAINS EASTERN GRASS COURT TITLE

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 17—(AP)—Clifford Sutter, youthful Tulane University tennis ace, today added the Eastern grass courts singles title to his intercollegiate championship, defeating Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., No. 10 of the national ranking list, in the finals at the Westchester Country club. The scores were 4-6, 8-6, 7-5, 4-6, 6-1.

The women's singles title went to Miss Marjorie Gladman of Santa Monica, after a brilliant display of tennis in which she defeated the sensation of the tournament, Baroness Giacomo Levi of Italy, 7-5, 4-6, 8-6. Miss Virginia Rice, Boston, and her Cincinnati partner, Miss Clara Zinke, annexed the women's doubles by turning back the bid of Miss Virginia Hilleary Philadelphia, and Miss Dorothy Andrus, Stamford, Conn., 6-3, 7-5.

Berkeley Bell, 1929 intercollegiate titleholder from Austin, Texas, and Eddie Jacobs, Baltimore, carried off the men's doubles with a straight set victory over the English team of H. G. N. Lee and S. J. Perry, 6-4, 6-1, 7-5.

THE HOTSY-TOTSY WINS NATIONAL BOAT SWEEPSTAKES

RED BANK, N. J., Aug. 17—(AP)—Just 24 hours after her brilliant victory in the gold cup, "The Hotsy-Totsy" took the water again today and won the National Sweepstakes Free-for-All in a stirring duel with the far western standard-bearer, The Californian.

By the narrow margin of a quarter of a minute in elapsed time, the smooth little speed boat from Long Island Sound defeated its Pacific Coast rival after each had won a heat and finished second in the other. Five other craft started in this 30-mile event but the race quickly settled down to a two-boat struggle. The Californian was forced out with rudder trouble in the early stages of yesterday's classic after turning in the fastest lap of the day.

JUNIOR LEAGUE ENTERS FINAL WEEK OF PLAY

The Junior League enters upon its last week tonight, when the Italian Young Men's club meets the Y. M. C. A.

Although favored to win, the Italians may find some unlooked for opposition in the "Y" who although they have not yet won a game in the league may come through with the unexpected tonight and give the Italian club a set-back. Probable batteries are Burelle or Wilk and Angelone for the Italians and Rusillo or Seneski and Stephano for the "Y." The game is scheduled for 6:30 p. m. sharp.

Following the game, there will be a meeting of the league's executive board at the Duwell club when several matters of importance will be discussed.

WHITE SOX GET EVEN BREAK WITH THE YANKS

NEW YORK, Aug. 17—(AP)—Red Barnes starred at bat and in the field today to give the Chicago White Sox an even break with the Yankees in a double bill. New York won the first game 8 to 7 in ten innings and Chicago took the second in five innings, 6 to 1. The game was called on account of darkness and rain.

Barnes drove in three runs in the second game on three hits, one a homer, and Watwood sent two more over. Red Faber allowed the Yankees only four hits.

The Yankees won the first game on Charley Ruffing's pinch single in the tenth, which sent Ruth home with the deciding run. Ruth had tied the count in the seventh by clouting his 44th home run. Henry Johnson relieved Pipgras in the seventh after the Yankees had blown a five run lead, and got credit for his fourth victory in nine days as a relief hurler. The score:

SHIELDS BEATS ROCKAFELLER IN STRAIGHT SETS

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 17—(AP)—Frank X. Shields, 20 year old New York tennis flash, seeded 12th in national ranking, in a straight set victory today deposed Perry Rockafellow, of New York, Maine state singles champion of four years standing. The scores were 6-2, 6-2, 6-3.

The women's singles title went to Elizabeth Hugus, hard hitting West Virginia champion, who was forced to three sets before she could subdue Margaret Cluett, of Troy, N. Y., 6-3, 5-7, 6-4.

The doubles crown in the women's matches was won easily by Marion Wing, of Squirrel Island and Rosamond Newton, of Brookline, Mass., over Evelyn Ames and Mrs. H. G. Beyer, of Portland, 6-2, 6-3.

The men's singles contest was an anti-climax to the smashing doubles final of yesterday in which Rockafellow paired with Edgar F. Dawson, defeated Wilmer Allison, ranking J. S. ace, and W. L. Caswell, of Harrison.

Rockafellow today did not have enough smoke in his attack to keep Shields on the defensive and the latter's powerful volleying resulted time and again in weak returns by the defending titleholder.

In contrast, the women's singles was a bristling duel, with Miss Cluett unable to find the range in her first set.

Germany showed a decline in births and an increase in deaths and marriages in 1929 over 1928.

STATISTICS FAIL TO SHOW ANY GAIN IN THE BUSINESS WORLD LAST WEEK

NEW YORK, Aug. 17—(AP)—With the drought off its neck, business once more turned its attention to laying plans for the autumn during the past week.

What effects the drought has had on public purchasing power still remains to be measured. While corn and pasturage have been seriously injured, and agricultural income consequently curtailed, rains have come in time to prevent any shortage of other than livestock feed crops, so consumers needs not expect the soaring grocery bills that seemed threatened.

Business statistics coming to hand during the past few days reflect operations of the past three weeks, and in the main show further slump, contrary to seasonal trends. If the drought, however, has been the principal depressant, many observers believe reports during the next few weeks, will show a change of trend.

Steel mill operations were estimated at mid-week at 52 per cent of theoretical capacity, a reduction of 2 per cent from the previous week.

Building contracts as reported for the early days of the month showed further contraction. Freight car loadings for the week ended August 2, showed a decline of only about 1,000 cars from the preceding week.

Commodity prices again were inclined to sag. The firmer tone in non-ferrous metals disappeared. Some copper was sold at 10 3-4 cents, the lowest in more than 20 years.

NORWICH MAN CLAIMS DAMAGES OF $25,000

Ellis W. Ruley of this city has started suit against Charles E. Lamb of this city, in business as H. F. and A. J. Dawley, claiming damages of $25,000. The plaintiff alleges that he was riding in a motor vehicle on Sept. 12, 1929, when it figured in a collision on the highway between Baltic and Occum with a large six ton truck owned by the Dawley company and operated by Frederick D. Vergason, Jr.

As a result of the collision, Ruley alleges that he was severely injured.

WOMAN SEEKS DIVORCE ON CRUELTY GROUNDS

Charging cruelty Frances E. (Baker) Fletcher of this city has started divorce proceedings against Joseph Fletcher also of this city. She asks custody of a three year old child. The couple married Sept. 4, 1924.

Not as Represented

Damages of $100 are asked by Frank and Bertha Piper of this city against Anthony and Sophia Ranchowski, husband and wife, both of this city, in a suit brought in justice court. Plaintiffs claim that on or about June 2, 1930, they purchased of the Ranczkowskies a house and lot, on Spring Garden avenue, and at the time of the purchase, the Ranckowskies represented the same to be in perfect condition and repair. When the Pipers took possession of the premises and turned on the water they found that the water pipes under the bathroom floor were leaking and as a result a floor and ceiling in the house were damaged by water to the extent of about $40 and the plaintiffs were obliged to expend $30 to repair the pipes.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Do you want a good hearty laugh? Then see and hear Jack Oakie in his latest wise-cracking, grin freshet, "The Sap From Syracuse," at Warner's Broadway theatre today or tomorrow. It's a rib-tickler from tick to tock. Audiences who saw the opening show last night rocked in their seats in gleeful riot as Oakie shot across crack after crack.

Oakie has never done anything better, for "The Sap From Syracuse," last season's comedy highlight of the Broadway stage, is a situation comedy just made to order for Oakie's talent. As the butt of every Syracuse joke, Oakie naively butts a few jokes himself, until through an unexpected legacy, he is enabled to gratify his one ambition, to see how the world on the other side of the "big pond" lives.

On the boat, he meets Ginger Rogers, the charming object of operations for a pair of crooks, and also a pair of sophisticated gold-diggers. Mistaken for a famous engineer supposed to be traveling incognito, Oakie finds himself the center of attraction, all of which is very confusing to the modest boy from the backwoods. Through a series of amusing misadventures Oakie wends his way to success in love, and the story ends in a convulsing climax, that proves the hero to be not so dumb as he looks.

Starts Suit for $100

Joseph K. Panek of this city, has brought suit in justice court against George and Agnes Ayer, husband and wife, of Preston seeking damages of $100. The suit is brought to collect rent alleged to be due the plaintiff.

POETRY

An Affirmation Of Faith

God lives!
He lives within Himself—Pure Being.
He lives within my soul—True Revelation.
He lives within the universe—Omnipotent Creation.
He lives in space and time—Progressive Evolution.
He lives in human life — Goodness, Beauty, Truth and Love in all Perfection.
He lives in man's ideals—Incarnation.
He lives in man's down-falling — Redemptive Suffering.
He lives in man's recovery—Atonement

God lives!
In all Reality—God lives.
Through all Illusion—God lives.
In all that is or is not—God lives.
In all that can be or cannot be — God lives.

Beyond all comprehension and beyond all dreams—God lives.
Within the simplest thought and within the humblest hope—God lives.
A little child can understand,
The greatest scholar may fail to realize,
That God lives!

Let us then, O little children, say "Our Father,"
And let us then, O scholars and men of erudition, say "Thou Absolute,"
And let us all, children and men of learning together, having said so much,
Keep the silence that is born of reverent awe in the Presence of God who lives!

—By Rev. Dwight Bradley, in Boston Transcript.

The Land Of Counterpane

When I was sick and lay a-bed,
I had two pillows at my head,
And all my toys beside me lay
To keep me happy all the day.

And sometimes for an hour or so
I watched my leaden soldiers go,
With different uniforms and drills,
Among the bed-clothes, through the hills;

And sometimes sent my ships in fleets
All up and down among the sheets;
Or brought my trees and houses out,
And planted cities all about.

I was the giant great and still
That sits upon the pillow-hill,
And sees before him, dale and plain,
The pleasant land of counterpane.

—Robert L. Stevenson (1850-1894.)

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

"Our Blushing Brides" is the spectacular romance which opened Sunday at the Palace theatre where it will be shown through Wednesday of this week. "Our Blushing Brides" combines three separate romances into one great production.

The story concerns the love affairs of three girls who work in the same department store, who live in the same place and who are entirely fed up with their alarm-clock, canned-food existence. Two of them throw all caution to the winds when they are made attractive offers by two wealthy and impetuous suitors.

The scenes shift rapidly between the two places—the crowded stores and the meager rooms which was the former home of the three friends and the palatial country estates and residential apartments to which two of them have been elevated.

The three girls who play the leading roles are: Joan Crawford, Anita Page and Dorothy Sebastian. They are supported by Robert Montgomery, Raymond Hackett and John Miljan, all favorites on the talking screen.

For the first time in her career, Joan Crawford was given instruction in dancing for her part in "Our Blushing Brides."

DESCENDANTS OF ACADIANS CALLED BACK TO GRAND PRE.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 17—(AP)—The Acadians, whose tragic exile was made famous in Longfellow's poem "Evangeline," are returning after 175 years to Grand Pre, the Nova Scotia village from which they were driven.

Louisiana descendants of the French villagers will make a pilgrimage to the land of their ancestors where officals will welcome them and present them with the key to Grand Pre on August 20.

In the Bayou Teche country here, where they settled, the exiled Acadians became known as "Cajans." They still speak the language of Acadia themselves, bear a striking resemblance to their forebears, and follow their religious customs. A copy of Longfellow's poem is a prized possession of every family.

To the Acadians, Evangeline actually lived and died on the Bayou Teche. Pilgrimages are made to the grave in St. Martinville, where tradition says she is buried, and to the Evangeline oak beside the Tech where the Acadians believe she sat and weaved narcissus while waiting vainly for her sweetheart, Gabriel, separated from her during the deportation.

Grand Pre was settled early in the 17th century by 120 French families, and its population numbered about 10,000, at the time when most of the population was carried away on British ships, never to return.

The Louisiana party will meet New England Acadians in Boston and all will go to Nova Scotia by boat. Dudley J. LeBlanc, member of the state public service commission and direct descendant of the LeBlancs who came here from Grand Pre in 1755, will lead the Louisiana party.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Better Clothes

We have grown accustomed to thinking of the child's environment as an important factor in his development.

Nurseries nowadays are carefully planned. Furniture and eating utensils have all been modified to meet his especial needs. Not so his clothing. That still is planned for th most part only with reference to warmtn and looks.

The more that is understood of children, the more positively is it known that even such details as the clothes they wear exercise a real influence on their development.

The clothing that a child wears affects very much his attitude toward play, the kind and degree of physical skills that he acquires and his habits of personal hygiene.

A child's clothing should above all else be comfortable. It should be loosely but nicely fitted so that there are no tight places that bind and inhibit free movement. It should be gay and attractive so that the child enjoys putting it on even though he forgets about it five minutes afterwards.

The buttons should be few, large and accessible. A child can hardly be expected to help himself if the skill required to do so is beyond the ability of his awkward hands and his not yet well-developed powers of coordination.

The child who has on clothes that are at once good looking and comfortable and that he can manage without asking help from anyone, enjoys a feeling of ease, and independence that exercises a good influence on his developing personality.

I have always thought that the regulation little boy's suit with its complicated plackets and its formidable array of buttons circling him about was enough to discourage any child from even trying to help himself.

CAPITAL SOCIETY'S PETS GET BEST SUMMER CARE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—(AP)—Dogs of capital society are vacationing at the seashore and mountains along with their folks or are 'boarding out' at fashionable kennels at Silver Springs, Maryland.

Washington is a great dog-lover town. From the white house on down nearly every family of prominence has one or more prized canine pets.

If hot weather develops ills the dogs are given the best of care. Veterinary bills for one family often run into several hundred dollars for the summer.

Sometimes the best skill is unavailing as with "King Tut," the president's favorite police dog, who died at the white house recently of old age and glaucoma.

Most of the capital dogs are given the best of possible care during the summer. Devoted owners, money and servants make their lives easy. They are taken for walks and swims. Their diet is carefully supervised.

Sandy, the grey wire-haired terrier of Lady Ronald Lindsay, is sojourning comfortably in the huge new British embassy where he has 97 rooms through which to patter.

Mrs. James J. Davis, wife of the secretary of labor, is noted for her kindness to dogs and the Davis children always have several for pets.

Mrs. Oscar Underwood keeps two dogs at her country home, Woodlawn, which was originally owned by George Washington.

Maria Medina, dark-haired daughter of the minister from Volivia, was often accompanied on her walks during the winter by a white Russia wolf hound.

Automobile associations and the state are fighting puncture vine in California.

MOURNING SHOULD BE CHOSEN WITH TASTE

It is not generally known that the custom of wearing mourning veils had its origin in the fact that hundreds of years ago many women, left widows, used to become members of some religious orders. They wore the black veil and the bit of white beneath the bonnet because it was the costume of the religious society they had joined. This was not the custom of young women who had no intention of remaining widows. Often, in fact a vow never to remarry went with the assuming of the veil. The veil was looked upon as a symbol of lifelong faithfulness to the one who had passed away.

The custom of wearing very elaborate and conspicuous mourning has done more than anything else to discredit mourning in the eyes of many women of good breeding and sensitive feelings.

Certain rules have been laid down regarding materials that should be selected for mourning. Velvet is usually taboo and so are satin and other fabrics with shiny surfaces. Patent leathed and polished jet are also regarded as unsuitable for mourning.

Many persons take considerable pride when they are in mourning in avoiding any of these prescribed materials. The fact remains, however, that it is quite possible for a person in mourning to observe all these rules and still show bad taste, while others who do not follow them so closely avoid ostentation and display and really show what amounts to far better breeding.

The person who puts on showy mourning always opens herself to criticism.

WHITE IS CHOSEN FOR YOUNGSTERS

For children of all ages—baby Janet of 3 and brother Bob of 14 or 15, who considers Janet a mere infant and himself a grown man—pure white is supremely smart this summer. For boys over 8 there are white duck longies to be worn with short-sleeved chukker shirts for sports and with regular white broadcloth shirts for informal dress-up wear. The proper belt is of white webbing and the shoes are of white buckskin or canvas.

For boys up to 12 there are white linen or duck shorts. Short white lisle socks that extend only to the ankles low white sneakers. With all-white lo wwhite sneakers. With all-white knickers, pure white, light-weight wool socks are the last word in midsummer smartness for the boy of the family, and to make the white ensemble complete there are white woolen berets that are as appropriate for the big boy as his little brother.

One pair of overalls, at least, should be included in the vacation wardrobe of every girl or boy who wears a bathing suit or sunsuit. At the shore these overalls are worn over the bathing suit to protect the legs from excessive burning and from the irritating effect of the sand. They are made quite full at the knees and ankles so that they are really as cool as nothing at all. In some of the shops you may buy sets of colorful overalls with sunshade hats to match

YOU CAN MAKE YOUR HOUSE SEEM COOL

You know, of course, that you can do wonders in making your house and yourself seem cool, even with the thermometer standing at 90.

And it is worth doing. For the influence not only on yourself but on those about you is quite wonderful.

To begin with, never were women's clothes better adapted to coolness than they are today. We can be clothed in the fashion, clothed modestly—though the fashion doesn't require that—and yet clothed with a minimum of garments that insures coolness.

A combination foundation garment of the step-in variety, a combination overgarment if stays are worn—and none, if you wish, when stays are discarded—an opaque-skirted frock, shoes and stockings of light weight—and there you are, cool and comfortable.

But even so, remember that the color of your frock makes an impression for or against coolness on others. White is always good. Thin black is cool looking. Gray and mauve are suggestive of coolness. There are cool shades of blue and green that also are most attractive for summer.

So much for yourself. Now your house. It is no longer the fashion to keep the windows closed so that the inner air may be cooler than the outer air. We have too much realization of the value of fresh air, all the time, even if it is warm air. But still if you keep awnings down and shades drawn against the scorching sun you will make the house seem cooler, even if the windows are themselves open. And if you can create a draught by opening doors and windows opposite each other, you will create a further appearance of coolness.

Things moving in the breeze always suggest coolness. A flower in a vase swaying in the moving air is cooler looking than a flower standing rigid and still in motionless air.

Fastidious cleanness and neatness make for a cool look. So do fresh sheets and table linen and towels. Even if at other times you cannot be lavish in the use of household linens, because of that ever-present dread of big laundry bills, use them generously when it is warm.

RULES TELL US HOW TO SET THE TABLE

The knife should be placed at the right of the plate with the sharp side of the blade turned in. The fork or forks should be placed at the left. The soup spoon should be laid beside the knife away from the plate, the base of the bowl toward the cloth; other spoons should be placed at the left. The butter knives should be placed on the bread and butter plates.

If many courses are served, it is not well to place enough silver for them all at the outset. This gives the places an overburdened appearance and additional silver may be distributed as the courses require. If small coffee is served at the end of dinner, it is customary to serve the small spoons at the side of the cups on passing it.

The water tumbler is placed just beyond the tip of the knife, the bread and butter plate just beyond the tip of the fork.

It is best to have individual open salt dishes. They should be freshly filled before each meal and should be accompanied with small silver or glass salt spoons. Pepper boxes need not be individual.

Perhaps the reason why salt shakers are not in such good form as open salt dishes is because with damp weather the salt hardens and makes it impossible to liberate it without first knocking them on the table, a practice which is certainly not to be tolerated.

It is not in good form to have the napkins folded in fancy shapes. At most they should have the top flap turned under in order to form a pocket for the dinner roll, which is often the only bread served at an elaborate dinner. It is extremely bad form to have the napkins arranged fanwise in the water goblets.

If the meat is carved on the table, it is customary to have the carving set brought in when the meat is brought in. If you begin dinner with soup or appetizer, do not have the carving knife and fork on the table.

WOMEN'S 7-MILE RAILWAY HAS NO FATAL ACCIDENTS

TALBOTTON, Ga., Aug. 17—(AP)—The Talbotton railroad is only seven miles long, but lays claim to an unusual distinction—a woman president.

She is Miss Virginia Persons, sister of the late Thomas H. Persons, whom she succeeded as the line's executive.

The railroad, which extends from Tabotton to Junction City, connecting with the Central of Georgia railroad, was built in 1885 as Talbotton's first rail connection. It claims the record of never having had a fatal accident.

SWEET STYLE NAMES BOW FLAPPERS OUT

PARIS, Aug. 17—(AP)—Paris dressmakers are giving sweet symbolic names to their winter dress models instead of the hard boiled titles they used to bestow when flappers were customers.

Since the feminine world went sweet and ladylike names like Jazz Baby, Dry Martini, Sugar Mama and Whisky are out of favor.

This winter's models bear names like Eros, Venus, Aurora, Melisande, Berceuse, Fatale and Hope, to quote a few.

CRYSTAL BEADS LOOK PLENTIFUL FOR WINTER

PARIS, Aug. 17—(AP)—Paris uses crystal beads quite generously in the trimming of winter evening dresses.

There are bead embroidered boleros with some of the new dinner dresses. Most beaded dresses stress the black and white note.

MRS. HOOVER GIVES CAMERA MEN HINTS

She operates a small movie camera and has made quite a study of picture making.

When she visited the president's school in the Blue Ridge mountains just before the summer commencement exercises she posed the children in the school room for the waiting camera men.

She laughingly told one of the men that his idea of a little girl reading a book was old fashioned and suggested a different arrangement.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Uncooked meat should not be salted as salt toughens it.

Fish are easily scaled by dipping them in and out of boiling water.

To keep lemons fresh place them in a jar of cold water and change the water every day.

Quarter and a half cup measures can be had now in the form of little scoops. They save much time and care.

After frosting cakes, dip a knife in hot water and smooth over the frosting. This will give a glassy effect.

If a dish browns too fast in the gas oven place a piece of asbestos paper on the grating above and it will check the heat.

Two tablespoons of cocoa are equivalent to one square of chocolate. Remember this when you wish to substitute cocoa for chocolate.

Line your garbage pail with fresh newspaper each morning and you will find that the unpleasant task of keeping it clean is mitigated.

Boiling liquids, fruits or jellies may be turned into glass jars without breaking the jars if the bowl of a spoon is pressed on the bottom while filling.

Purchase seldom used spices in small packages, as it is more economical since spices lose some of their flavor when exposed to the air.

Do not use hot water on varnished floor-boards. Use a cloth wrung out in lukewarm water. Each section should be rubbed with a dry cloth as it is washed.

Potatoes should be baked in a moderate oven. If the oven is too hot, they will burn and the skins become hard. If the oven is too slow, the potatoes will be soggy.

A substitute for a knob lost from a pot lid may be made by inserting a small corkscrew from the under side and screwing a clean cork on top.

If you are having trouble making boiled frosting, try boiling the sugar and water until it forms a soft ball in water, instead of till it spins a thread. Most people cook the sugar and water too long.

ICE CREAM

The purchase of an ice cream freezer is never regretted. Try freezing sweet punches, custards and creams of different flavors. Your family will welcome the novelty.

BEEF PATTIES

Humble chipped beef makes delicious patties if creamed with a few mushrooms or pimento to add a note of luxury.

BAKED SWEETS

Medium sized new beets, washed carefully and baked an hour in an even temperature, are delicious. No food value is lost and they present a new dish to most families.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Cold baths are good for steadying the nerves, and brisk walks in the fresh air.

Blisters caused by perspiration may be relieved by the application of spirits of camphor on a piece of cheesecloth.

Each one should have his own comb and brush and keep it thoroughly clean. The brush may be washed with soap and water. Dry in the sun if possible.

If the light is properly adjusted, there is no harm in reading in bed. The light should come over the left shoulder and be on a level with the top of the head. Ceiling lights and side lights removed some distance are what cause the trouble.

EYE REST

To rest your eyes, take your gaze from the books or papers in front of you and look far far into the distance. Even if the view from your window is only blank walls, think of green landscapes, of ships on the horizon at sea. Let your eyes "stretch" just as you stretch your muscles when you've been sitting in a cramped position. And before you get up in the morning, give your eyes a sort of "setting up" exercise—let them wander all over the room; to far corners, back again, round, and up and down.

ON THE SANDS

There is positively no danger of a blistered nose, no matter how hot the sun, if one is the proud possessor of a huge hat of natural colored straw with a band of twisted wool in many colors around the crown and hanging down the side.

REMEMBERING THE SICK

If you are vacationing away this summer, remember to send cards to the sick friends rather than the well. An interesting new scene may mean a lot in their day. Being remembered may mean more.

GLASS FLOWERS

Some of the sweetest boutonnieres for summer frocks and suits are little bunches of glass flowers. The leaves are made of kid. Others have buttons for flowers and kid leaves to go with them.

MONOGRAMMED HAT

There is no denying that monograms give a very special touch to one's blongings, particularly clothes, and so it is pleasant to know that it is now possible to have even one's hat monogrammed. A stunning Panama model can be ordered with a monogram upon the right side of the crown near the center front.

EVENING FROCKS

Quaint evening frocks of organdie have attained prestige among young women. These are in soft pastels such as pink, and also are shown in attractive prints.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Many of the season's smart shoes feature novelty oxfords or pumps that have a side fastening or a side ornamentation.

The loveliest wraps of all for summer evenings are made of ermine and are very short, reaching just below the hips in many instances.

The cotton mesh chukker shirt, in lacy weave, is the accepted favorite for sports wear with suits. Stockings come in the same weave for sports.

SHEER CHIC

Summer coats are worn for chic rather than warmth. New ones are apt to be made of semi-sheer crepes with georgette or crepe Elizabeth for their flaring short or three-quarter sleeves.

SILK ENSEMBLES

Summer ensembles of silk draw the attention from woolens and remnants of of spring things. The favorite type consits of a printed frock with a plain silk crepe wearable with other dresses.

PRINCESS SLIPS

New princess slips, in fine glove silk, have wrap around skirts below the hipline, which allow plenty of freedom for movement but still retain the slender line which women want.

EVENING WRAPS

One of the joys of the part little evening wrap is that it comes in such lovely but inexpensive fabrics as velveteen. It addds to its elegance in chiffon velvet, and it becomes a summer luxury when bordered in ermine.

PASTEL BACKGROUND

For hot summer days, nothing is cooler than a pirnted chiffon with a pastel background. The vogue for pink and black and pink and navy blue still obtains. A soft, greenish blue background, with brown figures makes a new and stunning cape frock for afternoons.

SPORTS SHORTS

Petticoats for sports are discarded for shorts worn beneath pleated tucks in frocks. Many new models come equipped with their matching shorts.

USEFUL JACKET

You can have three outfits this summer, using the same jacket. First, a printed frock with plain colored trim and the jacket of plain colored flat crepe. Then get a white flannel or white silk skirt, a printed blouse uses the coat's color, don the coat and you have the second. For the third, use a cotton frock, either checked gingham, piqued or linen and top it with the coat.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Probe the outlets of the laundry tubs with a long-handled button hook to remove lint.

If color of a garment is likely to run, wash and rinse it rapidly in cool water and dry it quickly.

When dyeing or tinting clothes at home be sure the dye is completely dissolved before putting in the material and use sufficient water to cover it. Stir continually and keep the material loose during the entire process.

To remove perspiration marks from silk, steep the stain in a solution of equal pats of methylated spirit and ammonia. After a few minutes, rinse in warm water, then repeat if necessary. When the stain is removed, wash well in the manner that is correct for the particular silk which you are cleaning.

CANDLEWAX STAINS

Candlewax stains on linen or clothing are usually paraffin colored with dye. To remove them first scrape off the paraffin with a dull knife and remove that which clings to the materoal by presing with a warm iron over blotting paper. If a grease stain remains use a solvent such as carbon tetrachloride or gasoline. If any dye remains sponge with wood alcohol.

FOR BETTER IRONING

When sprinkling tablecloths, an even dampness can be given the linen by dipping half the cloth into boiling water, wringing as dry as possible and folding the wet side onto the dry side. Roll and wrap in a towel for two or three hours.

SPRINKLING CLOTHES

For 10 cents it is possible to buy a perforated top to fit over an ordinary bottle that makes a magic sprinkler for clothes by distributing the water evenly.

WASHABLE GLOVES

The many displays of 12-button gloves in black, white and pastel shades of washable suede, are persuasive to wear with short-sleeved frocks for the street.

TEA FOR TWO

Tea for two or three or four, can be easily managed if one is the lucky possessor of a pewter tea ball that is made of two cone shaped pieces set together. When not in use it hangs from a chain attached to a standard attached to a small bowl, also conical in shape, which catches the drippings from the tea ball.

TO WATER A HANGING PLANT

To water a hanging plant place a small funnel in the center of the basket, leaving the cup part above the soil, but hidden by the foliage. Fill this funnel daily with water. The water will soak into the soil gradually and will not run through onto the floor.

GAY COVERS

Inexpensive iron or wicker chairs for the garden can be made very holiday-looking by the addition of little six-inch deep covers of cretonne that you can make or buy to slip over their backs.

SEWING BASKET

With the return of buttons, hooks and eyes and other "findings" in the realm of women's wear, an old-fashioned sewing basket comes in handy. Keep buttons tied together with thread, hooks and eyes in a small bottle, thread on a rod and needles put in their package.
